Roosevelt's Inaugural Fete May Last 3 Days

Plans to Include Celebrations of U. S. Unity; Col. Halsey May Be Chairman

Plans to expand the third inaugural of President Roosevelt into a three-day American unity and preparedness celebration are being considered by officials who arranged the previous inaugurations, it was learned here yesterday.

At the same time it was reported that Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary to the Senate, will be named chairman of the arrangements committee.

For the second time in American history the Chief Executive will be inducted into office on January 20. The traditional exercises were changed by the "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution from the former date of March 4.

Simplicity Is President's Wish

The inaugural itself and the accompanying parade would be staged with simplicity, in accordance with the President's wishes. It is proposed, however, to surround the ceremony with a program of patriotic events and demonstrations calculated to symbolize the spirit of national unity and defense.

Customarily, the inauguration has been a one-day affair, beginning in the morning with church rites, administering of the oaths of office to the Vice President and President (the latter by the Chief Justice), the inaugural address by the President, and a brief parade along Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenues.

However, owing to the attendance of numerous State Governors, officials and diplomats, a series of social functions is usually held in the ensuing few days.

Speed Believed Necessary

The late Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson was chairman of the inaugural commitee in 1932 and again in 1936. For the second inauguration he accepted appointment to the post on December 11, 1936.

Officials questioned yesterday as to what they know about plans for next January 20 said they are uninformed, but hastened to add that it would be well for the arrangements chairman and committee members to be named as soon as possible.

"For one thing, lumber is going up in price and becoming scarce, so the sooner commitments are made for grandstand materials the better," one of them said.

He reminded that construction of the inaugural platform and seats in front of the Capitol has already been started which is earlier than last time because of the growing lumber shortage.

Light Snow, Cold Is D. C. Forecast

Light snow and a falling mercury will probably end the rainfall that has drenched Washington the last three days, after the rain continues throughout this morning.

Saturday will be generally fair and colder, the forecaster said, as storm warnings went up south of Block Island to the Virginia Capes, and small craft were put on guard in Chesapeake Bay and along the coast as far south as Hatteras.

More than half an inch of rain fell here yesterday, boosting the fall for three days to 2 inches. Maximum temperature yesterday was 46 degrees at 1:30 p. m., only 3 points higher than the low mark at 2 a. m.

RAF Training Year Ahead, Bishop Says

AIR MARSHAL William A. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop arrive

Hitler Underestimated British, Canadian Air Marshal Asserts

Pilots for the Royal British Air Force are being turned out a year ahead of schedule and the explanation of the unexpected acceleration of the program is to be found in the collapse of France, William A. Bishop, air marshal of Canada, declared here yesterday.

"When France began to crumble we had to use our instructors as pilots and that upset our training program so that after France fell we had to reorganize," Air Marshal Bishop explained. "The result was that we created a better program and accelerated training. It was one of those blessings in disguise, a by-product of our effort to do everything we could to try to hold France together."

Winner Must Have Air Supremacy

It is the verdict of Bishop, a stocky, soft-voiced aviator whose machine guns in the last World War accounted for 72 German planes—"and two balloons"—that Hitler underestimated British air strength.

"The nation that wins this war must have air supremacy and that's where Hitler fell down," declared the marshal whose World War II job is to supply pilots for British bombers and fighters as one of the directors of the Canadian air training program. "Hitler was certain he was supreme in the air, but in quality of equipment and personnel the British air force, though badly outnumbered at the start of the war, is vastly superior."

"It will be a long, long war," he said, "a war of years. But I am entirely confident of our position, though I wouldn't for the moment want you to think we won't get some pretty hard knocks before it is over."

Marshal Bishop said his govern-

Chest Called A Safeguard To U.S. Peace

Donations Are Asked By Bishop Freeman To Lessen Danger of Internal Dissension

A pledge to the Community Chest is "a contribution toward continuing peace for the United States," the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, declared yesterday.

"Remember always that in caring for our own people," he told volunteer workers at the second report luncheon at the Willard Hotel, "we lessen the danger of internal dissatisfaction and dissention.

"When these conditions exist at home we are more vulnerable to enemies 3,000 miles away."

During the meeting, Chest Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., reported 16,729 pledges for approximately $352,600, or 17.6 per cent of the $2,000,000 goal.

He said there were 12,000 more pledges at this stage of the campaign last year than are now in hand and that a decrease in the amount of pledges also was apparent.

With the general chairman of the campaign, Chauncey G. Parker, jr., Willett asked volunteers to "put some urgency on your requests for increases of 50 cents or more over amounts pledged last year."

Recalling his association with the Chest for more than 12 years, Bishop Freeman asserted the "Chest has flourished not too much nor adequately."

Chest Draws Community Together

"In this city of 600,000 persons," he emphasized, "we should meet all of the $2,000,000 and more.

"In this, the banner city of America, we should all give according to our ability and we should evaluate our capacity to give in the light of the tense state of the world today."

Bishop Freeman called attention to the Chest as an endeavor which draws the community together and which should break down "every division, every bias, every prejudice."

At the head table were Paul D. Sleeper, E. K. Morris, William G. Illich, Judge Thomas M. Anderson, John F. Victory, Mrs. Frederick Altemus, Clarence A. Aspinwall, Coleman Jennings, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee, Alvin W. Hall, Col. Robert Fletcher, C. A. Robinson, and A. G. Neal. Msgr. E. J. Connelly, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church, gave the invocation.

Totals and goal percentages reported were Governmental unit, 12,800 pledges of $107,200 or 12.61 per cent; Group Solicitation unit, 2,462 pledges for $133,660 or 19.9 per cent; Metropolitan unit, 1,341 pledges for $110,722 or 25.51 per cent, and Capital unit, 127 pledges for $1,020 or 11.7 per cent.

10 Italian Planes Reported Downed; Indications Given Of Major Battle

Athens, Greece, Nov. 14.—The Greek army today began what appears to be a coordinated general advance and tonight along four-fifths of the Albanian front it was fighting in Italian territory.

Three localized Italian counterattacks were repulsed without slowing up the Greek forces, and it is clear that the initiative is now coming from this side.

[The Athens radio announced early today an Italian army corps of two divisions had been annihilated in the Pindus Mountains rather than the one division as previously reported, the Associated Press reported. Two divisions normally have a complement of 30,000 men.

[The radio announced that in addition to the Fascist division which penetrated Greek territory, another division which attempted to come to its aid was wiped out.]

["After having faced an enemy three times more numerous and beaten and dispersed the invaders," said the radio broadcast, "the Greek army has taken thousands of prisoners.

["Now it has taken the initiative and is advancing in all sectors."]

Major Battle Indicated

From the wording of tonight's communique it is indicated that a major battle is probably under way. There is mention of "great infantry, artillery and aircraft action" along the entire front. Already considerable new material has been captured, and the small Greek air force came into prominence as an offensive element for the first time while bombarding Argyrokastron and Koritza, destroying enemy planes on the ground and attacking moving phalanxes of troops.

It is claimed 15 Italian planes were brought down in battle and 10 more damaged, while only 1 Greek aircraft failed to return.

R.A.F. Raids Taranto Again, Blasts Berlin

Seven Big Fires Reported Started At Italian Base

By Raymond Daniell.

London, Nov. 14.—While military experts today weighed the results of the fleet air arm's attack on the Italian battle fleet at Taranto, news reached London today that the Royal Air Force had followed up with a series of telling blows on that and other Italian bases, while other squadrons bombed railroad yards and other objectives in Germany.

[An Associated Press dispatch from London said the British, in the renewed attack on Taranto, started at least seven big fires in a rain of high explosive and incendiary bombs.]

[The Associated Press reported from Berlin early today that wave after wave of British bombers renewed the attack on Berlin last night and early today and German sources said eight planes were shot down. Only 10 or 15 crossed the downtown area].

It was only a small force of raiders the British sent against Berlin early last night, but they did considerable damage, according to information released officially here. They started fires and caused explosions at the Schlesischer Railway Station, bombed a railway junction in the Potsdam region, and plastered the main line of tracks running through the Gruenwald freight yards. Some fires were reported started also at the Templehof railroad yards.

A power station at Cologne, the inland docks at Duisburg-Ruhrort, industrial plants at Dortmund and Dusseldorf, coke ovens at Lintfort and oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, Hanover and Leuna were all reported to have felt the destructive force of Britain's growing air force. In addition, airports at Haamstede, Deuzbruck and Luveck, the seaplane base at Norderney and the docks at Calais and Wilhelmshaven were bombed, and long-range guns fired across the Channel against Nazi bases on the French coast.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The visit to Berlin of Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff, Russian premier and foreign commissar, ended at 11 o'clock this morning, when the special train bearing the visitor and his retinue back to Moscow pulled out of Anhalter Station.

The communique summing up the activities of the last two days read tersely:

"During his presence in Berlin on November 13 and 13 of this year, the president of the council of People's Commissars and Foreign Commissar Molotoff held conversations with the Fuehrer and with Reich Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

"The exchange of views was conducted in an atmosphere of mutual trust which led to an agreement

Madrid's Minister Expected to Reach Momentous Terms With Axis Officials

By Hector Licudi.
International News Service Staff Writer

Madrid, Nov. 14. — Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish foreign minister, suddenly left Madrid tonight for German-occupied Paris, where, it was rumored, some momentous understanding may be concluded between Spain and the Reich.

Although official confirmation was lacking, the indications of a possible new Spanish-German agreement derived credence from the fact that Suner took with him Baron Torres, chief of protocol, and S. Tovar, national councillor.

Suner's trip was unexpected. It was only after he and his party were on their way to Paris by train that announcement of the journey was made.

Depart in Mystery

No official explanation of the party's departure was given.

In Madrid diplomatic circles the mysterious trip was linked to the development of the Italo-German diplomatic campaign since Hitler conferred with Gen. Franco on the French-Spanish frontier last month.

It was not known whether Franco had been invited to send Suner for a meeting with Hitler or other high German leaders, but it was obvious that the Spanish foreign minister, an outstanding friend of the Axis, would engage in some kind of negotiations at Paris.

New Order Believed Topic

The fact that his destination is the former French capital suggested that French diplomats might participate in the Paris talks and that efforts might be undertaken to settle the role of France, as well as that of Spain, in relation to the Axis' "new order."

Noteworthy was the fact that Suner's departure came only a few hours after Soviet Premier Molotoff had left Berlin following conferences with Hitler and Ribbentrop.

Senor Suner's visit follows a period of intense diplomatic activity, with almost daily conferences between the German and Italian Ambassadors on the one hand, and between Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Ambassador, and Alexander W. Weddell, the United States Ambassador, on the other.

$100,000,000 Asked For Food, Building; Officials Watching War Before Deciding

Reportedly confronted with a Spanish government request for a $100,000,000 loan to feed its hungry population and revive its largely stagnant economy, American officials last night were said to be watching closely political developments in Europe before acting on the request.

It appeared plain that political lineups, with the Axis powers energetically seeking Spain's collaboration in efforts to destroy Britain, would play an important part in consideration of any American help to Gen. Franco and his Madrid government.

Officials have expressed sympathy for the Spanish people, suffering from lack of adequate food on top of their privations throughout their long civil war, but this Government's position was held to have been expressed by Acting Secretary of State Welles at press conferences this week.

$13,000,000 Already Lent

Welles told reporters that the matter of sending food to Spain had been under consideration for some time, but that no plans had crystallized and that the question was primarily a Red Cross matter.

Spain already has a credit outstanding with the Export-Import Bank for $13,008,202, which was granted to enable the Madrid government to buy American cotton. The total commitment, approved July 28, 1939, was $13,350,000.

Washington officials would not discuss the matter of a loan to Spain last night, and the office of the commercial attache of the Spanish Embassy said nothing was known there of the request.

Affecting all decisions on how much outside assistance shall be permitted to reach Spain, in view of Britain's European blockade, is British insistence on safeguards against any of it reaching Germany or Italy.

Seriousness of the food situation was described in an article yesterday by Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press staff writer, who recently returned from Europe. He wrote:

"Even under severe rationing, there is a serious shortage in many daily necessities. When I passed through Spain recently I found supplies of many foodstuffs exhausted, many other articles extremely scarce and all prices excessive.

"No meat was on sale in Madrid, and I was told foreigners and wealthy Spaniards, able to afford the luxury, secured meat only by purchases from 'bootleggers' who smuggled in small supplies. Pota-

Auto Crash Kills G. W. U. Student, Injures Girl Friend

A George Washington University student was killed and his girl companion seriously hurt last night by an automobile as they crossed a street.

The heavy rain and slippery streets were also blamed for Washington area accidents in which 11 other persons were hurt, three seriously.

The dead man is Robert M. Lancaster, 21, of 130 Twelfth Street Northeast. He was the District's sixty-third traffic fatality of the year. Last year at this time 73 persons had been fatally injured on District streets.

His companion, Anna E. Watson, 21, of 1429 B Street Northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital suffering from head and internal injuries.

Lancaster, a second-year student at George Washington University Medical School, came here from Indian Head, Md., five years ago following graduation from Randolph-Macon Preparatory School.

Also severely injured were Mrs. Bertha Weiss, 39, of 4000 Kansas Avenue Northwest; Josephine Water, 7, of East Hyattsville, Md., and Mrs. Caroline M. Morgan, 66, of Baltimore.

Others hurt yesterday are Charles Edmonds, 7, of 1413 H Street Northeast; Oliver W. Dunbar, 23, and Orvill Gilliam, 27, soldiers stationed at Walter Reed Hospital; Mrs. Beatrice Maher, 41, 3718 Huntington Street Northwest; Ella Hedrick, 25, of 3708 Morrison Street Northwest; Melba W. 'Teuton Efficiency' Suggested byBlasts

The peculiar timing of three explosions which occurred within an hour Tuesday in as many explosive plants in this country might have suggested "Teutonic efficiency," Secretary of War Stimson declared yesterday.

He added, however, that there was no concrete evidence of sabotage in the blasts.

The Secretary made the comments at his press conference in discussion of the blast that damaged the plant of Trojan Powder Co. at Allentown, Pa., the only one of the three companies that was working on a Government defense contract. Other explosions, almost simultaneously, occurred at New Castle, Pa., and Woodbridge, Pa.

Stimson said that FBI agents still were following leads in connection with the Trojan explosion.

Italian Troops Flee Into Yugoslavia

Prefer Internment To Facing Greeks, Eye Witness Says

By Roy Brock
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 14.—Surprised and dismayed by the unexpected fury and cunning of the Greek raids' 'that seemed to come from everywhere," demoralized Italian officers and soldiers are straggling over the Yugoslav frontier in extraordinary numbers, according to an eyewitness report given to this correspondent by a military expert today.

During a 12-day inspection trip along the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier this man reported that he, alone, saw more than 600 Italians, stripped of their arms and started toward internment in central, south and northern Serbia, after having fled or been driven from Albania by Greek raiders.

Officers Tell of Rout

An Italian lieutenant colonel and a lieutenant were included in one unit which surrendered to Yugoslav frontier patrols, he said. The military observer reported he was permitted to talk to both officers, who gave details which throw light on more recent events in the Greco-Italian fighting.

The officers, he said, reported they had been pressed in a sector, which they refused to name for military reasons, by an incredibly rapid flanking movement headed by Greek guerillas, whos lashed, dynamited and ripped telephone and telegraph communications and killed motorcycle couriers assigned to liaison work.

Only under cover of darkness and mixed rain and snow were the officers and their small party of men able to pass the encirclement and flee into Yugoslavia, according to the account.

Didn't Expect a Fight

Regular soldiers talked much more freely, especially after they had received hot food from Yugoslav military kitchens. There was a Sicilian machine gunner who lighted a cigarette and said, "they seemed to come from everywhere—the Greeks.

"In the first place we didn't expect any real fighting. We had joked about it for days—how we'd make love to the gals in Athens."

"What about your Albanian Allies?" asked the observer.

"Ha!" said the machine gunner, "Allies? How many of them have you got over here? They ran like mice. If they did know their own country, we never got a chance to find out. Up there in that rain and snow we just got lost and the Greeks got around us and cut us down with rifles and machine guns."

Greeks Down 10 Italian Planes

flank. They have now withdrawn to considerably north of Kalamas, although in this sector they are still on Greek soil.

In the Presba region the Greeks occupied new heights north of Koritza, and that city is now partly surrounded by a series of positions shaped in the form of a half-moon.

On the Epirus front there appears to have been heavy air action, and it is reported ten Italian planes were brought down. The Athens radio announced that 15 Fascist planes were destroyed near Koritza. A dispatch from Yanina states that north of the Pindus range Greek troops continued to penetrate further into Albania, occupying one by one fortified positions which enable them to threaten enemy communication lines.

While Greek infantry and mountain artillery units pressed home their counterattack, the Royal Air Force continued to harass the Duce's army at its Albanian bases behind the line.

It is officially announced by R. A. F. headquarters here that new air attacks on Valona and against the important base of Argyrokastron met with success yesterday and that no planes were lost. According to the British communique, the only landing jetty in Valona has now been destroyed and the entire dock area was bombed.

This hampers Italian efforts to bring up material and reinforcements. Valona has been used as perhaps the major point of debarkation during the past two weeks, but now with its pier in ruins, storage facilities destroyed and its air field pitted with craters, it would seem it has lost much of its value.

Italians Hate War, Prisoners Say in Greece

Even the Mules Lost Foot in Mountains, Officer Declares

By Ralph W. Barnes
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

From a Prison Camp in Greece, Nov. 14.—From some of the 500-odd Italian prisoners confined within the barbed wire of this compound I heard today the story of the first stages of Premier Mussolini's invasion of Greece, the great Fascist debacle.

It is a story of the way in which the mountains are serving as allies of the Greeks in their struggle with an enemy who by every evidence has no real heart in the battle.

For the most part these conscript prisoners in their drab green uniforms were a forlorn-looking lot. Some of them had reached the camp as recently as 6 a. m. this morning. Additional contingents were expected at short intervals.

Almost all of those in the camp with whom I talked made it clear by implication that they had little interest in dying to help build the expanded empire for which Il Duce has gone to war alongside Germany. That seemed to go for about all of them except the handful of fliers—officers and noncommissioned officers—who were shot down in the bombing raids over the Salonica area. They held their chins up. They gave the impression of being prepared to fight again if they were to have their liberty.

Even Mules Lost Footing

An example of the manner in which during the past few days the rugged Greek mountain troops have surrounded and cut to pieces isolated Italian units hopelessly entangled in mountain defiles is provided in the experiences related by a captain in an Alpine regiment who, when captured, was bringing forward a train of pack mules. He was a regular army officer and had been quartered with his unit in Albania for more than a year. With iron-gray hair and an intelligent face, he was quiet spoken for an Italian—few gesticulations.

"From the Koritza sector," he said, "we moved forward into the mountains, passing along deep defiles. The trails were so narrow that even the mules lost their footing. Nearly 50 of them in our unit slipped and crashed down over the edge at one time or another in the course of the advance. That was the end of them—and their packs, too, in so far as we were concerned.

"We were at a point part way up the ravine when the Greeks first made their appearance. That was just a short distance on the Greek side of the frontier. Suddenly there was a whizz of bullets close by and then from the mountainside the rattle of machine guns echoing and reechoing.

Retreat Impossible

"Taking what cover we could, we tried to reply. Unfortunately for us the Greeks had chosen their positions well. They had left us no visible targets. They had an immense advantage knowing the mountains well in which they were fighting.

"Soon more machine guns opened up, even mountain artillery guns were brought into action against us. It was impossible for us to attempt to advance further. It was quite as impossible to retreat. Suffering heavy casualties, we defended ourselves as best we could from 9 a. m. until sundown. It was hopeless, so, in the end, we surrendered. At that time we had about 150 pack mules left."

Taranto Story Is 'Fantastic,' Rome Claims

Churchill's Report Assailed, but New Raid Is Admitted

By Camille M. Cianfarra.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 14.—Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Commons yesterday on the British raid on Taranto is termed "largely fantastic" in a Stefani communique today.

Italy, the agency states, does not find it necessary to give "quick reply to such tendentious alterations of the truth as those contained in Mr. Churchill's speech and statements by the first lord of the admiralty.

"In the next few days," it continues, "there will be an opportunity to give detailed and definitive explanation not only of the Taranto episode, but also of the general situation of naval and aerial warfare in the Mediterranean."

The British raided Taranto again today, the war communique says, killing three people and wounding 12. Two of the killed and nine of the wounded are members of the fighting forces. Private dwellings were damaged.

Another raid was carried out over Crotone Harbor in Calabria, but all the bombs fell in the sea, it is asserted. Two British planes were probably shot down, the communique says.

The Greeks, it appeared from the communique, continued attacks in the Korchia sector yesterday but it declared that they were repulsed by the aid of the air force, which strafed troops in the Lake Presba zone. In the Epirus area the Italians reported some successful "local actions" around Kallbaki.

The British, in turn, raided Valona, killing 6 and wounding 30, as well as Durazzo, where no casualties were recorded, it was stated.

In the eastern Mediterranean, two British ships were hit by aerial torpedoes, the communique says, one of them having been sunk. Another aerial formation, it adds, struck at Alexandria Harbor, scoring hits on a cruiser.

Nazis Bomb Two Hospitals, Lose 19 Planes

By James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), Nov. 15.—Amid the monotonous accompaniment of sporadic bomb explosions and intermittent bursts of antiaircraft fire, Londoners rested comfortably again this morning and last night following a day in which German aerial attacks on this country cost the Nazis 19 planes.

According to the air ministry, the British lost only two machines, the pilots of both of hich bailed out safely.

[Air raiders concentrated on the Midlands for hours and gave that rich industrial zone one of its worst batterings of the war early today, the United Press reported.

[Unprecedentedly great numbers of night raiders crossed the coast, this dispatch continued, and most of them appeared to have gone to the Midlands with contingents fanning out to scattered sections all across the country.]

Officials hailed the results of yesterday's air battles as the second signal success by the Royal Air Force this week.

London had two daylight alarms yesterday, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon. As usual the "wailing winnies" intoned a doleful chorus after darkness fell on London last evening, but the aerial bombardment and antiaircraft reply was not nearly so heavy as on previous nights.

Shortly after the alarm went up in this city, all of whose residents are now hardened to air raids, a high explosive bomb struck a certain hospital, scoring a direct hit on one wing in which chronic patients were confined. A number of the sick were killed. Shortly afterward another hospital was also bombed, but the number of casualties was not given.

Also hit was a suburban department store in which were hundreds of shoppers. No air raid warning had been heard, and none of the shoppers was able to take cover in time.

Another bomb wrecked nearby houses, trapping the occupants in the debris.

The Gallup Poll

British Public Evenly Divided On Question Of Bombing German Civilians In Retaliation

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 14.—Although British citizens have been herded nightly into air raid shelters by the crash of bombs and the "banshee howling" of the sirens, a substantial number are still opposed to retaliation against the Nazis by bombing the civilian population of Germany.

When the persistent Nazi raids on English towns had been going on indiscriminately for over a month, the British Institute of Public Opinion conducted a survey to determine how much desire for revenge existed in England. Its survey asked voters the question:

"In view of the indiscriminate bombing of this country, would you approve or disapprove if the R. A. F. adopted a similar policy of bombing the civilian population of Germany?"

The vote was as follows:

Approve	46%
Disapprove	46
Undecided	8

In the same survey, the British Institute, an affiliate of the American Institute, conducted one of its periodic check-ups on the popularity of the British prime minister.

It found that support of Winston Churchill is overwhelming—the highest ever recorded in any poll on the popularity of a man in public office.

The survey on Churchill put this question to the voters: "In general do you approve or disapprove of Mr. Churchill as prime minister?"

The results today, as compared to a similar poll in August follow:

	Today	August
Approve	89%	88%
Disapprove	6	7
Undecided	5	5

The highest vote of public confidence ever given to Neville Chamberlain in the British Institute surveys was 71 per cent in December, 1939. In the United States, in five years of polling, the American Institute has never found President Roosevelt's popularity higher than 69 per cent (February, 1934.)

The British Institute's staff of interviewers, now numbering about 200, have continued their work without interruption through the worst weeks of the air blitzkrieg. The staff is composed mostly of women interviewers, and men beyond the draft age.

The interviewers have reported many curious incidents in the course of their work since the air blitzkrieg began. One witnessed the complete demolition of a private residence in which the owner was buried under a landslide of bricks. When the owner was dug out, unharmed, his only comment was:

"And now what am I going to do with the bloody ton of coal delivered this morning!"

Knox Declares U. S. Won't Be Appeaser

England Would Hail Military Help, Says British Commander

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 14.—Commander Thomas D. Galbraith, member of the British purchasing commission, declared tonight that it would be a "glorious and happy day" in British history if this country should decide to take up arms against "the totalitarian nations."

He spoke a few hours after Navy Secretary Knox told an earlier session of the New England Conference this country would not "appease anyone on earth," and added, "we are going to give Great Britain every possible degree of aid short of leaving ourselves defenseless."

Knox called for "unparalled unity" in building national defense and in preventing "organized treason" from within. He declared that "we have the strongest fleet today that floats the seven seas. It is not only stronger, but thank God it's ready."

Galbraith told a Rhode Island session of the New England Conference in his prepared address tonight that it "isn't true" that "any nation engaged in such a struggle as that in which we are engaged today would not welcome the active assistance of a great and friendly nation."

Asserting that "we don't expect America to come into the war to pull British chestnuts out of the fire," Galbraith added:

"But should America ever decide that the totalitarian nations threaten her trade, her standard of living, the liberty of her people, her independence, the American way of life, and that it is necessary for her to take up arms in the defense of these things, then that indeed would be a glorious and happy day in the annals of British history."

He described Britain as "the eastern bulwark of democracy . . . surely no harm can come from Europe."

Knox Foresees Sacrifices

"But if, by some strange turn of fate, that eastern guard, the British fleet, should be destroyed," he added, "then it would seem to us that in a world of Naziism you would be unable to maintain that way of life which with the British Empire you almost alone today still follow."

Knox advised the delegates as businessmen that the next five years would "test our endurance as free men in a free country." It would be necessary, he said, "to make sacrifices such as we have never been asked to make before," and added that "profits necessarily will have to become secondary and national security first."

Referring at one point to the "integrity of the British blockade of Europe," the Navy Secretary declared that "we mustn't be deterred from recognizing its importance by the ghastly conditions that we read about in Europe this winter, black starvation for helpless innocent peoples, the victims of a thoroughly unwarranted war conducted by a fanatic greedy for world domination."

Sikorsky Doubts Danger

Igor Sikorsky, authority on aviation, said there was no cause for "panic" in the prospect of an aerial bombardment of this Nation despite "amazing developments in aeronautics."

"There is no substantial number of aircraft available anywhere in the world that could attack the United States from across the ocean," he said.

Development of 100-ton and 100-passenger transoceanic flying boats "in the near future" and three and four-day round-trip cruises from New England to the North Pole or the Amazon River jungle "before 1950" were prophesied by Sikorsky.

He maintained that the near-future would bring luxury and regularity to transoceanic service in "super-clipper" ships with "some 50 staterooms, a large dining salon that will be used for dancing . . . and in general most of the accommodations and luxury items found on board a first class yacht."

Ralph E. Flanders, newly elected president of the council, declared it "would be a national scandal, a sign of gross mismanagement, if in the face of unlimited defense orders, we were unable to reduce unemployment to the vanishing point."

220 D.C. Men Undergo Army Exams Tonight

Physical Tests Will Select 51 For Year's Training

Two hundred and twenty Washington men tonight will file into four District hospitals to submit to rigid Army physical examinations by which 51 will be selected for a year's training, beginning November 27-28.

Of the 51 men chosen for the District's pioneer quota, 32 will be sworn in at Fifth Battalion Marine Reserve headquarters, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, on November 27, and 19 on the following day.

The War Department announced yesterday that 16 Virginia selectives and 21 Maryland trainees will be inducted on the 28th and will accompany the local men to the Fort George G. Meade (Md.) reception center.

At his press conference Secretary of War Stimson said that all of the 30,000 men to be called to the colors in the first draft increment over the Nation might not get into service immediately, with some coming in as late as December 1.

Serve in Home Units

At the same time, the War Department chief revealed that as far as possible selectives assigned to mobilized National Guard units would see service with Guard regiments from their home localities.

Thus, it would appear, the expanding 260th Coast Artillery which will be stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., will be filled out with Washingtonians rather than Texans.

The 220 registrants to be examined tonight—most of them volunteers who have asked to called up ahead of schedule—will face a board of from seven to ten physicians

Glasses No Obstacle

That many of the soldiers of the citizen armies will wear spectacles appeared likely with the definition of the eyesight requirement; men with eyes correctible (with glasses) ot 20-30 vision will be placed in Class 1, it was reported, although only those with 20-20 or normal vision will be given the Class 1-A stamp of approval for immediate service.

General physical requirements for selected men, as well as soldiers in the Regular Army, call for candidates between 5 feet and 6 feet 6 inches in height, weighing at least 115 pounds.

Men who qualify in the physical examinations will have passed through all the stages of modern selective service except the formalities of notification and induction. They will have registered, seen their order numbers appear in the national lottery, and found to be without dependents, or jobs important to the national defense, and with no scruples against Army service.

Selected men must be sent orders notifying them of their call at least five days before the induction, November 27 and 28.

Registrants will be examined at Emergency, Providence, Freedmen's and Garfield Hospitals, beginning at 7 p. m. They are instructed to enter the outpatients' ward at the first three institutions and the clinic at the latter hospital. From there they will be routed to the boards composed of the following physicians:

Emergency Hospital—Chief examiner, Dr. Linn F. Cooper; Doctors R. H. Harmon, J. J. Stanton, E. W. Nichlas, B. L. Hardin, jr., H. R. Schreiber, W. B. Daniels, W. P. Arey, W. A. Mess, Fred Repetti, F. H. Mistretta.

Providence Hospital — Chief examiner, Dr. R. M. Conklin; Doctors M. H. Prosperi, F. W. Braden, E. Y. Davidson, C. J. Bowne, R. R. Hottel, E. S. Crisp, A. B. Schwartzman, J. R. Elvin, C. L. Eppard.

Freedmen's Hospital—Chief examiner, Dr. J. A. Keene; Doctors F. H. Trisz, D. Harper, W. Soines, F. A. Turner, U. B. Martin, Theodore Pinckney, J. P. Dyer.

Garfield Hospital—Chief examiner, Dr. Stewart Foster; Doctors C. W. Culver, B. W. Leonard, C. W. Harnsberger, J. B. Marbury, A. Fife Heath, H. M. Lowden, A. Lee, H. Zehner, C. B. Ethridge, S. Benjamin.

C.I.O. Union Plans Strike Call Today at Vultee Plane Plant

By the United Press

Downey, Calif., Nov. 14.—The C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union, aircraft division, tonight said a strike will be called tomorrow morning at the Vultee Aircraft Co. plant in a dispute over wages.

Vultee is employing 5,200 workers in production of military training planes.

The union charged the company had acted in "bad faith" in not giving final answer to a Federal conciliator at the designated time, 3 p. m. today. Unionists demanded an increase from 50 to 65 cents an hour minimum wages.

Three Hurt in Labor Clash

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 14 (AP).—Fighting broke out today when a C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union picket line attempted to keep members of the rival A. F. of L. U. A. W. Union from reporting for the second shift at the Wilcox-Rich plant of the Eaton Manufacturing Co.

Three persons were injured slightly and police arrested two pickets, George Merrelli, 29, of Detroit, a U. A. W.-C.-I. O. International representative, and Earl Frey, 31, of Saginaw, on disorderly conduct charges.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O., which claims a majority membership of the plant's 1,200 employes, established a picket line yesterday. About 250 of 400 employes, aided by a score of policemen, entered the plant for the first shift this morning, but only a few workers were able to get through the picket line for the second shift at 4 p. m.

S. W. O. C. Reprimands Local

Midland, Pa., Nov. 14 (AP).—A local union of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee today sidestepped a request from its national officers that 4,000 striking employes of Crucible Steel Co. mills here return to work in the interest of national defense.

The strike action, which practically shut down operations, was criticized in a telegram sent to officers of the Midland local by Clinton S. Golden, S. W. O. C. regional director, yesterday.

Labor Cautioned

New Orleans, Nov. 14 (AP).—Maj. Sidney P. Simpson, special assistant to the Assistant Secretary of War, today told labor that defense construction must not be delayed by disputes.

He promised, however, that present working conditions would be maintained.

The officer spoke at the annual meeting of the building and construction trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

"It is essential to the national defense," said Maj. Simpson, "that there be no stoppages of work on Army construction jobs, whether they are private contracts or not."

He added that any dispute which might arise could be adjusted without halting work. Thus far, he said, the "record of American labor in avoiding stoppages on defense work is a remarkable one."

Joseph Keenan, administrative assistant to Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Commission, said labor could be "proud of its part in the defense program," but he warned labor "to act with caution" so as to avoid the possibility of incurring public disfavor that may take years to correct."

Jail Decreed In Draft Case

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 14.—In a courtroom crowded with grave-faced men and women, eight young theological students reiterated today their refusal to register for Selective Service and were sentenced to serve a year and a day in Federal prison.

Courtroom attaches said the scene was one of the most solemn they had witnessed when Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, just before passing sentence, gave the men an opportunity to register "at this last minute."

The roll was called. Each refused and Judge Mandelbaum passed sentence.

"Conscientious objectors" from Union Theological Seminary, the men pleaded guilty when they were indicted October 21 for refusing to register in compliance with the Selective Training and Service Act—a felony under Federal law.

The eight and the colleges from which they were graduated are: William N. Lovell, 26, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., president of the Union theological student body and a Yale graduate; Richard J. Wichlei, 23, Binghamton, N. Y., Syracuse; Donald Benedict, 23, Newark, N. Y., Albion; David Dellinger, 25, Wakefield, Mass., Yale; Meredith Dallas, 23, Grosse Point, Mich., Albion; George M. Houser, 24, Denver, University of Denver; Joseph G. Bevilacqua, 24, Buffalo, N. Y., Tufts, and Howard E. Spragg, 23, Malden, Mass., Tufts.

Nazi Mystery Agent Warned

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Nov. 14.—An unexplained reference to a "German agent" in Canada was made today by Capt. H. Riiser-Larsen, officer commanding the Royal Norwegian Naval Air Service, in an address to the Empire Club.

Pointing his remarks to the unidentified agent, who, he said, "is copying down what I am saying," he declared:

"I want you to include a warning to all the German soldiers in Norway—who don't yet know that they are about to lose the war— . . . that there will be a day of reckoning . . ."

Capt. Riiser-Larsen said Germany "lost the war" when the Norwegians fought back and forced Hitler to send tens of thousands of troops by air, completely equipped, into Norway, thus disclosing his hand and allowing England time to arm herself against mass invasion by air, which he called the German "secret weapon."

Defense Laws For States Studied Here

Model Legislation Discussed at Parley At Justice Department

By the Associated Press

More than a score of State officials and representatives of national organizations discussed yesterday at the Justice Department drafts of "model" defense laws which may be submitted to State Legislatures meeting next year.

After the entire group had gone over the proposed drafts they were assigned to subcommittees for further study. The full group will meet again today for final consideration of the proposals.

The suggested laws deal with sabotage prevention, regulation of secret organizations and uniform-wearing groups, control of firearms and explosives, protection of public property, deputizing of special police and mobilization of home guards.

Other defense developments of the day included an announcement of award of an $18,529,500 contract for Navy airplanes and parts to Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif. The number of planes involved and delivery dates were withheld.

It also was announced that arrangements had been completed for the Douglas Aircraft Co., Santa Monica, Calif., to carry out an $11,254,700 plant expansion through its subsidiary, the Western Land Improvement Co., Long Beach, Calif.

In connection with the Navy's purchase of merchant vessels as auxiliary craft, Secretary Knox said it would be the policy to retain the ships' personnel as far as possible. Officers and men will be allowed to volunteer for one year's service aboard the ship. More than 2,500 merchant officers and seamen already have been affected by the Navy's acquisition of merchant ships.

Two Miners Slain, Woman Wounded

Eskdale, W. Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—Two miners were shot to death and the wife of one was wounded in the stomach today in a gun battle on the railroad tracks near this mining village.

Deputy Sheriff Richards identified the dead as K. J. Rafferty, 50, and Jimmy Dew, 26. Dew's wife, Binnie, was taken to a hospital in Charleston.

Britons Superior In Air, Says Bishop

ment has no present plans for training Canadian pilots in the United States, though he said he knew there was some training in this country of Canadian civilian flyers. He ruled Canadian civilian flyers. He ruled secret a question on the rate at which the training program is producing pilots, but said that, in addition to three squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force in England, "hundreds and hundreds of Canadians have drifted into the Royal Air Force."

"These fellows are all with their tails up and just longing for a good day when they know there will be an air raid so they can get up and take a crack at them," said the marshal, who went to England to see the aerial blitzkrieg, stayed for two weeks and returned in October.

He grinned out the word "blitzkrieg."

He said that when he spoke of the morale of British airmen he meant not only the pilot, but the whole plane crew. Remembering that in the first war he was an observer before he was a pilot, he had warm words for "those grand fellows who sit in the rear gun turret and are swept all over the bloody place and who know if they don't do their jobs they'll lose a $250,000 airplane."

Marshal Bishop said he had examined in England hundreds of pictures made with cameras whose shutters are synchronized to open just before airplane machine-guns begin to fire. "Time and again," he said, "those pictures showed that the German rear gunner jumped when he saw that fellow was hanging on his tail."

"I tell you that over there you see everything messed up, but no one's depressed. They're more depressed in peacetime. They're just fighting and laughing, and sometimes you'll see a cockney standing beside the ruins of his house into which he's stuck the Union Jack.

"There's no such thing as the British merely hanging on, desperately. They can blow every brick in the country to pieces and they won't break their spirit. You'd almost think they like it. And I believe they do, in a strange sort of way.

"I need not tell you how much we count on your support. Britain needs everything America can give her. We have put up a show that we feel has your sympathy and admiration, but no one is going to entice this country into war. We want your help, but we don't want to drag you into a jam that is against your principles."

Bishop was in England at the height of the bombings. He pronounced the air organization "perfect," but attributed the superiority of the R. A. F., pricipally, to higher quality personnel. He said American aircraft in England are "very highly thought of," but declined to discuss the types of American planes already delivered. He said he was certain the Germans "can't touch some of the equipment we now have and that which we have coming."

He described the "slaughter" of German aircraft as "terrific" and declared he witnessed one two-hour attack in which from 150 to 175 planes came over in waves "and not one of them got half way to London, and none ever went back."

Air Marshal Bishop came to Washington to lecture tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Constitution Hall before the National Geographic Society. At 8 o'clock he will make a half-hour broadcast over the Blue Network of N. B. C. He and Mrs. Bishop are stopping at the Mayflower Hotel.

Democrats Call All For Vote to Adjourn

Absentees Urged To Return as G. O. P. Marshals Forces

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Whether Congress carries through the leadership plan to adjourn next Tuesday depends on how many House Democrats can be induced to return to Washington, it appeared yesterday.

With Republicans lining up solidly against adjourning, the resolution to quit for the year needs the votes of a large number of Democrats who are still out of town. Telegrams have been sent to them, urging their return by Tuesday for the vote on adjournment; and it is generally expected that enough will show up to adopt the proposal.

One well-informed member yesterday said that with everyone present Tuesday, the Democrats (who have a paper majority of 101) would be able to pass an adjournment resolution by only about 40 votes, as a number of Democrats will, as usual, vote with the G. O. P.

Veteran Seeks "Rest"

Many Republicans are, of course, also out of town; and they, too, have been urged by their leaders to come back for the roll call.

One G. O. P. veteran said yesterday that he was opposed to adjournment because he had fought a hard campaign in his home district, and he now wanted to stay in Washington "to rest."

As a matter of fact, by present indications, Congress will have practically nothing to do even if it does continue its practice of the last few weeks, meeting briefly every three days. Both the President and the House leadership have said that no new recommendations are coming up this session.

But, during the election campaign, so many members of Congress went on record against adjournment because of the international crisis, that there is going to be some embarrassment in recording a vote next week in favor of quitting.

Mileage Question

A personal but none the less real deterrent to the return of members to Washington was brought out in cloakroom conversations yesterday, involving the question of mileage allowances.

All members are granted 20 cents a mile for one round trip a session between their homes and Washington. The allowance would not be increased even for a necessary trip to the Capital to vote on adjournment.

It is expected that if the House does pass a resolution to quit, the Senate will rapidly follow suit.

New Life Policies Up 1.8% in Month

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—New life insurance written in October amounted to $648,902,000, an increase of 1.8 per cent over $637,675,000 for the comparable month last year, the Association of Life Insurance presidents reported today.

The report covers companies having 82 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in all legal reserve companies.

Dr. H. A. Millis Slated to Head Labor Board

Appointment Likely To Change Agency's Personnel, Policies

Appointment of Dr. Harry Alvin Millis to the National Labor Relations Board, predicted yesterday by reliable informants, is expected to result in a partial reorganization of the agency's personnel and policies.

Millis, 67-year-old Chicago educator and economist, is slated to get the post on the three-man board vacated when Chairman J. Warren Madden's term expired last August.

A former member of the board before it was reconstituted and given greater powers under the Wagner Act in 1935, Millis is expected in some quarters to cooperate with Board Member William M. Leiserson's program for changes in staff and procedure. Leiserson is known to have been advocating changes since President Roosevelt appointed him a year and a half ago.

The third member is Edwin S. Smith, who is reported to have voted with Madden on some of the reorganization proposals advanced by Leiserson. Smith's term expires in 1941.

Millis, like Leiserson, is a veteran in the field of arbitration and labor relations, and they are understood to hold similar views about the functions of administrative agencies. Leiserson is reported to have advocated board reforms on the grounds the agency was over-weighted with legalistic procedures.

There have been reports that Madden would be given a Federal court appointment here.

Several weeks ago, Millis was chosen jointly by the General Motors Corporation and C. I. O.'s United Auto Workers as impartial arbiter under the union's new contract with G. M. C.

Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, yesterday severed life-long Democratic party ties to join the Republican "party of the opposition" program of Wendell L. Willkie.

As Republicans moved on a wide front to consolidate Democratic and independent Willkie supporters in the regular Republican framework, Burke wrote the defeated G. O. P. nominee he would follow his leadership.

The Nebraska Democrat, whose 1934 definition of the New Deal was accepted by the President as his own, predicted that a reinvigorated Republican Party "will become the haven of a rapidly increasing number of citizens who believe in liberal, forward-looking policies and ideals."

Marks Second Realignment

Burke's announcement that he would change his registration to Republican was the second party realignment development in two days following Willkie's call for "loyal opposition" to continue the campaign "crusade."

Previously, the 10,000 independent Willkie clubs had been summoned by Oren Root, jr., to a conference next month to form a permanent organization under a new name.

No formal proposals have been advanced as yet to incorporate the clubs in the regular Republican set-up, but some G. O. P. leaders here take the view that only through the regular party framework can "the opposition" function effectively.

There were increasing indications that other Republican Presidential aspirants, while in general accord on the Willkie program, will buck any effort to use it as a vehicle for Willkie's own 1944 prospects.

Burke, who came to the Senate as an ardent New Dealer in 1934, only to break with the President on the court plan in 1936 and to consistently oppose Administration policies thereafter, was defeated for renomination. He was the first Democrat to announce for Willkie after the Philadelphia convention, and during the campaign he directed Senate judiciary hearings on resolutions opposing a third term for any President.

Praises Willkie Program

Writing Willkie yesterday that he was ending his connection with the Democratic Party, Burke said the defeated G. O. P. nominee had "greatly helped all to see and more fully appreciate that the cause of good government and the survival of the democratic process necessitates a strong party of opposition."

"You clearly demonstrate that the opposition is not to be one of obstruction," said Burke. "That it does not look toward disunity. It is to be an affirmative program soundly conceived and honestly enunciated. To every citizen, regardless of previous political affiliation, is now presented the duty of determining for himself whether he rightly belongs in the party temporarily in power or in the equally important minority."

To Renew Law Practice

Burke, who told reporters he would challenge his registration immediately on return to Omaha, said he plans to rejoin his old law firm and possibly establish a branch office in Washington.

Enumerating concentration of power, fiscal theories and practice, spending and business policies among the New Deal methods he could not accept, Burke wrote that "the question for all but the hide-bound partisan to answer is in which group can he more effectively battle for the principles in which he believes."

"It has become increasingly clear to me that the Democratic Party, despite splendid accomplishments, cannot be depended upon under its present leadership to stand fast for the things that appear to me to be essential for the permanent well-being of our country."

FHA's Authority to Insure Loans Increased by a Billion

The Federal Housing Administration received President Roosevelt's authority yesterday to insure mortgages on another billion dollars worth of home construction.

The increase, raising to $4,000,000,000 the total of mortgages which the FHA may insure, came as the 6-year-old agency was midway in its busiest year, close to exhausting its previous insuring authority.

President Roosevelt accompanied permission for the increase with a congratulatory letter to Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, saying:

"You have demonstrated that comfortable homes for people of moderate means can be provided at low cost and without loss to the Government, whether the homes are owned by the occupants or rented by them."

Agency Is Self-Sustaining

FHA, according to its official records, has been self-sustaining for some months.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, told the President yesterday in a letter recommending the billion-dollar increase that FHA will put an excess of $9,000,000 into its insurance reserve fund this year. Its income is from a ½ of 1 per cent charge for mortgage insurance and a charge of $3 for each $1,000 of construction value for inspecting homes while they are being built.

FHA-insured mortgages have been totaling about $130,000,000 monthly this year, well ahead of last year's business. Applications for mortgage insurance, the gauge of FHA activity in October were well ahead of the mark set in the same month last year.

Home Repair Funds Unaffected

From its start in 1934, through October 31, the FHA has insured 606,809 small home mortgages totaling $2,559,984,962 and 317 rental housing projects.

Authority of FHA to incur liability up to $100,000,000 for home repair and modernization loans was not affected by the President's action. This liability is in the form of a revolving fund, used over and over again.

FHA has made 2,860,503 loans totaling $1,186,125,109 under this authority.

N. Y. Transit Men Warned on Strike

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Replying to an implied threat to paralyze New York's underground, surface and elevated transportation, the Board of Transportation today warned employes that they were under civil service and that the right to strike was not recognized.

The board posted notices to that effect along this city's transit lines in response to a resolution adopted last night by the membership of the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) charging that the board had "repeatedly and persistently endeavored to break the labor contracts."

Cuban Envoy Gets Confidence Vote

The government of President Col. Fulgencio Batista in Havana has rejected the resignation of its ambassador to Washington, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Cuban Embassy announced last night.

In compliance with customary procedure for officials in positions "deemed to require the indispensable confidence of the government," the embassy statement said, Dr. Fraga offered his resignation to give Batista a chance to select a successor, if desired.

"The Cuban government has just notified the ambassador that he is ratified in his post together with assurances of its full confidence," the embassy reported.

American U. May Name Acting President Today

An acting president of American University is expected to be named by an administrative committee of the board of trustees at a meeting at 3:30 this afternoon, for service pending the appointment of a permanent president.

Dr. Arthur C. Christie, chairman of the board of trustees, has resigned because of the pressure of other duties and has been succeeded by Edward F. Colladay, vice chairman. The administrative committee of the board has been handling campus matters since the resignation of the university's head, Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, last summer.

Lothian and Stamp Stress Need of Aid

Ambassador Says Britain Needs 'Ships, Finance and Planes'

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 14.—Two Britons perhaps more familiar with United States economy than any others of like rank—Ambassador Lord Lothian and Economist Lord Stamp—put sharp stress today on England's shortage of American dollars.

British officials, although hesitant, implied nevertheless that the question of credit for war purchases had been discussed with the United States, "along with all other methods of aid short of war." They declined to say how far the conversations had gone.

Such credit now is barred by United States legislation. Observers agreed the question of how long Britain could keep on paying cash was serious.

Lord Lothian, who has been consulting for several weeks with his Government, started back for Washington via Lisbon after making a recorded radio speech to the United States, saying that Britain needs "planes, finance and ships." Without adequate American help on all three, he said, Britain cannot be sure to win the war.

In Lisbon Lord Lothian expected to see Sir Samuel Hoare, British Minister to Spain.

Lord Stamp, long identified with British-American economic relations, and now chief economic adviser to the government, told an audience at Stoke-on-Trent today that "our requirements from America are on such a huge scale and our need for dollars so great that the necessity to avoid using dollars whenever possible is immense." He called for a national belt-tightening on imported nonessentials.

Maritime Commission Offers 15 Ships for Sale

The Maritime Commission yesterday offered for sale 15 vessels from its laid-up fleets under terms which make it possible for the British to submit bids.

The 15 vessels were offered for sale on an "as is, where is" basis, and without restriction as to trade, service or final disposition.

The Edgefield, with deadweight tonnage of 10,041, is the largest of the vessels offered for sale and the Willimatic, 7,615 deadweight tons, the smallest. Bids will be opened December 12.

of good relations" with the United States following the recent visit of United States Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade to Fort de France.

A French communique issued after Admiral Greenslade's visit said: "No doubt the American acquisition of naval and air bases in the British Antilles . . . will lead to greater activity of American air and naval forces . . . without it becoming necessary to conduct direct surveillance of these islands."

Observers arriving here today said that of several French naval vessels at Fort de France, only the training cruiser Jeanne d'Arc appeared to have steam up and gun covers off. Well inshore, the French aircraft carrier Bearn was anchored under the guns of Fort Luis, while a cruiser, two destroyers and smaller naval craft were at the quayside.

The French warships lay behind a screen of tankers anchored in a line across the seaward bight of the harbor.

Other vessels of the Atlantic Neutrality Patrol have recently been observed in this part of the Caribbean. The cruiser St. Louis has been based at Port of Spain, Trinidad, British West Indies, near the proposed U. S. naval base in the Gulf of Paria.

Twenty-five miles from Martinique, at British St. Lucia, U. S. forces are building a small naval patrol plane base on Castries Island.

Chamberlain Buried in War Atmosphere

Planes' Drone Sounds Requiem at Rites For 'Man of Munich'

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 15.—In a secret service attended by leaders of all the allied nations and protected by a patrol of fighting aircraft over the edge of the city, the ashes of Arthur Neville Chamberlain were buried today amid the tombs of Britain's illustrious dead in Westminster Abbey.

At the end of the simple Anglican service, a small oak casket containing his ashes was lifted from a catafalque and laid in a shallow cavity in the floor of the cathedral down the aisle from the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, while Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his ministers stood beside the grave and the Archbishop of Canterbury prayed: 'Vouchsafe him light and rest, peace and refreshment, joy and consolation. . . .'

While the Duke of Gloucester, representing King George, stood at one side of the grave and the great names of this warring island kingdom started moving out of the chill cathedral, Mrs. Chamberlain walked to the edge of the grave, took a single chrysanthemum from her handbag and laid its crushed petals on his casket.

The service was carried out in an atmosphere of the war which Chamberlain had worked to prevent. The time and place of the funeral were not made public lest the Germans should make an attempt on the lives of the nation's leaders.

Rumanian Armed Forces To Demobilize

Bucharest Premier In Rome to Learn Role in New Order

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that Rumanian armed forces would be demobilized beginning tomorrow.

The broadcast, picked up by C. B. S., said demobilization of army, navy and air forces was ordered in a decree signed by Premier Gen. Antonescu before he left for Rome to confer with Premier Mussolini.

Antonescu Visits Duce

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP).—Gen. Antonescu arrived in Rome today, presumably to discuss his country's role in the "new order for Europe" designed by the Axis, and informed circles said he would go on to Berlin for conferences with Adolf Hitler after talks with Premier Mussolini.

Bucharest dispatches said Antonescu came here "to fulfill a mission entrusted to him by the whole Rumanian people" as "interpreter of Rumania's aspirations in the new Europe." An informed source said Antonescu would discuss economic as well as political questions.

Correspondents were told Antonescu's visit represents "consecration of Rumania's definite adherence to the Axis, from the viewpoint of both domestic and foreign policy."

In the spirit of that declaration, Premier Mussolini welcomed the chief of the new Axis satellite to Rome.

French Expelled From Lorraine

sided over by Petain and attended by Vice Premier Pierre Laval, summoned back from Paris particularly for the purpose:

The government communique said:

"The German authorities in Lorraine have just requested French-speaking inhabitants of the region to choose between their transfer to Poland or their departure for unoccupied France. Our compatriots decided for France.

"Since Monday, November 11, 1940, their expulsion has been taking place at the rate of five to seven trainloads per day.

"They have unquestionably been told by persons without proper authority that this measure was taken in conformity with an accord reached between the French government and the government of the Reich.

"The French government issues the most formal denial to this imputation.

"No measure of this kind was ever under discussion at the Franco-German meetings.

"As concerns the facts themselves the French government has applied to the German armistice commission."

The key sentence seems to be the one referring to "persons without authority." The fact that the French government "gives the most formal denial to this imputation," is pregnant with possibilities.

The incident assumes all the more importance since French-speaking Lorrainers are French to the core. Moreover, Lorraine as the country of Joan of Arc means much to the French generally. Only last week in Toulouse, the garrison marched past Petain to the strains of the "Marche Lorraine." And Gen. Charles de Gaulle for the purpose of his cause of "Free France" has placed the double cross of Lorraine on his colors.

No definite figures are obtainable here regarding the extent of the exodus, but the daily number of trains mentioned in the communique is sufficiently indicative of a systematic eviction.

[Authorized sources in Berlin, the Associated Press reported, recalling that Germans had been withdrawn from Russian-annexed Baltic countries and Bessarabia, said it would not be surprising if French were being displaced in Lorraine by German infiltration, but said they had no official information. "We can't be expected forever to retreat backwards, backwards, backwards," said one authority.

[The cabinet meeting at Vichy was reported also to have considered the situation in north Africa, according to the Associated Press.

[Diplomatic circles in Switzerland reported the cabinet acted to stop the spread of the De Gaullist "Free French" forces northward from French Equatorial Africa as the result of a German-Italian threat that if the Vichy government does not defend the African empire the Axis will be forced to do so.

Thousands Attend Pittman Rites

Reno, Nov. 14 (AP).—A crowd that filled every one of the 1,700 seats in the Civic Auditorium and overflowed into the aisles and street, attended funeral services today for Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, who died of a heart attack last Sunday.

The Rev. Warren L. Botkin, of Trinity Episcopal Church, officiated at the funeral. The eulogist, Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, has been mentioned as successor to Pittman as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Pritchard, 18, Elected Future Farmers' Head

Kansas City, Nov. 14 (AP).—Harold Pritchard, 18, Booneville, Miss., farmer, was elected president of the Future Farmers of America late today. He succeeds Ivan H. Kindschi, of Prairie Du Sac, Wis., and rents and operates his own diversified farm near Booneville.

Adult officers include W. A. Ross, executive secretary, and J. A. Linke, national adviser, both from the National Vocational Agricultural Education Service offices in Washington.

Woman Taken for 'Chutist Here With War Photographs

Therese Bonney Tells of Narrow Escapes She Had

THERESE BONNEY

They almost shot her as a parachute trooper, she underwent more bombardments than she can remember, she sometimes wondered if her eyes ever again would look upon the home shores of America.

Putting the finishing touches yesterday on her photographic exhibition, which opens at the Library of Congress today, Therese Bonney told about those things. Of pleading, "Don't shoot, look at my papers" with a gendarme, of fleeing Belgium just ahead of the German invaders, of constant worry over her precious negatives.

"Who says the journalistic days of Richard Harding Davis are no more?" she challenged, inspecting a panel in the exhibition which had just been hung. "I know I've had plenty of excitement."

Lived in Paris 21 Years

Therese Bonney is a California-bred woman, about 40 or thereabouts, who had lived and worked for 21 years in Paris when the war clouds began to thicken two summers ago. Her business was syndicating pictures, not making them.

The Russian attack on Finland a year ago found her in the little republic. In fact, she had been there four months as a photographer in her own right, taking pictures of inhabitants at their peaceful pursuits of farming, playing and governing. Suspecting what was in store for Finland, she was interested in getting the "before" pictures of a projected "before and after" series.

Fate played into her lap. Using a single camera, which stood up under subzero temperatures and other adverse weather conditions, she made dozens, then scores, then hundreds of photographs on the Russo-Finnish war. She underwent bombings, worked in the front lines, roved from Petsamo to Karelia.

Leaving Finland in March, after peace came, she went to Belgium and began making "before" pictures there. She did not have long to wait for the "after" phase. Thence to France, where on two different occasions she was mistaken for a parachutist because of her mannish ski pants and bulging pockets, filled with flash bulbs. She had a similar narrow escape in Finland.

Camera Haywire

Miss Bonney said she didn't have to use her spare camera until just before she sailed from Lisbon for New York on the Manhattan last July. Then, for no good reason at all, the camera with which she had made 10,000 negatives in a year's space suddenly went haywire. Maybe it was just tired.

"To Whom the Wars Are Done" is the name which she has given to her photographic colection. A little more than 200 of the pictures are in the exhibition which opens at the Library of Congress at 5 p. m. today. It is her first showing in the United States. Many of the items have never been displayed publicly before, due to censorship in Europe.

Some of the pictures have been exhibited in Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Scheduled showings in London and Paris were canceled by the war.

"These are exhibited in this library of a democratic people not only because they are eloquent and moving photographs, but because they speak for the anonymous human beings to whom the wars are done," Librarian Archibald MacLeish said yesterday.

"The propagandists for the special causes have all been heard—the apologists also—the appeasers. In these quiet and unarguing photographs the people's cause—the one eternal cause which neither force of arms nor fraud of lies can conquer—finds its words."

18 Reserves in District Made Officers in the Regular Navy

Eight Naval Reserve aviators from the District and eight stationed here are among 370 appointed to the line of the Regular Navy, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

These appointments, recommended by a special board after months of study and approved by Secretary Knox, represent a departure from time-hallowed Navy procedure. Ordinarily no commissions in the regulars are granted except to graduates of the Naval Academy or to a few men who rise from the ranks.

All appointed hold rank in the Naval Reserve, most of whom are on active duty. Their appointments were made under the Naval Aviation Personnel Act of 1940.

Appointed from the District are Lieut. Thomas W. Wagner, 1515 North McKinley Road, Arlington, now stationed at Anacostia; Lieut. Charles J. Eastman, 319 Talbott Avenue, Laurel, Md., now with Fighting Squadron 7, U. S. S. Wasp; Lieut. James O. Taylor, 2507 North Sixteenth Street, Arlington, with the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department; Lieut. Elliott M. West, 4550 Connecticut Avenue, with the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, and Ensigns Frederick C. Bamman, jr., 2883 Audubon Terrace, with Bombing Squadron 7, U. S. S. Wasp; William R. Lipscomb, 623 C Street Northeast, at Anacostia; Robert W. Slye, 628 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., and Justus U. Steele, 26 Franklin Avenue, Hyattsville, Md., with Patrol Wing 1.

Those from other cities, now serving in Washington, are Lieut. Comdr. Frank E. Weld, Hopkins, Minn., with the Bureau of Aeronautics, Lieut. Freeman Cutter, Brooklyn, N. Y., Bureau of Aeronautics; Lieut. Harry Sartoris, Oakland, Calif., Bureau of Aeronautics; Lieut. John J. Shea, Quincy, Mass., Bureau of Aeronautics; Lieut. James G. Sliney, Brighton, Mass., Bureau of Aeronautics; Lieut. William G. Von Bracht, Fort Myers, Fla., Naval Air Station, Anacostia, and Ensigns Calder Atkinson, Wilmington, N. War Causes U. S. to Change Army Tactics

Troops Get Revised Infantry Manual Based On European Lessons

By the Associated Press

Revolutionary changes in United States infantry tactics have been ordered, it was disclosed yesterday, and a revised infantry manual taking advantage of the lessons taught by the European war is being distributed to the troops.

Secretary of War Stimson told reporters that instead of trying to advance on broad fronts in the manner of World War attacks, the riflemen of today would seek to penetrate "soft spots in the enemy formation."

The new tactics, he said, would emphasize decentralization of infantry combat, a tactic in which the Germans "showed high skill" in last summer's fighting.

A statement issued at the same time by Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, chief of infantry, described the new tactics as a "revolution" such as never before occurred in the American Army in peacetime.

Riflemen Take to Cover

Because of the heavier machine guns and mortars with which modern armies equip certain infantry units, Lynch asserted, "it has become very clear that the rifleman can no longer shoot his way forward," but must coordinate his movement with supporting fire of artillery, aviation and armored units, as well as with that of adjacent infantry units.

"Previous regulations have been based upon the idea that the attacking rifleman was committed to one or two forms of activity in battle," Lynch continued. "He was either in movement or he was firing. His activity is no longer limited to firing and moving. During much of his time in battle he will be in a cover position in readiness either to move or to fire."

Lynch asserted that under the new tactics "no attempt is made to maintain alignment of units."

The infantry chief, however, challenged contentions that tanks can sweep infantry from the battlefield, an impression which he said was created by the advent of fast tanks in recent European operations.

Tank Peril Reduced

"With the introduction of light man-handled antitank weapons in the forward infantry zone, backed up by antitank guns in the regimental zone, and the training of infantry soldiers to take cover in fox holes or other places unfavorable to tank attack while the tanks pass over, the danger of tank attack crushing the infantry has been reduced," he said.

Lynch added that equipping the infantry with semiautomatic rifles has increased the foot soldier's anti-aircraft fire power. In the present infantry regiment, he said, the riflemen and automatic rifle squads are the most effective of all types of small arms fire against dive bombing.

"Dispersed infantry units present a small target to the attacking plane," he explained, "and at the same time the concentration of their fire produces a storm of steel over their heads."

Britain to Buy All of Canada's Surplus Bacon

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Britain has agreed to purchase Canada's entire bacon surplus for the next year, Agricultural Minister J. G. Gardiner, just back from London, told the House of Commons today.

This means a return to Canada of $69,300,000, an increase of $10,000,000 over last year's total sales. Hogs are now selling around 9 cents in Canada, which is considerably above the United States figure, as a direct result of the British agreement.

Apart from wheat and fish, Canada's wartime food contracts with Britain now total $93,691,000, which is the largest return since the latter part of the last war.

Five British Battleships Nearly Ready

Some of George V Class Reported In Commission

Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 14.—Although the British are maintaining silence about five new 35,000-ton battleships of the King George V class, laid down in 1939, it is believed that the building program is far ahead of schedule.

Last winter it was reported by Hector C. Bywater, naval expert, that some of these ships had been launched, and there are rumors, not supported by any official confirmation, that some of them already have been commissioned. An admiralty spokesman said tonight that whether they were in commission or not, nothing would be said about them until an encounter with the enemy disclosed their completion.

However, Prime Minister Churchill and other government spokesmen have talked repeatedly of accretions soon coming to the navy's strength through new building, which is far more extensive than that represented by the five capital ships begun before the war broke out. It has been said repeatedly that Britain's greatest need in this war is for small ships, like the 50 destroyers recently obtained in the trade with the United States for naval bases.

It is lack of these small guardians of merchant ships that caused the Jervis Bay, a converted liner lightly armed, to be guarding the big convoy which was attacked by a raider off the Canadian coast.

Frank J. Hogan Put On Bar Committee

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Two former presidents of the American Bar Association—Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, and Frederick H. Stringfield, of Minneapolis—were placed today on the organization's bill of rights committee.

The committee, created several years ago to intervene in court cases affecting civil liberties, also includes Frederick A. Ballard and Edward R. Burke, both of Washington, D. C.

Wife Inherits Estate

The will of Walter Douglas Lathrop, of Bethesda, Md., which has been admitted to probate in the orphans' court at Rockville, bequeaths his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Marguerite B. Lathrop, and names her executrix.

Youthful Gunman Kidnaps, Attacks Student's Bride

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Jeanne G. Earle, 21, bride of a Harvard Law School student and daughter of a prominent New Hampshire businessman, was receiving hospital treatment today as police of Cambridge and surrounding communities sought a youthful gunman who kidnaped and assaulted her last night.

MRS. EARLE

Married less than three months ago to Richard T. Earle, jr., of St. Petersburg, Fla., the young woman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Trevor R. Gautier, of Nashua, N. H. Her mother is treasurer of the New Hampshire State Federation of Women's Clubs and her father is an executive of the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Co.

Mrs. Earle is a graduate of Simmons College. Her husband will be gradauted from law school in June.

Wife Is Beneficiary

The will of James Herbert Robinson, of Bethesda, Md., has been admitted to probate at Rockville. It makes his wife, Mrs. Gertrude McC. Robinson, the only beneficiary and names her executrix.

Oil Shipments To Reich Rise

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, Nov. 14.—Despite ice floods and earthquakes, Germany has drawn a stream of more than 1,000,000 tons of oil from Rumania this year for her war machine and rising imports are forecast.

Many Rumanian refineries may be shut down several weeks due to damage from the tremors, but the reservoirs are full and some companies had already been capping wells to restrict production.

Until the refineries resume production again, shipment will be made from these stores. The only effect on Axis military plans may be the consumption of reservoir stocks which otherwise might have been shipped south in event of an extensive campaign in the Balkans and Near East.

American oil men here express belief that shipments to Germany may approach 200,000 tons this month and the same in December. The highest previous month's shipment was in May, 1936, when 194,000 tons were moved. Shipments may reach a possible total of 1,400,000 tons in 1940, compared with 1,285,000 tons in 1939, and 1,705,000 in the record year of 1936.

The record-breaking 1940 total is being obtained despite a series of handicaps. In the first months of the year the Danube was frozen and oil had to go to the Reich by rail. Then came floods. During most of the year the Rumanian general staff practically monopolized the single track railways shuttling troop trains between the shipments.

Japan Moves Troops From 2 Areas of China

'Withdrawal' Forced, Chinese Say; New Indo-China Drive Seen

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Nov. 14.—Japanese military authorities announced today their troops had been withdrawn from southwestern Kwangtung Province, as they already had done in neighboring Kwangsi Province, strengthening the belief in foreign circles here of another impending move against French Indo-China.

Just as they explained their withdrawal earlier from Kwangsi, the Japanese declared they were moving out of southwestern Kwangtung because their troops were no longer needed there as a result of newly gained bases in French Indo-China.

Contradicting the Japanese explanation, Chinese said they were driving the Japanese out at bayonet point. Furthermore, the Chinese declared the capture of Yamchow, port through which the Japanese are leaving, is imminent.

It was through Yamchow that the Japanese drove last November into Kwangsi to capture its capital, Nanning, only to abandon it recently.

Imperial headquarters in Tokyo announced the withdrawal from Yamchow was completed yesterday "without casualties," although the Chinese reported heavy fighting there. A war office spokesman in Tokyo denied that the withdrawals were a prelude to wholesale evacuation of South China, where the Japanese army still holds a considerable portion of Kwangtung province around Canton.

Some reports here had it that the Japanese plan to move deeper into southeastern Asia from their new bases in French Indo-China, with Saigon, port on the southern French Indo-Chinese coast, and Singapore, Britain's great naval base to the south, their possible ultimate objectives.

Ceiling Falls, 4 Hurt In Theater Panic

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—A section of the ceiling of the Harris Alvin Motion Picture Theater collapsed tonight causing a stampede among about 150 patrons.

Four persons were taken to the hospital for treatment of injuries and several others were hurt in the wild scramble.

GOES BACK STAGE FOR THE FACTS—Cynthia Eden, cousin of Anthony Eden, Britain's war minister, is now a student at Chevy Chase Junior College, where she is a reporter for the school paper, The Barker. Yesterday she went backstage at the National Theater to interview John Lodge, brother of the Senator, who is starred in "Night of Love"

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

A "SHOW WHAT AM" is going on in Paul Young's Romany Room. Anything and everything can and does happen. Jerry Brandow, incarnation of "boogie-woogie," knocks himself out twice a night in astonishing broken-rhythm dancing, then drags his gasping form to the piano and literally cracks the daylights out of it. Beautiful Sunny Shaw sings "Begin the Beguine" more fierily than it's ever been done before. Ralph Lewis is doing a tabloid "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" with emphasis on the horrible Hyde. Gerson Kaufman plays comical solos on a toy piano and tin fife. Al Spieldock and his orchestra do a "Band Parade" including brilliant impressions of six or so famed units . . . But the big moment of the evening comes when owner Paul Young yields to a melodic urge, carols his pet song—something about a vine covered cottage as we understood it. Just when he's getting good, the band drowns him out. P. S.—Theater Owner Charlie Olive (Atlas and Princess), Romany-ing the other eve, told us that his new Apex Theater will have a gorgeous private picture-viewing room with night club accessories.

Troika patrons are being thrilled to their marrows by the midnight appearances of stunning Martha Errolle of "Night of Love" now at the National. Six encores are the minimum demanded after her dazzling renditions of "Sweethearts," "Makebelieve" and "One Fine Day." Miss Errolle's engagement has to end tomorrow night when "Night of Love" goes to Philadelphia.

MARCIA NEIL, lovely singer with Sonny James' band in the Metronome Room

ROSS VS. MELCHOIR VS. MOOSE. Ross McLean, Canadian singer now at the Shoreham, is a bit riled over Tenor Lauritz Melchior's complaint that it cost him $850 to bag one moose in Canada. Says Ross, "Next year I understand that arrangements will be made for really big moose to drop in on visiting tenors, pose for movie shots and make change for $1,000 bills" . . . Next week's Blue Room revue will include Marjorie King, splendid Washington soprano, the Two Vespers in circus stunts and perennial but always delightful St. Clair and Day.

MILTON S. KRONHEIM seems to be in the offing whenever there's a specially choice party. Earlier in the week we sipped celestial pink champagne at the party he gave at the Washington to pomote appreciation of American wines. The next night we encountered Mr. Kronheim at the fall opening of Kavakos' Grill, a stupendously big and jolly party, where the floor show ran for hours and big Bill Kavakos greeted hundreds of well-wishing friends.

COSTUMES PAR EXCELLENCE. For the street. The saucy beige-and-brown outfit that the Neptune Room's Evelyn Tyner recently wore on F Street. It included a camels' hair coat, brown felt shako-style hat, bag and shoes in British tan. Evie's copper-red hair provided a glint of high color . . . For formal. The white silk jersey gown embroidered with mother-of-pearl sequins being worn by Eileen George in the Anchor Room . . . For a floor show. The hazy pale blue chiffon with matching flowers of crushed velvet worn by the littlest blonde in "Park Avenue Fantasy" at the Lotus.

A new star has just been added to Hi Hat's Four M's. He's varitalented Jack Reid, of New York, who blows a trumpet a la Clyde McCoy, yodels like a Swiss mountaineer, plays the guitar like a Latin-American, sings Broadway numbers, too.

FACES AROUND PLACES. Mayfair. Col. Phil Terck, back from Texas for a two weeks' visit, having a grand time with a cluster of old friends. Elmer Neagle, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with Mrs. Neagle and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Colston. Comedian Bernie Simon, who vows that his recent experience with a hold-up man was more exciting than playing with Beatrice Lillie . . . Lounge Riviera. None other than Manager Frank Swadley, of the Carlton Hotel viewing the beauteous covey of 1940-41 debutantes dancing to Pete Macias' music. "They'll all be down in our Cosmos Room on Saturday afternoon," said Mr. Swadley with decision . . . Mayflower Lounge. Heads of the new Repertory Club of the Washington Theater listening to their theme song, "D. C. Melody," played by Dick Koons and his band. The table included Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Miss Evelyn McLean, John Logan and Bill Merriam.

AUTO-MINDED RAINBOWITES. E'TES. Effects of the automobile show are showing up in the Rainbow Room Band. Paul Inbody is tooling a new tan-and-blue sports number around town. And Ralph Cannon is proud of his just-purchased super-streamlined car.

CUSTOMERS' FANCY DANCING. "Oh, Susanna" is the latest Arthur Murray dance novelty in the Pall Mall Room. It looks like a combo square dance, round dance and barn dance. Denny Scudder's ad libbing direction of this frolic is splendificently funny . . . Jean Cathon's leadership of the conga line in La Salle Versailles is so verve packed that it often inspires everyone in the place to go the South American way. And very successfully. For the conga isn't really hard to do.

AH, THE CLASSICS! Felix Zimmer, virtuoso of the Casino Royal, is accordioning "Kammenoi Ostrow" with great spirit and dexterity, vows he'll show that Jack Schaffer's "Jive Song" is not the C. R. classic . . . The New Bavarian's Heintze Brothers and Jane Marlow are going off the deep end with Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody, garnering even more applause than when they play Bing Crosby's "Only Forever."

Turks Reassured On Berlin Parley

Fear of Russian Attitude Calmed; Taranto Raid Hailed

By G. E. R. Gedye.
Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Nov. 14.—Public opinion in Turkey seems to be considerably reassured about the possible effect on this country of the Molotoff-Hitler conversations, though German propaganda has boosted them extravagantly.

The Turks seem more confident about the Russian attitude in case of any German demands and intrigues against Turkey.

Nothing has contributed more to the general feeling of confidence than news of the Italian disaster at Taranto, which is received with an enthusiasm which can only have been surpassed in London and Athens. It is felt that this great blow could hardly have been struck at a more favorable moment, with Russian Premier Molotoff still in Berlin and the Rumanian Premier, Gen. Antonescu, arriving in Rome to be greeted there with the news.

It is known here that it was only under extreme pressure that Antonescu finally agreed to go to Rome, owing to fears that either the Iron Guard might oust him in his absence or that Germany, herself, might replace him by an even more pliable nominee.

The newspaper Tan believes Germany sees a long struggle ahead and seeks to overcome her lack of raw materials by an invasion of Africa and by the exploitation of Asia.

Gen. Sabis, military critic of Tasviri Efkar, underlines the significance for Turkey of Ambassador von Papen's presence in Berlin. He ridicules the idea advanced by other Turkish writers that the composition of Molotoff's entourage shows that only economic questions were under discussion. For the future, he says, there can be no question either of Russian participation in the war against the Axis or adopting a hostile attitude toward any Axis threat.

Tracy Says Labor Should MakePeace To Preserve Gains

New Orleans, Nov. 14 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of Labor Dan Tracy today said labor's divided ranks should make peace and unite to preserve gains already made before employers can take advantage of the differences between the warring factions.

"Labor will have to unite to keep its social gains," said Tracy after his arrival here for the American Federation of Labor annual convention opening Monday.

"If labor doesn't unite, employers will try to take advantage of the split again as it has in the past."

However, Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamster's Union, although asserting he believed the power of C. I. O. President John L. Lewis was "waning," declared:

"If Lewis stepped down he would still be a large factor in the C. I. O. if he retained his presidency of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers.

"I see no immediate prospect of peace between the C. I. O. and A. F. L. because of the jurisdictional disputes that would have to be worked out among the unions whose crafts or jurisdictions are the same.

"This could be worked out, although it would take time."

Stimson Reveals Plans to Guard Arms Building

Special measures to safeguard the Munitions Building will be taken in the near future, the War Department announced yesterday. This move follows closely a similar step taken recently by the Navy.

Secretary of War Stimson said yesterday the security measures had no connection with the fire which destroyed the unfinished fourth floor of the third wing of the Munitions Building and damaged other parts of the building October 30. In fact, he said, he believed the measures had been decided upon before the fire.

Under the plan for security, to be applied first to the Munitions Building, all officers, enlisted men and civilians employed in the building and others having frequent business there will be furnished with passes with the bearer's photograph. Occasional visitors on business will be furnished with temporary passes at the office of the Provost Marshal.

O'Conor Proclaims Nov. 21 for Thanks

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Gov. O'Conor today proclaimed Thursday, November 21, as Thanksgiving Day for Maryland and urged "that our people suspend their ordinary tasks and vocations on that day to give thanks to Almighty God for the peace, liberty and prosperity bestowed upon this State and Nation."

Famous English Landmarks Among 'Military Targets' Hit

By David Anderson
Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 14.—Bombs sowed by Reichmarshal Goering's air force during the last nine weeks in England have reaped a harvest of destruction touching at least 118 places of public and world-wide interest. This number, including eight hospitals, 24 churches and four palaces, and also famous museums and colleges, is listed by the ministry of information under the derisive caption: "Military objectives."

Most of the damage is in London, but landmarks beyond the metropolitan district also have been hit. Among them were the Town Hall at Birmingham, the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's home town, and the Canterbury Cathedral.

Before the war a tourist visiting the scarred and shattered places enumerated would have been rewarded by reminders of the richness of English history and the best products of modern Britain. Public buildings of this and other centuries, streets and squares familiar throughout the world have been tumbled down or damaged.

Even some newspaper offices which have been publishing the story of blitz-stricken, bombed structures that have served Englishmen from the cradle to the grave, of both high estate and low, are now blackened walls, vacant windows, and mounds of rubble. The oldest building stricken is Eltham Palace, for 300 years a royal residence, used by King John, and in which Geoffrey Chaucer worked. It is well to differentiate between buildings bombed and those struck indirectly when bombs land on legitimate objectives nearby.

The American, Japanese and Spanish embassies have been victims of German raiders—that of the United States by a time bomb. Americans familiar with Christ Church on Westminster Bridge Road will be glad to hear that the Lincoln Tower commemorating the abolition of slavery is undamaged. It was erected in 1876 by subscribers from the United States, and its design embodies the Stars and Stripes.

The Arts Club in Dover Street was almost demolished by a direct hit. It contained mementoes of Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Charles Dickens. The American ambulance unit at Tonbridge Wells is reported among the places damaged nearby.

Swiss Wonder What France's Navy Is Doing

Suspect It May Be Threat to England In Mediterranean

Copyright by New York Times

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 14.—The surprise departure of the French fleet from Toulon this afternoon has caused considerable speculation in many circles here. Vice Premier Laval's sudden recall to Vichy, it is felt, might be more closely connected with this development than with the protest of the Germans about the deportation of French inhabitants from Lorraine.

If the fleet, as many people here believe, has left for Bizerta or Sfax, it constitutes a threat to British communications in the Mediterranean—a situation which is certainly not ignored in British Admiralty quarters—since it would be in a positin to immobilize a large part of Britain's Mediterranean sea power without firing a shot. This answers to the letter Marshal Petain's assurance that the French fleet would not be used against his ally of yesterday, but at the same time, grants certain concessions to the Germans in that it forms a nuisance value in the Mediterranean.

Informed circles, while appreciating the danger of the situation in French Indo-China, do not think that the German Armistice Control Commission would have allowed the fleet to leave for the Far East at the present juncture, owing to the possibility it might still be seized in the Mediterranean in a last attempt to beat the British down.

Another theory is that it has gone to some North African port to threaten Gen. Charles de Gaulle's expanding conquest in that region.

Italy Imprisons Two U. S. Citizens

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP).—George Ehret, of New York, and Miss Grace Gunther, another United States citizen, were convicted today of violating Italy's foreign exchange laws and were sentenced tonight to seven and six years imprisonment, respectively.

Ehret was also fined 300,000 lire (about $15,000), and Miss Gunther was ordered to pay a fine of 50,000 lire (about $2,500).

Does the "Welcome" on Your Doormat Mean Exactly What It Says?

Once a year a group of fine, public-spirited citizens volunteer to call upon the rest of us. Theirs is an errand of mercy. They come to plead the case of those in less fortunate circumstances who depend upon Community Chest assistance to see them through another year.

Surely, they will not be denied a hearing. Their cause is just. It is humanitarian. They ask only a few moments so that you may better understand the needs of those who are deserving of the assistance which can be rendered best by organized charity.

If you had first-hand knowledge of all the individual cases, you would, no doubt, be moved to lend a helping hand where possible. But that is not practicable, and therefore 87 social welfare agencies have enlisted under the banner of the Community Chest so that you are asked only once a year to hear of their needs.

When the Community Chest solicitor comes to your door, remember he has no axe to grind. He asks nothing for himself. His message is from one good citizen to another.

You are entitled to know all about the activities of Community Chest agencies, and solicitors are well equipped to give you such information. Ask questions.

But, above all, give the Community Chest solicitor a warm welcome. Your friendliness and sympathetic ear will quicken his spirit and lighten his task.

Climate Drives Weatherman In for Party

Cornerstone to Be Laid at Indoor Rites This Morning

By Edward Ryan

On the eve of what might have been its gayest ceremony in 52 years, the Weather Bureau last night was stumped, wondering what the weather would do to its party.

The party was arranged for 11 a. m. today, to lay the cornerstone of a new Weather Bureau Building on the site of the old, Twenty-fourth and M Streets Northwest.

But their own weather forecasters were so uncertain about what that hour would bring that for awhile yesterday there was talk of postponement.

Then officials decided that if nothing could be done about the weather they would do something about the ceremony, and, if necessary, hold an "inside-out" cornerstone laying.

Party Planned Inside

That's what they are prepared to do. There are five concrete floors between the ground floor, scene of the corner stone operation, and the sky. The celebrating officials are prepared to stand inside the building, even though there are no walls yet, to conduct the party.

North winds, south winds and the war, all helped shape the official meteorological dilemma yesterday.

Commander Francis Reichelderfer, chief of the Bureau, explained the troubles this way:

The storm front which has brought rain to Washington for two days, may move away during the night. Again, it might not, because it is a tricky kind of storm front. The center moves slowly, urged on by north and south winds playing around the fringes. At any point however, the fringe winds may start going in circles, and then the storm front would come to a halt and stay awhile.

War Cuts Off Reports

Washington's own storm front is a sidekick of the storm that struck the Middle West. The latter is moving off to the northeast, and if the Weather Bureau could learn more about the big storm, they could predict more about Washington's rain storm. The trouble is that the war has cut off the necessary weather reports from the North Atlantic.

The best guess they could make, said Reichelderfer, is that the rain here will stop about 10 a. m. today, and that guess leaves room for the possibility that the rain might stop up to six hours sooner, or six hours later.

No weather combination, he made clear, is tougher to beat, and even in a crisis, there are no strings the bureau can pull to make the weather what it wants.

Reichelderfer to Speak

Whatever today's weather, employes of the Bureau may start counting on one break, earlier regarded as hopeless. Their old building, unblessed with air-conditioning, was among the hotter offices during the summer heat waves, and in the first plans for the new building, all that employes could expected were empty air-condition ducts, without the equipment to make them work. Yesterday officials reported that there is a good chance of having the equipment when employes move in next April or May.

Reichelderfer will speak at today's ceremony, and Wayne Chatfield Taylor, newly nominated Undersecretary of Commerce, will lay the cornerstone. With them will be officials from the Bureau, Commerce, Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the War and Navy Departments.

Claribel R. Barnett, chief librarian for the Agriculture Department and her assistant, Emma B. Hawks, will retire today, after running the library together since 1907, and working in the agency together since 1895.

Ralph Robert Shaw will be the new chief librarian.

Secretary Wickard praised the work of both Miss Barnett and Miss Hawks in building up a comprehensive and valuable collection of books and reference material.

Their library now contains some 300,000 volumes, handles 5,000 or more periodicals yearly.

Shaw is a native of Detroit and for the past four years has been chief librarian of the Gary (Ind.) Public Library.

Dr. Radin to Speak

Dr. Paul Radin, writer and anthropologist, will speak on "The Racial Myth" at the Bookshop, 916 Seventeenth Street Northwest, at 8:30 p. m. today. Dr. Radin is the author of "Social Anthropology and Primitive Man" and "The Racial Myth."

Mary Lee Abbott Is 'Glamour Girl' Debutante of 1941

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mary Lee Abbott, 19-year-old art student, today is the new "Glamour Girl Debutante" of the 1940-41 season by choice of a committee headed by James Montgomery Flagg, noted artist and illustrator.

ABBOTT

Miss Abbott, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Hoadley Monroe, is a product of the exclusive Miss Chapin's school. Her father, Henry Livermore Abbott, is attached to the Naval Intelligence Service in Washington.

The committee chose the blue-eyed, blond-haired 5-feet-2-inch Miss Abbott from among a group of debutantes at the American Women's clubhouse.

Egypt Premier Dies of Stroke In Parliament

Pasha Stricken During Speech Pledging Loyalty to Britain

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 14.—In the midst of reading King Farouk's speech from the throne expressing loyalty to Great Britain, Egyptian Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha crumpled to the floor and died today at the opening session of Parliament.

Sabry Pasha's voice faltered and grew weaker as he read. Then he fell. The minister of health, Dr. Aly Ibrahim Pasha, administered first aid, but the Premier was already dead—of appoplexy, the doctor said.

Deeply affected, King Farouk ordered that the body be removed to the premier's home in the royal ambulance.

Before setting out for the meeting of Parliament, the King had invested the premier with the insignia of the Grand Collar of Mohammed Ali, highest of Egyptian honors. The premier was wearing the collar when he died.

He collapsed only three feet from the King, whose eyes filled with tears when he was told the premier was dead.

The Government ordered a state funeral for tomorrow.

Reading of the speech was continued by the president of the Senate. In it the King said Egypt had made her alliance with Great Britain "with complete sincerity both in letter and spirit," had full confidence in her ally, and that her policy was to maintain friendship with all nations except Britain's enemies.

New K Street Overpass Opened To Traffic

Without ceremony the new $320,000 K Street overpass was opened to traffic yesterday at 10 a. m., when Inspector William Holmes, of the Traffic Bureau, removed the barricades.

All of the approaches in the modified clover leaf which lead from the K Street overpass to Rock Creek parkway have not been opened. Right turns may be made from K Street to Rock Creek Parkway going north, and from the northbound lane of the parkway up to the westbound lane of the overpass.

Other approaches will be opened within a short time, it was announced. Commercial vehicles are not allowed to use the parkway.

Contract Bridge

In bridge, as in poker, there is plenty of room for strategy, psychological coups and bluffs. Nothwithstanding the popular belief that women make poor poker players because they give away their hands, today we offer one of the slickest poker-bridge plays made in national competition, and this by a young woman. It resembles the "sandbagging" strategy that Ossie mentions in his poker book, in which a player passes with a big hand, hoping to trap an unwary and ambitious opponent.

The young woman cleverly bid an ace-king in her hand, never once falling to the temptation to lead them out. So she fooled the declarer into believing the honors were divided, and thus enabled her partner to win his jack. Just like a poker bluff, this play involved some risk, but at match-point duplicate the reward for setting the contract one trick was well worth it.

The contract was two spades by East, as shown in the box. South, the young woman defender, led the nine of hearts to the first trick. Declarer played small from dummy; North put on the king, returning the queen of diamonds. This was covered by declarer's king. South winning the ace and playing back a diamond. The jack took, and the diamond eight was trumped by East. Declarer next played the ace, king, queen of spades, exhausting the adversaries' trumps.

He cashed the queen of hearts and led a low club. South could see that the two diamonds and the heart were all the tricks her side could win in the red suits; therefore, if the contract was to be defeated, she and her partner would have to win three clubs.

This could be accomplished if declarer would finesse the club ten into her partner's possible jack. But it would mean that she would have to play a low club on the lead and risk losing the ace or king in the event her partner did not hold the jack, or declarer, sensing the situation, rushed up with the queen; for two heart discards were available in the dummy. If her strategy failed she would let declarer win an extra trick at his contract. If it succeeded he would be set one. There was no perceptible hesitation in South's play of the club four, for she had already made up her mind before declarer led his suit. East was completely fooled; he finessed the club ten, North won the jack, and the ace and king of clubs claimed the set. Declarer was defeated one trick at two spades, losing a heart, two diamonds and three clubs.

'The Mark of Zorro' Still Packs a Potent Wallop!

Tyrone Power Succeeds to Fairbanks Role In California 'Robin Hood,' at Capitol; 'Toppers' Revue Introduces New Comedian

"THE MARK OF ZORRO." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Johnston McCulley's story of "The Curse of Capistrano," adapted to the screen by Garrett Fort, Bess Meredyth and John Taintor Foote, starring Tyrone Power, with Linda Darnell, Basil Rathbone, Gale Sondergaard, Eugene Pallette, J. Edward Bromberg, Montagu Love, Janet Beecher, Robert Lowery, Chris-Pin Martin, George Regas, Belle Mitchell, Frank Puglia, Eugene Borden, Pedro de Cordoba and Guy D'Ennery. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

TYRONE POWER may not be another senior Fairbanks in steel-spring agility and iron-hearted daring, but the new Twentieth Century-Fox production of "The Mark of Zorro," the current celluloid charade on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, is an interesting and exciting picture, nevertheless. Within the limitations of a subject that has been made before and is familiar to all veterans of the cinema, that is.

BELL

Greatly to his credit, the capable and handsome Mr. Power—ranked second in box-office popularity last year—makes no attempt to ape his predecessor in a role that was recognized as one of the elder Fairbanks' triumphs. His portrayal of the part is an independent creation, perhaps a few shades less flamboyant, but effective and occasionally thrilling, nevertheless. As Power plays it, the character of Don Diego Vega takes on all of the aspects of a dual impersonation. He is seen first as a hard-drinking, hard-riding, duelling member of a crack regiment in Madrid. Called back to his native California, where his father has been deposed as Alcalde, in favor of a predatory clique bent on plundering the peons, Diego soon discovers the plight of his people and becomes the lone bandit, Zorro, who redresses all of their wrongs, with the aid of a belligerent Padre and the connivance of the niece of the flabby tyrant who has usurped his father's office and kindly power. Terrorizing the offenders by the accuracy of his aim and the skill of his sword, Diego masquerades, between times, as a dandified young fop whose exquisite effeminacy relieves him of all suspicion. When it comes time for the chief villain's undoing, Diego accomplishes the seemingly impossible by running him through in as pretty a bit of sword play as the screen has seen in recent years. The whole tempestuous business, of course, is in essence, is an Hispanic "Robin Hood."

The manner in which Power differentiates between the seemingly disinterested young dilettante and the daredevil desperado is as neat a bit of miming as he has ever unwrapped before the cameras. He rides like a Broncho Billy Anderson, fences like a Cyrano and makes love with all of the indolent unconcern of a blase, drawing-room Casanova. In the opposite role of Lolita Quintero, among the first to penetrate the secret of Zorro's identity, Linda Darnell falls far short of the star's convincing performance. There is about as much fire in her portrayal as there is in a wet match. Eugene Pallette's Fray Felipe likewise falls far short of conviction by conveying the impression of a modern gangster disguised in the cassock of a monk. Montagu Love, as the senior Vega; Gale Sondergaard, as the ambitious wife of his weak-kneed successor, and J. Edward Bromberg, the frightened Don Luis Quintero, give able accounts of themselves and their roles. Basil Rathbone, cast as the arch-villain, who spits himself so opportunely upon Diego's rapier, is, as usual in this sort of thing, incomparably fine. A huge ensemble lends lusty vigor to the film's battling finale.

Gene Ford's new "Toppers" stage revue is notable chiefly for the introduction of Danny Kaye to Washington audiences. The droll Mr. Kaye is not quite like any other comedian that has come along in recent months. His method of delivery is deliberate and quiet, his voice admirably adapted to exceptional caricatures in song and the Stokowskian use of his hands something to write home about. He also is a bit of a dancer. In fact, the lad seems to have everything and registered a substantial hit at yesterday's first performance.

That was true also of the familiar Allen & Kent dancing foursome that pits two generations against each other in modern taps and the old-time buck-and-wing and Irish jig. The Shyrettos, two boys and a girl, open the bill with a hazardous display of trick bicycle riding and stunts on towering unacycles that will make your breath come in short pants. They are followed by the Randall Sisters, a trio of Bessemer-lunged singers who clicked blatantly in the hill-billy manner. The Rhythm Rockets are in and out to fill up the chinks in a variety of colorful routines.

The Fox Movietone News, Art Brown's song-a-logue and Sam Jack Kaufman's "Mississippi Suite" overture, doing ample justice to Ferde Grofe's originality and musicianship, are the additional auxiliaries of a screen feature that still seems to be reasonably sure-fire, even if you remember the old, silent original that served the lamented Fairbanks so well a round 20 years ago.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Chicago, Nov. 14 (INS).—Most patriotic films have been so serious and heavy handed that it is a relief to hear that Warners have decided it is time to step in right away with their patriotic comedy, "Miss Wheelright Discovers America." Today Hal Wallis wired that the cast was now set with Olivia De Havilland, George Brent and Jeffrey Lynn in the top spots. Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay have rushed the script through on Leonard Speigelgass' amusing novel, with Kurt Bernhardt at the directorial helm, the picture will start some time around the Christmas holidays.

PARSONS

"Miss Wheelright" gives Oliva De Havilland a chance to be sparkling and gay.

Looks as if "Tug Boat Annie" had brought in Marjorie Rambeau's ship in a big way. She's launched on a brand new career as a character actress, for yesterday Darryl Zanuck handed her the fat role of Sister Bessie in "Tobacco Road." Next to Charley Grapewin's "Jeeter Lester" it is the biggest part in the picture.

Chicago Notes: Today June Preisser and Virginia O'Brien choo-choo in to join us. We hate to lose Ilona Massey but she's due back immediately for "New Wine," along with Alan Curtis who has been making the hit of his life in Chicago, his home town . . . Bob Cummings is upset over the report that he was unwilling to join our personals. He says it's the first he ever heard he'd been offered $3,000 a week for a picture—and that if it is true it's a secret from him . . .

Snapshots of Hollywood

Collected at Random: Hear that Eleanor Powell and Merrill Pye have said goodbye to romance; Lady Furness was the center of all eyes at Victor Hugo's in a party with Al DeLong, Robert Way and Kitty Kelly. But cameramen couldn't get her in a picture with Rudy Vallee; that Anklet Lupe Velez is wearing reads: "If lost return to Big Boy Williams;" Myrna Loy is out of the hospital and has moved to Palm Springs to recuperate; Barbara Elliott is taking all Mischa Auer's time and attention. They were at the Wilshire Bowl.

Victor Mature isn't giving Betty Grable a chance to change her mind. He's follow-York; Ed Marin, the M.-G.-M. producer, will marry Ann Morriss as soon as "Maisie Was a Lady" is completed; note to Hollywood bachelors: Cobina Wright, jr., won't accept two dates in a row with anyone because it starts "embarrassing romance rumors." So it was all just a beautiful friendship with Phil Kellog at the House of Murphy; Corrinne Griffith's ex, Walter Morosco has been squiring Natalie Draper around—two nights in a row at the Beverly Tropics.

Orry Kelly, who designs those lovely gowns the Warner glamor girls wear, has been handed a brand new contract. He's been there 10 years—quite a record if you ask me; Virginia Field still hasn't found out how the announcement of her engagement to Dick Greene broke in London. Her parents cabled they didn't do it and she hasn't heard from Dick in days.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Columbia

That kaleidoscopic, Technicolor carnival of congas, rumbas and tangos, released by Twentieth Century-Fox under the title of "Down Argentine Way," yesterday opened a rhythmic repeat engagement on F street at Loew's Columbia Theater. It is, in a manner of speaking, a field day for Carmen Miranda, Betty Grable, Don Ameche—whose Spanish accent, like some of his horses, sometimes gets out of control—Charlotte Greenwood, Henry Stephenson, J. Carroll Naish, Leonid Kinsky, Charles Judels and some of the most bedazzling night club specialists you ever have clapped an eye on.

The story—something about the sale of a lot of Argentine thoroughbreds in the United States and the love affair that swiftly shifts the scene of action to the pampas—is always subordinate to the trip-hammer succession of songs and dances in the Latin-American manner. What with the steeplechase and flat races, this incessant recurrence of musical interruptions and a high flow of comedy, there is never a dull moment.

Carmen Miranda sets the pace in an introductory flash and a later interval devoted to her inflammatory songs, but there is never a time when, the blond Grable, the elongated Greenwood, the irascible Stephenson and the slyly crooked Naish are not stepping on her heels.

The Technicolor treatment turned loose on the gay Spanish costumes and the natural and metropolitan beauties of Argentina is a triumph of vivid colors photographed with exceptional effect. The direction keeps things moving at a breakneck clip. Altogether, "Down Argentine Way" is no place to go for a nap.

The bill at the Columbia is rounded out, as goes without saying, by variegated short subjects and picturized news events.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 14.

The Indians aren't coming—they've arrived. We've had so many of them in "Santa Fe Trail," "North West Mounted Police," and "Hudson's Bay," which has now finished shooting. Only 40 Indians belong to the Guild, but at least a thousand are within call not far from Hollywood. One brave has such a wonderful face and is so good he's been standing out in all the pictures. He was pointed out to me the other day. I asked for an introduction, thinking I might get a story. Here it is: His name is Jerome De Nuccio, he's an Italian born on the Lower East Side of New York.

HOPPER

Buddy De Sylva, who will be here in a week to do "Caught in the Draft," has started acquiring fine paintings. He's just added a couple of Grant Woods, a Picasso, and a Van Gogh to his collection. And while seeking only the best, he became so interested I'll be darned if he isn't now painting himself.

"Maid in Havana" is again at work at Warners, which looks as though the dove of peace would light on Ann Sheridan. And the truth about George Raft and that studio is that they [illegible] to have a picture ready for him on a certain date. They didn't have one, and were pretty certain he wouldn't like "The Sea Wolf," so sent script on to New York. As you know, he turned it down, but it kept them from paying his salary, though he's still under contract to them.

The fabulous Morgan twins, Lady Furness and Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, are adding to the beauty of our night spots. I've never seen them look lovelier. Take a squint at Thelma's hands next time you see her. They're the most shapely in town. I'll bet before the winter's out they'll both be acting . . . Babs Hutton won't take a lease on Eddie Goulding's Palm Springs house unless she can have the two nearby. One is already accupied by Marlene Dietrich. Babs wants room over the holidays for 30 house guests, and as many servants.

Fritz Feld, because of an acting job, called his engagement period "solitaire confinement"

Reunited by Film After Five Years

On his way to Maine five years ago to play in summer "straw hat" stock, Allyn Joslyn met with an auto accident and could not get there in time to go on. His place was filled by an ambitious actor named Paul McGrath.

In Columbia's "This Thing Called Love," which co-stars Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas, Joslyn plays one of the important featured roles. In the cast also is McGrath. The film marks their first meeting since the Maine engagement.

CURIOSITY SHOW! George Brent in "THE MAN WHO TALKED TOO MUCH" and Lloyd Nolan in "THE MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 14.

MISTAKE: Count Rene de Chambrun, son-in-law of Pierre Laval, is leaving America to return to Vichy . . . Chambrun, seated with a group of his colleagues at the 21 Club, met Charlie Chaplin and began to enunciate some of the principles of the Vichy government. "Italy and France never should have warred against each other," he stated. "The people of Italy and France have much in common—but England kept them apart" . . . Chaplin listened, silently—and Chambrun continued . . . this time against the English people . . . "I think perhaps you should know this," Chaplin softly reminded him. "I'm an Englishman."

LYONS

UNITY: Senator Jim Watson, the veteran republican politican, is loath to accept the leadership of Wendell Willkie over his party's activities for the next four years. "To me," Watson explains, in referring to Willkie's previous engallment as a Democrat, "it's just like a sinner joining the church on Saturday night and then wanting to lead the choir on Sunday."

POWER: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., made an address in Chicago, where he heard the toastmaster describe him as the son of the man who came into power seven years ago . . . "It is not my father who is in power," was young Roosevelt's opening line. "It's the American people who are in power—and my father is merely their spokesman" . . . With that point settled, F. D., jr., began to enumerate the virtues of the New Deal, beginning with the days following the bank holiday. He prefaced this list by saying: "And in 1933 when my father came into power."

SWANK: Lewis Milestone, the director, just arrived in New York and Tuesday night he toured the newer cafes . . . "At one night club," he reported, "where the management admitted only the ultrasmart people of New York I recognized the doorman, who wore a tuxedo. He was an old, tough prize fighter, with cauliflower ears. I asked him: 'What are you doing here?' . . . He said: 'I work here at the door. My job is to keep out anybody I know.'"

GREETING: Bernard Baruch was instrumental in bringing, among others two young British refugees from London to New York. On the first day of their arrival Baruch arranged a dinner for the youngsters—a sentimental dinner, with food which was typically British. He took every possible precaution to prevent their becoming homesick . . . Then, satisfied with these preparations, Baruch sat down to dine with the children. The older child immediately placed a pea upon his knife—and flipped it at the tall, gray, dignified host.

RESULT: Former Gov. Cox of Ohio, who headed the Democratic ticket when Franklin D. Roosevelt was a candidate for Vice President 20 years ago, told this story on election night . . . After his campaign was over, Cox returned to Ohio and on the night of the election he sat in his newspaper office watching the returns posted on a screen across the street . . . The returns which were reported first showed: "Harding 424, Cox, 7 . . . Harding 1,284, Cox 27" . . . When the final results were in, an associate told Cox: "Well, it looks like the people have spoken" . . . "Yes, sighed the defeated candidate, "but they didn't have to speak so loudly."

CHATTER: Eve Curie will return to America on December 15 . . . John Justin, who has the leading role in the new movie, "The Thief of Bagdad," returned to England as soon as the picture was finished and joined the R. A. F.

Italy Avoided Naval Battle, Witness Says

British 'Padlocked' Warships in Harbor, Reporter Reveals

By Richard D. McMillan
United Press Staff Writer

With the British Mediterranean Fleet, Nov. 14.—The largest British armada seen in the Mediterranean since the outbreak of the war carried the fight right to Italy's shores challenging the Italian Navy to emerge.

I was aboard a heavy cruiser which, with a great array of other vessels ranging from battleships to heavy and light cruisers, steamed into Italian waters, affording a screen while aircraft in relays of bombers and torpedo-carriers attacked the Italian fleet as it swung peacefully in its lair.

Italians Avoid Risk

The role of the bombers not only was to attack but to drive some of the ships from the hundreds assembled in the harbor out to sea to face the British armada.

Lie a policeman on a beat, we steamed between the Greek islands and the heel of the boot of Italy. We sailed thus for more than 24 hours until it was evident that Il Duce had decided not to risk combat although his ships, despite the loss of battleships and heavy cruisers, still outmatched ours.

Italians 'Padlocked'

The historic attack on Taranto, concluding a 3,000-mile sweep of all parts of the Mediterranean, showed me that the British are able to padlock the Italian fleet in harbors whence they are reluctant to emerge, apparently fearing annihilation.

For days and nights we steamed to all corners of the Mediterranean, particularly the narrow waters of the Straits of Pantellaria hoping to bait the Italians into leaving port. As no response came to the invitation, it was decided the only chance of getting at grips with the enemy would be a rousing blow to Taranto, where it was known the main body of the Italian fleet reposed.

S O S Messages Fill Air

Pompom shells lit the sky and many-colored tracers streaked the heavens as a false alarm went off. In the distance the thunder of heavy guns was audible as the force which had gone ahead into the Taranto Straits got down to work of destruction of a convoy from Albania.

Simultaneously the air was filled with radioed S O S messages from sinking Italian ships.

Throughout the night our planes roared over the sea toward the Italian base. It finally was reported that two bombers had been lost.

Toward dawn the fleet began another sweep that lasted well into the afternoon, but not even an enemy plane was sighted, although more than two-score of ships offered a possible target for a skillful and courageous pilot.

Boy, 16, Is Hero

Air spotters from the Illustrious went to Taranto in daylight and saw the smashed derelict of a warship that had been sunk. It was resting on the bottom of the sea, waves lapping its decks and funnels. They saw other damaged ships, too.

One of the heroes of this set-to with the Italian air fleet was the youngest sailor on our cruiser, 16-year-old John Parker.

It was John's first taste of battle, and he worked heroically hoisting heavy cordite charges aboard an electrical lift to feed the six-inch batteries which proved deadly, scaring off the Italians as they sought to concentrated on the aircraft carrier.

"It was not bad fun," said John, when asked how he felt.

Germans Reported Asking Istanbul

of both parties on all questions of importance which are of interest to Germany and the Soviet Union."

The Germans declined to go beyond the scope of this official communique. It was learned, however, that in the exhaustive two-day conversations, of which personal conferences with Chancellor Hitler occupied more than seven hours, the entire range of Russo-German relations was discussed.

Sphere Reported Fixed

[Sources that "usually know," say an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin, declare that the Hitler-Molotoff talks fixed Russia's sphere of interest in the proposed authoritarian "new order" for Europe, Asia and Africa.

[This dispatch declared that there were reports that the Russian sphere, in general terms, would lie between Japan's Far Eastern zone and the dominance of Europe and Africa, which the Rome-Berlin Axis has allotted to itself. This would mean Russian expansion in middle Asia, although the position of the Near East and Turkey in this scheme was not made clear.

[The International News Service dispatch quoted a "Swedish report" in the London Daily Herald that Russia and Germany are demanding that Turkey yield Istanbul. According to this report, Turkey, given the alternative of accepting or facing war, was ordered to cede Istanbul to Russia and would, in return, be helped in expansion, probably through Syria or Iraq. This dispatch stated that "no one expects Turkey to accept the proposition.]

Molotoff Good Listener

It is understood in Berlin that Molotoff was not expected to assume any new commitments at this time. The object of his visit, it is believed, was to sound out the personal views of the highest German leaders. There can be no doubt that the visit in this respect was a success, for Molotoff proved a good listener in the course of his two-day discussion with the highest officials.

As a sequel to his visit it is expected in German quarters that the conversations inaugurated in Berlin will be renewed and continued on a broader basis. It is hoped, likewise, that their framework will be extended to include Japan.

German quarters reflected frank satisfaction with the attitude of the Russian delegation during the visit.

To what extent Russo-Chinese relations were examined in the exchanges with Hitler and von Ribbentrop is not known. It is believed, however, that this subject was touched upon only formally.

Whether and to what extent the Germans succeeded in winning over the Russians to participation in those wider projects concerning Eurasia must now be awaited. It is generally believed that further exchanges between the two governments will form an early sequence to the Berlin conferences.

"Model" Socialist State

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP).—Adolf Hitler told behind-the-lines workers today that Germany's greatest post-war duty would be to serve the world as a "model" socialistic state.

He addressed munitions workers and army labor groups while the public was learning the latest reports in the war against British commerce.

The high command announced destruction of eight British merchant ships, five by one submarine and the rest by bombing planes, and severe damage to another vessel.

The submarine sinkings totaled 28,840 tons, the daily communique said, but the time and place of the forays were not given.

Hitler declared that it is "a plutocratic, capitalistic England," dominated by "antisocial tendencies," which is waging war against "the German socialistic state."

"This struggle," he said, "is being carried on, not only by German soldiers, who are the best in the world, but also by many millions of workers in German factories and armament plants."

"Biggest Duty," He Says

The German state, he asserted, is "established on the firmest and strongest foundation possible" and, with her expanded production and the solidarity of the labor front, Germany "will carry through the fight and, after victory, the German socialistic state will be built as a model for the world.

". . . This mighty peacetime work is Germany's biggest duty after victory."

The high command recounted further "retaliatory" raids on London last night, despite "the most unfavorable weather," and declared that "numerous fires and explosions" resulted in northwest London, the West Indies docks, a big gas works and other "war-essential objectives" of the British capital.

Liverpool, Coventry and Birmingham also felt German bombs within the past 24 hours, it was said, and nighttime British stabs at Germany were acknowledged, but put down as "without noteworthy success."

During early morning air raids on Berlin, Germany claimed to have shot down five British planes over the capital.

Reporters See Plane Explode

[During the air raid in the early hours of this morning, a New York Times correspondent saw a British plane, apparently directly hit, blow up in midair, scattering flares, signal lights, sparks, and a huge cloud of black smoke. The remains of the plane were reported to have crashed in the western part of Berlin.

[It was an amazing and frightening sight, together with another American newspaperman the writer had sallied forth to find the wreckage of a plane brought down in the south of the city. While the two were driving back to the office, the guns began to boom once more, and star-like shellbursts sprinkled the night sky.

[Directly overhead, where the shells were exploding, came a sudden flash of intense yellow light. Parachute flares and red and green signal lights sprayed out, and a shower of sparks blossomed like ghastly fireworks. A second later a hollow boom shook the ground. It was more like a shock than a noise.

Templetons Escape Crash

Alec Templeton, 28-year-old blind concert pianist, his bride of three months, Juliette, and his father, Andrew Bryson Templeton, were saved from death or serious injury yesterday when the necessity of his attending a radio rehearsal in Chicago forced the party to leave Washington by plane instead of auto.

Templeton's chauffeur, Elbert Birge, 39, colored, was killed, and Mrs. Flossie Richards, 38, was injured when the Templeton auto collided with a truck near La Porte, Ind., according to Associated Press. Birge was driving the auto back to Chicago, where the Templetons live.

The musician and his family had left the Washington Airport by plane yesterday morning and arrived in Chicago at noon. Informed of the fatal accident, Templeton said:

"Birge was a lovable little fellow and in the past had acted as a valet and manservant as well as chauffeur. I had to fly in order to make a radio rehearsal."

Templeton, who is featured on the N. B. C. network on a Friday evening program, came to Washington last Saturday and played for President Roosevelt at the annual Press Club dinner that night, journeyed to New York Monday to attend a performance of "Louisiana Purchase," returned to Washington Tuesday to attend Fritz Kreisler's recital here and play for the Women's Press Club, and presented his own recital Wednesday night at Constitution Hall.

Fort Myer Rites Set Tomorrow For Col. Webb

Funeral services for Col. Louis Harward Webb, 52, U. S. Army Reserves, who died Tuesday at Veterans' Hospital in New York City, will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Oakes, N. C., Col. Webb was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1908 and Jefferson Medical College in 1910. He served in the Army Medical Corps throughout the World War, rising to the rank of captain.

Following the armistice Capt. Webb became connected with the United States Public Health Service. He served successively as manager of veterans' hospitals at Loncoln, Nebr.; Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Muskeegee, Okla.; Legion, Tex., and Sun Mount, N. Y.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary T. Webb; two sons, L. H. Webb, jr., of Mount Holly, N. J., and Fred Webb, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. James F. Garard, of Port Arthur, Tex.

THESE CANTONMENT BARRACKS AT FORT MEADE WILL BE OCCUPIED BY DISTRICT AREA SELECTEES WHEN THEY ARE COMPLETED. THEY ARE PART OF THE ARMY POST'S RECEPTION CENTER

Meade Is Ready for Trainees

Still marked by its years as a World War training center, Fort George G. Meade, Md., once again is preparing to receive thousands of young civilians and turn them out as fighting men.

The fort, between Washington and Baltimore, rings to the sound of hammer and saw; tall wooden buildings spring up from the ground almost overnight. And even as the 1940 cantonment grows, young men from Washington and nearby States filter through its reception center to be equipped as soldiers and moved out to combat units.

November 22 the first of the Selected Service men from the Third Corps Area will begin arriving. With well-oiled precision, they will be uniformed, assigned to barracks and temporary instruction companies, and a brief preliminary touching up will be given them before they are ready for training. Until the fort's 1,500-man reception center for selectees is completed, the new men will occupy brick barracks vacated by regulars.

Meanwhile, many young fellows have decided not to wait for the Selective Service Act to work its way around to them. They are flocking to Fort Meade and what happens to them after they get there is what will happen to the Selected Service men when their time comes.

Here is a picture story of the effect of an expanding Army on Fort George G. Meade and on the men who become part of its living force.

DISTRICT SELECTEES will have three large meals a day at tables like this, the meals cooked in modern kitchens. As members of the world's best-fed Army, men will learn that mess call means plenty of what a soldier needs to make him healthy

A SQUADRON like this in the barracks now occupied by the Seventieth Tank Battalion will be used by Selective Service men from the District area. Additional barracks to be occupied by tank and antitank troops are nearing completion

Chest Gifts Help Blind and Hard of Hearing

"F . . .

By Barry Sullivan

Sight and hearing handicaps take longer, are harder to conquer than other physical shortcomings, but can be surmounted by effort and compensating training.

To help handicapped Washingtonians get the upper hand on these difficulties is the business of the Department for the Blind of the Family Service Association and the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing.

Both Community Chest agencies begin with the premise that these physical defects are part of a general need for adjustment to the world.

"We treat blindness as just another handicap to be overcome and then try to convince our clients to go on as normally as possible," Miss Stella Plants, executive of the Department for the Blind, relates.

Her department, which receives approximately $8,000 from the Chest, works both with the blind and their families to secure adjustments which will permit the blind to stand on their own feet.

For example, a blind girl who had never opened her own Federal assistance check was encouraged to do so. Of course, the check had to be turned over to a member of her family to cash, but the fact she opened it convinced her that she would be permitted to be "as independent as possible."

Relatives frequently have to be convinced not to "take so much care" of their blind, Miss Plants asserts.

On the other hand, some parents have to get away from their rejection of a "different" child who is blind.

But besides its work of family adjustment, the department also keeps a register of all the blind in Washington and stands to give them advice and aid when possible. Financial assistance is a minimized part of its program.

Not infrequently the department acts as an information clearing house. Although it directs no vocational projects itself, it ascertains where needed training can be obtained.

"We try to find out what the blind need and then go hunt for the facilities to help them," Miss Plants emphasizes. "We don't try to fit our clients into any preconceived program."

By similar procedures the Society for the Hard of Hearing helps its members and students to adjust themselves to the world in which they live.

. . . th . . .

As a result of the society's efforts, tests are to be made in the District schools to locate children with deficient hearing.

As part of its own program, the society, which receives approximately $2,700 annually from the Chest, conducts lip-reading classes for the hard of hearing and maintains club rooms for them.

Groups learning lip reading or participating in its social activities or welfare work, such as sewing for the Red Cross, range from children to men and women in their eighties.

The problem of the hard of hearing has been complicated by the fact many have not reached absolute deafness., Since theirs is not an absolute and complete handicap, as is blindness, aid has been slower in coming to them. Lacking assistance initiated outside their numbers, they have taken the first step themselves in overcoming their difficulty.

"There are 10,000,000 and more of us in the United States and those of us who are organized are making a cheerful effort to improve the lot of the 10,000,000," one of their pamphlets states. "We are the first group of handicapped persons to undertake and accomplish our own rehabilitation."

Scouting Flagship Returns From Caribbean Patrol

All shipshape and fresh from a cruise in the troubled Caribbean, the 8,000-ton cruiser Richmond docked yesterday at the Navy Yard.

She brought to Washington Rear Admiral William Lowe Friedell, submarine commander of the Scouting Force, whose flagship she is, and 35 officers and 600 men. Early yesterday morning she picked up a Potomac River pilot at Piney Point and at 1:15 p. m. the first gun of her 13-gun salute to the commandant of the Navy Yard boomed across the narrow Anacostia River. The Navy Yard answered with a 7-gun salute for her commander, Capt. C. J. Bright, as she swung in the turning basin to dock.

Leaving the submarine base at Honolulu October 5, the Richmond touched first at San Diego, then passed through the Panama Canal and visited Coco Solo, Canal Zone; Guananamo, Cuba, and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, where Admiral Friedell inspected submarine bases. From the Caribbean the Richmond went to New London, Conn., which she left Tuesday morning for Washington.

The Richmond will remain at the Navy Yard until the morning of November 20. She will leave then for an unannounced destination on the Atlantic Coast.

British Shells Pound Duce's Force in Sudan

R. A. F. Bombs Bari In Italy, Albanian Port, and Sidi Barrani

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 14 (By Wireless).—British fighting patrols yesterday continued to engage the Italians in both the Kassala and Gallabat areas of the Sudan, but the tactical situation remains unchanged. The Italians are suffering heavy casualties from British artillery fire, and both outposts remain in British hands, according to tonight's communique.

Yesterday morning long range bombers of the Royal Air Force raided Bari in Italy for the first time, setting fire to an oil refinery and causing considerable other damage. Other warplanes bombed Durazzo, the Albanian port, guided to their target by a fire set the previous night and still burning fiercely. The latest raid caused further damage. Valona, Albania, was attacked and ammunition dumps and truck concentrations were hit. The airdrome at Argyrokastron in southern Albania was raided, bombs starting three blazes and damaging two grounded Italian airplanes.

In the western desert on the Libyan front British bombers attacked Sidi Barrani, Derna, Bardia and Benghazi, and did considerable damage. At Derna a large fire was started as a result of bombing the barracks, and at Benghazi ships moored alongside the mole were bombed.

Alexandria last night suffered the heaviest air raid since beginning of the war, casualties resulting among the civilian population. Two alarms sounded and many bombs were dropped. Among the casualties were some killed.

toes, eggs and chickens also were 'bootlegged.'"

"All travelers through Spain report men, women and children begging for food in every city.

"From my observations it appeared Spain's condition was even more serious than that of France, which observers agree faced a winter of extreme privation, if not actual starvation.

Can't Live Off Country

"Press dispatches, permitted to pass the Madrid censor, report that Spain's economic and food supply condition is so serious any military adventure might be disastrous.

"Even if Spain should permit transit of German troops to attack Gibraltar, observers believe the Germans would have to carry their own food and supplies, for it would be impossible to live off the country as Nazi forces did in Poland, France and other invadedc ountries.

"Spain's flirtations withthe Axis powers, some believe, continue chiefly because some Spanish officials consider the only quick remedy for Spain's plight is a successful invasion of France's African colonies with their supplies of foodstuffs and raw materials."

Connie Bennett, Gail Patrick Of Screen Awarded Divorces

Two Hollywood actresses shed themselves of husbands yesterday, one in Reno and the other in Los Angeles.

GAIL

In Reno, at a brief hearing, glamorous Constance Bennett was freed from her third husband, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudraye, on grounds of desertion. The marquis is reported to be somewhere in France.

In Los Angeles, Gail Patrick won a decree freeing her from her 4-year-old marriage to Robert H. Cobb, Hollywood restaurant executive and vice president of the Hollywood baseball club. She charged cruelty.

Miss Bennett, eldest of the three daughters of Richard Bennett, and the marquis were married in 1931. He was the third husband of Gloria Swanson.

Miss Bennett eloped with Chester Moorehead in 1921; that marriage was annulled two years later. In 1924 she became the wife of Phillips Plant; she divorced him in 1929.

"CONNIE"

Miss Patrick told a Los Angeles judge she couldn't get along with her husband.

"How long had you known this man before you married him?" the judge asked.

"Two years and a half," the actress replied.

"Surely, in that length of time you should have been able to find out what his disposition was," the judge countered.

"Well, you see, we're both Irish," Miss Patrick replied with a smile.

She said Cobb was moody and morose for weeks.

Dartmouth Club Told Pilot Training Helps Aviation

The civilian pilot training program "has been a tremendous shot in the arm" for aviation but is not supporting the industry, Arthur G. Norwood, former educational consultant to the Civil Aeronautics Authority, last night told the Dartmouth Club of Washington.

"The requirement that each service receiving funds under the program have two instructors and two licensed planes for each ten Government students has aided the development of Government schools," he said.

"This is especially true," he explained, "because additional private students are needed to keep these planes and instructors busy."

Herbert F. Woods was named president at the meeting at the Roger Smith Hotel. Vice presidents chosen were Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire; Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire; Fred Pierce, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, District Court; former Justice Wendell P. Stafford, of District Court. N. Page Worthington was named secretary-treasurer and James L. Pimper, assistant. The following were elected to the executive committee: W. F. Bazio, Dave McCoy, Dick White, Larry C. Reeves and Charles Grant.

20 Recruits Go To Cooks' School

Twenty enlisted men from regiments in the Twenty-ninth Division, which includes National Guardsmen from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, are among 90 ordered to the Cooks and Bakers School at Fort George G. Meade, Md., the War Department announced yesterday.

Two Washington men now at the school are Pvt. (first class) Alex Arany and Pvt. (first class) George J. Baur, jr., both of Headquarters and Service Company, One Hundred and Twenty-first Engineers.

Troops Had Been in Transit to Norway; Soviet Pressure Seen

By Bernard Valery.

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 15.—From the most reliable private source this correspondent learns that German troops in transit to Norway via Finland who were stationed in that country awaiting transit facilities and also those troops and military police who were building the necessary barracks and manning transit points, started returning to Germany early this week and today practically no German troops are on Finnish soil.

The reason for the withdrawal of these troops is naturally not known, but the coincidence of this surprising move with Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff's visit to Berlin permits one to suppose the Russians suggested to the Germans that the negotiations would go on in a much friendlier atmosphere if the German troops—although they were in transit and insignificant in number—were withdrawn from proximity to the Russian frontier and the Petsamo nickel mines, which, in virtue of a recent but undisclosed agreement between Russia, Germany and Anglo-Canadian interests, Russia intends to exploit.

Amos' Wife Sues, Blames Time He Spends With Andy

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Leta Gosden today sued for divorce from Freeman Gosden, the Amos of radio's Amos 'n' Andy. She charged mental cruelty. The Gosdens have been married 13 years and have two children.

She said her husband's radio work required so much of his time that it was impossible for them to live a normal home life.

Gloria Jean Ill, Visit Here Delayed

Gloria Jean, 13-year-old singing star of the films, who was expected to arrive in the Capital today for a three-day visit in conjunction with the local opening of her latest picture, "A Little Bit of Heaven," yesterday was confined to her bed in Bridgeport, Conn., with a sore throat and fever and forbidden by her physicians to travel, according to word received here last night.

The message stated that Gloria, accompanied by her mother, tutor and younger sister, would entrain for this city as soon as the doctors give their consent, possibly arriving in time for the Variety Club's annual dinner and dance tomorrow night, at which she is scheduled to appear as a guest of honor.

Bishops Protest Trend in Films

The archbishops and bishops of the Catholic Church in annual session here, announced yesterday that the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures had voiced strong protest against the "increasing objectionable tendencies which lately have become manifest in films."

"Evidence is accumulating that there is a partial return to practices against which the voice and authority of the Catholic Church in the United States vigorously protested in 1934," the committee said.

"We urge our catholic people, especially parents, to renew their vigilance against the pernicious influence of films which disregard the moral law and subvert the foundations of Christian society.

The Berlin Mystery

In contrast with what happened at the meeting of German and Russian statesmen at Moscow in August of last year, the recent Berlin parley has resulted in no published agreement. All that the world has been vouchsafed concerning what was accomplished in the exchange of views between Premier Molotoff and the Nazi leaders is that they "led to mutual accord on all important questions of interest to Germany and the U. S. S. R."

This may mean much or it may mean little. Since a formal agreement binding Russia to the Axis would have much needed propagandist value to Germany and Italy at this time, the fact that no treaty has been announced at the conclusion of the Berlin meeting is a revealing circumstance. Inspired reports out of Berlin declare, however, that the Molotoff visit resulted in a manifestation of readiness by the Reich to give Russia a "Grossraum" in the vast region lying between the Japanese sphere in Asia and the German-Italian sphere in Europe.

In other words, the Germans are ready to compensate Russia for her support of the German-Italian arrangement for a "new world" by permitting her to gobble up various and sundry parts of the British Empire. But since the British Empire is still very much alive and kicking, the Kremlin may find the German offer not entirely satisfactory. The Germans and Italians are in no position to help Russia acquire that "Grossraum" as, in fact, they are in no position to hinder her were she prepared to go after it on her own.

To be sure these inspired reports, which are designed to fill the vacuum created by the absence of positive agreement, may be only a smokescreen to hide secret commitments jointly entered into by Russia and Germany. Events alone can show whether that is the case. The test will be the effect of the Berlin meeting on Turkey's attitude.

Allied to Great Britain, Turkey is also intent on maintaining her friendship with the Soviet Union. The degree to which the Ankara government veers from the position she has so far maintained of opposition to a German drang nach osten will reveal the extent to which Russia has agreed to cooperate with the Axis.

Planes And Battleships

The remarkable exploit of British naval bombers in putting out of commission three Italian battleships lying at anchor in the great naval base at Taranto has given comfort and encouragement to those who have argued that air power plays a decisive role in modern warfare. The cry is again being heard that the airplane has made the battleship obsolete.

Actually the Battle of Taranto proves nothing of the sort. What it does prove is that air power is an essential and indispensable adjunct of sea power. In other words, Great Britain's victory was first and foremost a victory for her fleet, although one accomplished by means of the naval air force.

To get within close bombing range of Taranto the British planes had to be based on an aircraft carrier which, according to reports, approached within 100 to 150 miles of the Italian base. It was thus possible for the British to strike and strike effectively. Even then the outcome might have been very different had Taranto been adequately defended from the air. Its only defense, so far as can be determined, consisted of antiaircraft guns. That is why the British were so much more successful at Taranto than the Italians have been in their repeated raids on Malta and Alexandria.

The airplane has extensively modified sea as well as land warfare. In fighting in Poland, Norway, the Low Countries and France the German luftwaffe worked in the closest cooperation with the German ground forces. This circumstance, together with superiority in numbers and material and first-rate staff work, was largely responsible for the remarkable German victories.

In Greece during the past fortnight we have had an example of poor Italian staff work and a lack of coordination between the Italian ground and air forces, although the latter was in part the result of unfavorable weather conditions. The weakness of the Italian air force was further demonstrated at Taranto. And this weakness in the air has tended further to reduce the effectiveness of Italian sea power. By the same token, however, the Battle of Taranto is rightly being regarded as a first-class British naval victory.

Because of it the British will be in a better position to destroy supply vessels sent from Italy to Libya and Albania and to tighten up the blockade. On the other hand, German air power alone, supported though it has been by submarine warfare, has had only partial success in carrying out Hitler's counterblockade of Britain.

The importance of sea power as a decisive factor in modern war has been emphasized rather than minimized by the Taranto episode. But the battle that took place there does bring out in vivid form the fact that sea power is no longer two-dimensional but three-dimensional. It needs the support of air power.

The Adjournment Issue

Congress remained in session throughout the period of the Presidential campaigns for two reasons: 1. Legislators were loath to quit Washington during a world crisis. 2. Neither the House nor the Senate had completed its work.

Now that the question of a final adjournment of the Seventy-sixth Congress has once more arisen, the same tests ought to be applied. President Roosevelt has let it be known that he will request no new legislation before the new Congress meets on January 3. Perhaps there will be no necessity for the enactment of any emergency bills during the next six weeks. But it should not be forgotten that President Roosevelt saw no necessity for Congress to remain in session last June. Since then the Seventy-sixth Congress has enacted several measures more vital to the national welfare than any action it had previously taken.

There has been little change in the international situation since Congress decided that its continued presence in Washington was desirable. An adjournment now might leave the impression that Congressmen were chiefly interested in making a show of devotion to duty while the campaigns were in progress. Certainly that would be the case if an adjournment should be voted before important bills awaiting action have been accepted or rejected.

The fact is, of course, that Congress has not yet completed its work. Only revision of a conference report and its approval by both houses is essential to complete action on the important Ramspeck bill permitting extension of the civil service. Should Congress fail to work out these finishing touches, a laborious legislative effort would have to be repeated when that body reassembles. Similarly the District reorganization bill passed by the House will be lost if the Senate fails to send it on to the President.

Assurance has been given to proponents of the Walter-Logan bill, moreover, that they will have an opportunity to bring up this measure in the Senate before the present Congress passes into history. The proposal to clarify and strengthen the rights of citizens to have the acts of administrative agencies reviewed in the courts has already passed the House. If there is no pressure for emergency legislation, the next few weeks would seem to afford an excellent opportunity for the Senate to dispose of this controversial issue.

Some sponsors of the bill have expressed fear that its enactment would bring forth a Presidential veto. But if Congress should fail to legislate because its acts may be vetoed, control over national policy would, in large measure, be surrendered to the Executive. The Walter-Logan bill presents a complicated and controversial issue which should be thoroughly analyzed with the aid of expert advice. Nevertheless, the responsibility for deciding that issue rests upon Congress and it should not be sidestepped on any such flimsy pretext.

Earthquakes And Oil

So far as geologists here can determine, there is no basis in experience for the reported belief that the Rumanian earthquake may have shifted oil deposits. The ooze found outside the old fields, they suggest, may have been squeezed through faults in the earth. It doesn't necessarily indicate that the underground pool has moved.

Geologically the effects of earthquakes have varied with the individual well. After California's severe temblors of 1933, some wells became more productive because the shocks removed obstructions. The flow from others slackened. But the oil didn't go away.

Damage to equipment is a different matter. As an official of the Geological Survey observed, earthquakes "raise the dickens" with casings. It is freely admitted in Rumania that refineries and other machinery have been damaged. However, it is asserted that Germany has been able to transport only a third of Rumania's oil output and that such an amount will be available without interruption. Fires are said to have been kept under control, and pipelines and railroads which remove the oil are apparently intact.

If all these claims are true, the problem narrows itself to the condition of ports and cross-country railroads. Time will be required to repair buckled tracks and collapsed bridges. If it is correct that 65 per cent of the homes at Giurgiu have been destroyed, that city's shipping facilities may have been badly damaged. Since Giurgiu is the chief oil port on the Danube, wreckage there would affect the annual race to get a large quantity of oil up the river before the winter freeze. And to a war machine whose lifeblood is oil, even temporary strangulation would be a serious handicap.

Glory That Is Greece

Herodotus has described the amazement of the Persians when they beheld a comparative handful of Athenian hoplites charging down the slope to the Plain of Marathon. "They thought them," says he, "a set of lunatics rushing to certain destruction."

The Italians, who scarcely a fortnight ago marched blithely into Greece with banners flying, must have felt much as did the soldiers of the Great King when they encountered serious resistance to their advance. For in numbers and equipment the legions of Mussolini outweighed the Greek forces little less than the armies of Darius outweighed them more than 2,400 years ago.

As of today, the rout of the Italians in the mountains of northwestern Greece seems as complete as the rout of the Persians at Marathon, where they were driven to the sea and whence a remnant escaped in galleys. Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, who was rushed by plane to command the disordered Italo-Albanian armies, now appears wholly intent upon withdrawing as many of his regiments as possible before the remainder is outflanked and overwhelmed. And as the coup de grace to the whole campaign, the British have inflicted disastrous losses upon the Italian navy off the coast of Albania.

It is not yet known what experts Mussolini may have consulted before launching this ill-destined expedition; but even though these may have included the German general staff, it is evident that he was no less deceived by them than Darius by the oracle of Delphi. Details as to the action in the Pindus are still meager. But, as at Marathon, this issue appears to have been decided by the superior maneuverability of the small Greek units against huge unwieldly forces of an enemy overburdened by baggage and entangled among his own supply columns in the narrow mountain roads.

The Battle of Marathon, destroying Darius' dream of a new world order under Asiatic hegemony, is considered, as every schoolboy knows, one of the great crossroads of history. It marked the coming to age of a European culture, wholly different in its inward nature, from any of the great civilizations that had preceded it. This difference arose largely from a new concept of the nature of man as an individual. After nearly 25 centuries, survival of that concept again appears to hinge upon the outcome of a life-and-death struggle among armies.

But neither the Athenians nor the other peoples of Greece could be sure that the victory at Marathon was decisive. They knew that Darius would reorganize his armies and return. Similarly it is much too early to say that the victory of the present-day Greeks in the Pindus Mountains, which is the first major defeat of the Axis powers, marks also a turning point in the present world conflict. But signs that this may indeed be the case are not lacking.

Mr. Flynn's Precedent

One precedent set by Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, gives him a distinction that should not be overlooked. Mr. Flynn lays no claim upon the Postmaster Generalship. Indeed, he insists that he does not intend to accept any Federal position as a reward for piloting his party to victory in the recent election contest.

Party chairmen who do not wish to become Postmaster General and to dispense the spoils of victory from that office are a rare phenomenon. For many years it has been the custom to use this Cabinet post as a sort of patronage headquarters. That has been true under both Democratic and Republican administrations. James A. Farley went so far as to retain his post of Democratic chairman during the seven years he served as head of the Government's largest business organization.

Whatever may be Mr. Flynn's reasons for not wishing to follow this example, the divorce now effected between the postal and patronage systems is salutary. Postmasters General should invariably be chosen for their ability to direct a vast business enterprise. Nor is there any place in the present set-up for a high official dispenser of patronage. Congress has forbidden Government employes to participate actively in partisan movements or organizations. The Hatch Act makes the dual role heretofore played by the Postmaster General obsolete.

There will be few, if any, to regret the shattering of this tradition. Mr. Flynn's sensible decision will put all future party chairmen under heavy obligation to show cause for any deviation from his precedent.

"Proof of man's mental superiority lies in the fact that he is the only animal that laughs," declares a psychologist. That isn't proof. Nine times out of ten when he laughs it's at some fool thing another man did.

In The Administration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re Mr. Lindley's present plea to put Mr. Willkie into some responsible Government position, hasn't he yet learned that the majority of the voters cast their ballots to keep him out?

What is there "on the record" (with apologies to Miss Thompson) to justify such disregard of the will of the majority? Surely not in his services to the utilities nor in the pseudo acclaim that hoodwinked the G. O. P. convention in Philadelphia can anything commendable for Mr. Willkie be found.

If Mr. Willkie wants a Government job, and can qualify, let him apply to the Civil Service Commission. Isn't it about time we permitted the defeated candidate to enjoy his defeat?

Faithful Russia!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of November 11 you suggest the possibility of Russia selling her friend and ally down the river. You seem to forget that Russia is no longer ruled by Trotsky and his gang. Never in Russia's history has she been known to sell her friends down the river. It is not in the nature of Russians to do so.

It is hardly possible to hate communism more than I do, but I will be the first to admit that the Bolshevik Molotoff is a great patriot and an honest man. And Stalin and Molotoff will get far better concessions for China and the people of China by a mutual agreement with Japan than we ever will by threats, abuse and name-calling.

Union Dues

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the two letters in The Post, signed A Unioneer, of November 2, and Carpenter, of November 7, I have about come to the conclusion that the writers were just two poor Pegierized unfortunates.

I have been a member of several labor unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. for more than 40 years and in every city, town or hamlet in which I have floated, without funds, the first place I would apply for help would be to the union of my craft, and, in all sincerity, I have never been refused that help; each union seemed more than anxious to have me as a member.

When I pleaded lack of funds to pay the initiation fee I found provisions had been made through the unions' by-laws to allow me to work and pay in small installments each week until the fee was paid. However, the period of sick relief or pension would not start until the entire fee had been paid in full.

Amazing as it may seem, men who are supposed to possess an average amount of intelligence have been so blind to the true meaning of organized labor, men who demand the high standard and safe conditions labor has brought about, yet tell of being victimized when asked to pay their part to maintain this humane organization that has proved its ability to protect and defend him.

Direction Of Finnish Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an article in The Post of November 10, 1940, Ernest Lindley says: "Electorate Approved New Deal Reforms," and under that statement discussed the subject of "how racial groups voted." Among other things he stated that, "the Finns . . . are mostly anti-British, feeling that Great Britain let down Finland in the war with the Soviet Union. In this group Roosevelt probably lost some votes which were with him in 1936."

There is no disagreement with Mr. Lindley's conclusion as to the approval of the New Deal reforms; however, it is with a great shock and deep grieving that one notes that Mr. Lindley has found occasion to cast a canard upon a certain group of voters. The assertion as to the Finnish anti-British feeling is a statement which requires a most vigorous protest; the statement, as made, is misleading in one respect and is not based on fact in another.

As to the allegation that this anti-British feeling arose out of Great Britain's failure to aid Finland in the recent war with the Soviet Union, there is reason to believe that the statement is erroneous. It may be true that the Finns were sorely disappointed in Great Britain's failure to render some effective aid to their mother country in her hour of need, but it was not necessarily in anger that they contemplated this failure, rather, it was with a feeling of sadness and pity toward a nation which then showed every indication of being utterly incapable of meeting the task she had assumed—that of saving democracy in the world.

True, there have been occasions since the termination of the Russo-Finnish War when even those patient Finns well could have become aroused because of British interference with the shipment of direly needed relief supplies to Finland. However, the assertion that Americans of Finnish stock have forsaken their allegiance to President Roosevelt because of these disappointments arising from the muddling of British naval authorities is, to put it mildly, somewhat stretching the imagination and credulity.

Here are the actual election returns for November 5, 1940, for just a few typical Finnish communities in northern Minnesota where there is a heavy concentration of people of this stock:

Town	For Roosevelt	For Willkie
Township of White	1,091	192
Township of Biwabik	800	222
Mount Iron	651	143
Winton	105	18
Township of Morse	329	88
Township of Colvin	128	31
Township of Sandy	97	16
Fairbanks	112	18
Angora	130	35
Embarras	285	36
Alango	201	32
Township of Pike	189	29
Willow Valley	97	8
Township of Wuori	83	18
Township of Cherry	179	17
Township of Balkan	237	60
Waasa	151	16
Kalevala	197	45
Knife Falls	663	111
Township of Thomson	527	228

In view of the above, the surmise that there was a defection among the Finnish voters from Franklin D. Roosevelt would appear to have been entirely unwarranted.

Harry Hopkins

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can hold in no longer—I rush to toss my wilderness-encompassed voice into type. I want to scream that they are unjust when they continue to smear Harry L. Hopkins.

I heard that smugly said "another crackpot" again last night and I saw that no matter how little it helped, I was going to put in an honest word for Harry Hopkins.

He didn't hand me any favors. I'm not a friend of his family. I met him years ago when I was a tramp athlete in college. I've seen him only once since, but that day I put him down as a truly honest man.

But since I've listened to his speeches, I've read what he's had to say about economics and sociology and after 15 years, he's the same honest, sincere man.

When he was administrator of the Work Projects Administration I waited to hear how he would talk. There was no pussyfooting, no compromising with his principles. Speaking to a conference of State administrators in 1937, he said:

"Some people say that people at the bottom of the economic ladder lived that way all their lives, that they are happy living that way, that they don't amount to anything anyhow. Well, I don't believe that. I don't share that philosophy. I don't believe that they are poor because they are bad."

Harry Hopkins knew what he was talking about. He had studied sociology, taught it, lived with it. His statement there was not an idle theory.

He has been made to look bad, yes. Just as are many honest men easy prey of the barbed tongues of conniving, professional politicians.

He could not find it in himself to employ the hot-cold, high-low swing tactics. Had he sought to grind a personal ax, had he been selfish and ambitious, he had the opportunity to equivocate his way to a brilliant political career.

If he were less sensitive, I would not mind these malignings, these skinning-knife attacks. He has never been a politician and because of that he has been made a scapegoat.

He has never for expedience read sophistry from the lines of his textbooks, but only the clear, big facts which are there for any honest-thinking man to understand. He has a great mind, yet it is not in his make-up to use that intelligence for personal gain. I think sometimes it is because he has not done so that he has inspired such vicious attacks from men in private and in public life.

Police Integrity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am deeply moved by the concern that Mr. Harman has for my welfare—the welfare of a secondhand dealer who is a stranger to him. And my gratitude is such that I want to relieve him of his trepidation that the police may have articles of mine that I have forgotten about.

No. They have no such articles. And when, after 40 years of keeping a record of any article taken from you by the police, your record shows that every article has been returned, either to you or to the owner in your presence, you begin to acquire confidence in the integrity of the Police Department.

Let me hasten also to assure Mr. Harman that the monastic life he would prescribe for the police has to the best of my knowledge been maintained by them in all rigor. I said that I have offered a detective a drink. I did not say he accepted it. Horrors!

The Post Impressionist

Old Shaggy Bear

OLD MAN UTZ, landlord of our shack on the Shenandoah, seemed to think the girls were the first wildlife in the region since the last panther was killed on Green Mountain. The feeling was mutual. Patricia, blond, unpredictable, and unofficial camp mascot, claimed that Old Man Utz only visited because the girls wore shorts. The Judge, whose campsite was only a whoop-and-holler up river, said that Old Man Utz was an incorrigible individualist who merely wanted an audience for his jokes and tall stories.

Learning that we visited up river for weekly sessions of Jeffersonian philosophy and juleps, our landlord reminded us that the Judge fined him $5 one time for dip-netting off his own land.

Old Man Utz would sputter and smear tobacco juice through his beard stubble with the back of a hand big as a ham hock. "Why goddammit," he'd say, "I grubbed this land a-fer the Jedge was dry behint his years. I come here with only the Old Lady, a horse and spring wagin. Warn't nobody here then but me and Old Man Joe's folks."

EVERY evening we would hear the chain rattle and a dull thud as Old Man Utz tossed his rock anchor into the skiff and poled out into the current to drift down to our shack and tie up below the back stoop. He would never accept a chair, but preferred to sit in the doorway, or rare back on his haunches against the wall.

Conversation was usually based upon the tireless monologue of Old Man Utz. Frequently, after winking slyly at Patricia, who was accepted by our landlord as the embodiment of all the beauty and ignorance of a city, Old Man Utz would venture rather Rabelaisian anecdotes about such subjects as hired girls, airplanes, traveling salesmen, school marms, ministers and county agents. Although many items were stock jokes, Old Man Utz gave them a rich personal flavor and transformed the most prosaic incidents of country life into entertaining comedy. Snakes were his favorite topic and none of us were ungracious enough to doubt a particularly tall story in his presence. He implied by manner and speech that his statements were the gospel truth and not to be questioned. I recall especially his snort of disgust when Patricia asked him whether a conspicuous red oak tree had been killed by lightning.

"Hoop snake," he said, with an implication that the hills were full of varmints worse than radios and city slickers. "I was on this side of the river a-fixing to clare up a piece fer a turnip patch, no more'n two days a-fer you-all come. Me and the Old Lady are a sight fer eating turnips after cold weather sets in. Like I said, thar I was a grubbing bushes and suddenly I heard a big to-do in the bresh and a old snake—most big around as my arm, come down the mountain and me in his path. I lit out toward whar I had the skiff tied, but soon as thet thar sarpint got in the clare he rolled at me lickety-split, hell fer leather. I knowed all the shallows, so I jest half swum and half run the river with the varmint right on my heels. Aye-God, he would of got me, too, 'cept I clum up that red oak you-all pint'ed at. Thet snake, he got so mad when he seen the tree was too big fer him to clum, he jest sot thar and stuck his horn in hit time and again. Come nightfall, he slunk on back to his hole and I clum down. But thet tree warn't no good no more. All thet pizen got to working in the sap and killed hit dead'ern a door nail a-fer morning."

OLD MAN UTZ rubbed his hands up and down on his overalled legs and spat a stream of tobacco juice into the dark. "I got cotched by a whip snake wunst." He snuffled and got off to a fresh start. "Down thar in the orchard, 'twixt them Fall Cheeses and the fence line. Snuck up on me whiles't I war pruning. Like to whupped the hide offen me a-fore I got loose. Wropped around me like a vine, so's I couldn't move, and whupped me like the Old Lady doing a carpet. Sore as a b'iled owl fer might' nigh a week. I don't bother no black snakes. Got one around the barn fer a pet. Me and the old dog keep an eye peeled fer them others. Old Rover's been bit so many times a hunting ground hogs, he sorta looks like a snake. Like to killed him wunst when a copperhead bit him on the nose. They're mean sarpints, them coppers. Ain't so many around like they used to be. Me and Rover 'most killed them off. You folks want to keep a lookout when you go to the spring. I seen one thar last week, but he got away slick as a eel. I can smell them most good as Rover kin. Smell like cucumbers, only a sight stronger. A man's got a nose fer snakes he ain't likely to git bit. Them pesky hoop-snakes ain't got no smell—ain't nothing to do but jest watch out fer them and run. Heli-fax and damnation, I sure would like to see one a-chasing the Jedge. What you reckon he'd say, huh? What you reckon the old fox-face would say? Won't have no time to look in a book, I bet you that. Well, I got to go 'long, the Old Lady says I ain't got no business over here with you young folks, no way. I tell her I sorta had my eye set on Miss Patricia thar—jest in case the Old Lady takes a notion to go back to West Virginny and see her folks. Hit makes her mad as all get-out. She can't take no fumming."

Old Man Utz untied the skiff, threw the anchor in and poled upstream, whistling "Old Time Religion." We sat on the bank and watched him disappear around a bend—screened by alders and the night. Patricia stood up spraddle-legged, with hands on her hips. "Old Shaggy Bear," she yelled, "you only come over here because we wear shorts."

On The Record

Words And Their Ways

MR. KENNEDY, the Ambassador to Great Britain, was quoted (or misquoted) the other day as saying that "Democracy is finished in England," and Herbert Hoover was quoted as saying that "A coalition Cabinet is desirable in case of war, but not in peacetimes."

Mr. Hoover was following up an often used but seldom challenged statement that democracy depends upon a two-party system.

IT SEEMS to me that if we are going to be able to continue to communicate with each other very long we shall have to reach some agreement regarding the meaning of words. For, on reading and rereading Mr. Kennedy's apocryphal interview, I came to the conclusion that when he said "Democracy is finished," he meant "capitalism, as we have known it, is finished." And when he said "England will have national socialism," he meant, not that England will adopt the Nazi pattern, but that England will develop her own particular kind of socialism, or noncapitalism.

Similarly, I am not quite clear about what Mr. Hoover means by "peace." He is unwilling to see a coalition Cabinet now, but would be were we at war.

I think we are at war and have been for several years past. I think this fact was inescapable, since the war is waged, undeclared, and at present by political, diplomatic and psychological means, on us in common with all so-called "have" nations.

IT IS MY hope that while we continue to use Great Britain as a shield and a laboratory, we shall escape bloodshed by being overwhelmingly strong.

A condition to that strength will be a Government able to muster for its service the best brains and the most competent men regardless of party, and, finally, our hope of winning the war "without shedding a drop of blood" depends upon armed strength plus foreign policy, plus the most brilliant use of political and psychological factors, the latter now being designated as the "war of nerves."

But we can do none of these things brilliantly or effectively if we do too much "pounding on the anvil of debate"—again to quote Mr. Hoover. Certainly there must be discussion; certainly the critical intelligence will be greatly needed, but the factional spirit will be a handicap and, if exacerbated, a catastrophe. For the essence of democracy is not the two-party system or any party system at all, and the test of our political democracy, which is representative government based on free popular consent, will be in the next few years the ultimate and final test, namely, survival, and not only the survival of this form of government, but the survival of the freedom, independence and international power on which the outer forms all depend, of the United States itself.

If we are not willing to save the United States unless we can also save the present or past form of capitalism and the present or past form of the two-party system, then we should be seriously perturbed lest it be not saved.

IT IS, I think, highly likely that Great Britain will emerge from the war as some form of socialist economy, since capitalist economy—the economy of private enterprise for profit—is incapable of waging a modern war, and probably incapable of preventing unemployment in a nationalist and "protected" world. But, unless Great Britain is conquered, and has a political and economic form imposed upon her by German governors, Great Britain will not be Nazi and not Communist.

Every revolutionary change is colored and determined by what preceded it. There are no complete breaks with history or the past. Russian communism became what it is because of steppes, little fathers, Okranas, self-flagellating religious sects, illiteracy, feudalism, Siberian prisons, the absence of a strong middle class, and an historic yearning for ice-free ports.

German Nazism (the rule of the army plus the cartel; economic and military despotism, plus racial destiny) is not an invention of Hitler, but the fulfillment in toto of old German dreams: the socialism from the top down of Bismarck; the cartelization of German industry; the Pan-Germanism of nearly every political philosopher since 1849, the cult of violence of Nietzsche; the somber operatic sages and racial destiny theories of Wagner and Houston Chamberlain; the avowal of pessimism of Schopenhauer and Spengler; the mechanical theories of inevitability of Marx; and above all the fact that modern greater Germany was the creation of the Prussian army and that "Prussian socialism" is modeled on the army.

You can't create that sort of thing in a country that has never had a great standing army as the bulwark and creator of the state—Great Britain. Even revolutions don't come like bombs from Mars. They are new ways in which old cultures express themselves.

So, if Britain has socialism, it will be the socialism of a nation devoted to the ideal of personal freedom, imperial in a totally different sense than Germany and Russia are imperialistic; profoundly Christian, Protestant and nonconformist, and with an inclusive instead of an exclusive racial concept—just as we have.

WE SHALL save this Republic and democracy by being very clear in our minds what, at all costs, must be saved.

I would not be willing to die or see any American boy risk death to save the habits governing the present or past forms and usages of wealth, because I think he would risk his life in vain. (I am not here recording my personal tastes, but an intellectual observation and judgment.) Nor for the two-party system, which in its historic forms is already far gone.

But I would give all I have to see achieved and maintained on this soil the humane values which are the very basis of our national justification and of our democracy, the protection of the individual by law against arbitrary infringements of his personal freedom, the salvation of some modicum of private property, access to all existing knowledge, freedom from terrorism and persecution, a life without the constant threat of war, an existence without the constant threat of unemployment, a family life without the constant pryings of the State and a government based upon a consent that is neither extorted by terror nor bought by public or private money nor confused by reckless and scheming propaganda.

AND TO SECURE these things, I hold it as essential that we should have freedom of action on the planet we live on and never allow ourselves to be imprisoned in two oceans.

Silent Tolerance

THERE IS A TEMPTATION to discuss the C. I. O. convention in Atlantic City, at which John L. Lewis apparently intends to draft himself for another term as president over the shrill protests of rivals who lately defended the same conduct by President Roosevelt. This doubtless will prove to be a fine demonstration of the hypocrisy and political cynicism of the men of both groups of the C. I. O. in their fight for factional and personal power, and of the strength of the Communists behind John Lewis.

However, the American Federation of Labor has been my specialty for more than a year, with particular emphasis on the tolerance of the high national officers for criminals and criminality in the labor movement. Therefore, I direct attention to the convention of the A. F. of L. in New Orleans, at which David Dubinsky, the president of the Garment Workers, will echo the old traditional cry of the newly elected district attorney the country over: "Crime must go!"

I DO NOT DOUBT that Dubinsky means what he says. For one thing crime has become so notorious in the unions of the A. F. of L. that its cost in prestige now equals or exceeds the returns in cash and numerical power. For another reason, Dubinsky, in raising this cry, gains an advantage over all the dull, dumb veteran labor skates of the national organization who were so startled to hear crime challenged as an unfair union practice that they couldn't take the initiative.

They had associated with grafters, extortioners, dynamiters, stink-bombers, leg-breakers, ball-bat executioners and graduates of the brothel business so long that they were beyond realizing that this sort of leadership was unbecoming. They were thoroughly at ease in the company of a gangster, George Browne, of the Theatrical and Movie Employes' Union, in the executive council of the A. F. of L., and they had a practical, political understanding that no leader should ever challenge another as a crook or a stooge of crooks for fear of political reprisals and embarrassing counter-accusations.

AS AN EXAMPLE of this silent tolerance I would cite the reaction of a powerful New York local leader whose devotion to the labor movement amounts to fanaticism. I mentioned to him a spectacular crook who runs the Chicago local of the same parent organization. My New York friend shrugged like a waiter in a six-bit table d'hote reporting that the Camembert is ploo and said: "Oh, him! Well, he runs his local his own way, and I run mine my way. I have nothing to say about him."

Off the record, he admitted that his colleague's scandalous activities over many years amounted to a great reproach to the labor movement and a detriment to the rank and file. Nevertheless, for publication, he would not speak a word concerning matters beyond the jurisdiction of his own local.

These unioneers have a code by which they restrain themselves from criticizing evil practice in others. The unioneers never, or rarely, knock a brother. They habitually violate their duty as citizens, to say nothing of their duty to the labor movement as a cult and to the rank and file as human beings, by refraining from reporting criminal acts of their colleagues to the police or prosecutors.

THEIR ATTITUDE is antisocial and even antilabor in this respect. But it must be admitted that some of them have a conscientious, if mistaken, conviction that to cause the prosecution of crooks and thus raise scandal would be to give the labor movement a bad name.

This fear dates back to a time when any effort to organize workers was called anarchy, and good men were framed and bad men were deliberately planted in the unions to discredit the movement. But this attitude has become the protection of the crook today when an honest labor leader has nothing to fear from public opinion, the press, the police or the politicians.

Willkie's Future

By Ernest K. Lindley

Can He Lead The Opposition?

WENDELL WILLKIE'S exposition of the role of the opposition was beyond criticism, and he spoke in excellent temper. From the point of view of the Roosevelt Administration, Willkie's leadership of the opposition is more preferable to that of a number of other prominent Republicans—or, for that matter, several prominent Democrats.

Willkie stands with the President on the essential questions of foreign policy. He favors a strong national defense. He has indorsed most of the New Deal reforms. While his economic philosophy is confused, he seems to agree with the New Dealers that a national income of $100,000,000,000 is feasible and that the balancing of the Federal budget depends on getting this enlarged national income. This is the reverse of the Republican thesis up to the present campaign—that the budget should and could be balanced without reference to the size of the national income.

If Willkie's post-election speech is accepted at face value as the policy of the Republican Party, the two major parties are nearer to each other in basic policies than they have been at any time since Franklin D. Roosevelt won the Democratic nomination in 1932.

TWO QUESTIONS arise. To what extent can Willkie make himself the leader of the Republican Party? Will he stand fast to the policies set forth in his Armistice Day address?

The rule of American politics is that a defeated candidate for high office rapidly loses his influence. No defeated Republican candidate for President has ever been renominated. On the Democratic side, Grover Cleveland was renominated after a defeat, but he had served one term as President and missed reelection only by the narrowest of margins. William Jennings Bryan remained a force in his party despite three defeats, but this feat remains unique. Theodore Roosevelt retained a devoted following until his death, but he had more than seven successful years in the White House as the foundation of his influence.

Willkie's energy, enthusiasm and attractiveness to crowds give him an advantage over the drabber defeated Presidential candidates of recent years. Unquestionably he was able to make a portion of those who voted for him feel that they were engaged in a crusade. The mushroom growth of Willkie clubs was impressive, and it is a fair guess that there was more doorbell ringing by political amateurs in behalf of Willkie than in behalf of any candidate in many years.

IN WILLKIE'S favor also is the fact that he was rejected less overwhelmingly than were Hoover and Landon. In popular pluralities, his defeat was comparable to the three defeats of Bryan.

Willkie, nevertheless, has no secure political foothold; no office and no State or local Republican organization which he can call his own. These advantages rest with the Republican Senators and Congressmen and Governors and other officeholders. The Republican Senators and Congressmen form the active working opposition in Washington. Many of them hold views differing from Willkie's as to both foreign and domestic policy. A few were his rivals for the Presidential nomination this year, and many others, as regular Republicans, were cool to the intrusion of an ebullient former Democrat.

Willkie was notably ineffective, as a Presidential nominee, in controlling the arguments and votes of the Republicans in Congress. As a defeated nominee his influence over them will be even smaller unless he can demonstrate that he continues to hold a large popular following.

IF WILLKIE stands by his foreign policy, there may be occasions during the next few months when he will have to line up with the President against many members of his own party. In the domestic field, also, while he worked both sides of the street in the campaign, after the manner of the most experienced professional vote-getters, he is definitely committed to support of various New Deal reforms, including the farm program, against which many Republicans have voted. If the Republicans in Congress feel themselves bound by Willkie's campaign pledges, many of the controversies of the last seven years will be a closed book. But if they don't, will Willkie, through such means as he has, bring pressure on them?

If Willkie remains an active force, as he evidently hopes to do, he may find it necessary to choose between his principles and an attempt to represent the opposition. He may find it necessary openly to clash with prominent leaders and powerful groups who worked for his election.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Molotov And Hitler

Von Ribbentrop. Welcome to Berlin. Did you have a good trip?

Molotov. I won't know until it's all over. Where is Herr Hitler?

Von Ribbentrop. He is a little late.

Molotov. That seems to be the conclusion everywhere lately. I trust his health is satisfactory.

Von Ribbentrop. What do you call satisfactory?

Molotov. From the Moscow viewpoint, not too good, not too bad.

Goering. How are things in Russia?

Molotov. I wouldn't know.

Goering. You're there all the time, aren't you?

Molotov. That's the trouble!

Von Ribbentrop. How is Comrade Stalin? I trust he is as firmly behind us as he ever was.

Molotov. As he ever was . . . you can count on that!

Goering. Here comes Der Fuehrer now.

Hitler. Greetings, Comrade Molotov! Long live Russia!

Molotov. Long live Germany!

Goering. Long live the Axis!

Molotov. That's a lot of living for times like these.

Hitler. I am glad to see you with us, Molotov. Russia is a great country. Russia is a peerless comrade in arms. Russia is a loyal pal. Russia is a truthworthy ally. Russia is . . .

Molotov. Yeh, yeh. Why argue it? I'm not even disputing you. How are you doing just now?

Hitler. That's why I'm having this conference: to find out how I'm doing.

Molotov. I notice you're in conference a lot lately. You've got Joe nervous.

Hitler. If Joe was as deep in this war as I am he'd be in conference, too.

Molotov. Isn't it possible you are covering too much territory?

Hitler. Not unless Stalin thinks so. That's what I want to talk to you about. Is Joe still with me 100 per cent?

Molotov. Well, say 75 per cent.

Hitler. 95 per cent or nothing.

Molotov. Maybe I can make it 80.

Hitler. I can't take less than 90. Why the 20 per cent off?

Molotov. I'm getting it for you wholesale.

Hitler. Make it 85 per cent.

Molotov. I'll split the difference and say 82½.

Hitler. Okay. I hate haggling over details.

Hitler. Now how about Turkey?

Molotov. I'll bite. How about it?

Hitler. I must know Russia's stand on Turkey.

Molotov. Why don't you ask Turkey?

Hitler. Turkey isn't certain.

Molotov. Well, she's got nothing on Russia in that respect.

Hitler. Does Stalin appreciate the fact we are about to be masters of the world?

Molotov. I dunno. But he's awfully nervous about something, and maybe that's it!

Hitler. I tell you we can dictate to the universe. Does he seem to understand that?

Molotov. I've heard him express the thought, but in a different way.

Hitler. How?

Molotov. He leaves out the "we."

Hitler. I desire that he give reassurance of his complete support to Germany, which now stands as the conqueror of all Europe.

Molotov. Don't be silly. Joe reads the papers. How about England?

Hitler. Bah! England is on the verge of destruction. (A bomber is heard overhead) I have the British at the point of exhaustion. (A bomb explodes nearby.) The extinction of Britain is at hand. (A bomb hits the conference building.)

(The curtain will be lowered for a half-hour while Hitler and Molotov are dug out of the wreckage.)

Hitler. Where am I?

Molotov. You're exhausting the British Empire!

Hitler. Donnerwetter!

Compared to all the other things it has been through, an earthquake must seem pretty trivial to Europe.

Ambassador Joseph Kennedy repudiates a Boston newspaper story in which he was quoted as saying democracy is dead in England, that the theory England fights for democracy is bunk and that we should keep out of war. Probably the repudiation comes as a result of a revival of that stirring plea, "Say it ain't so, Joe."

Trail Of Disaster

By Barnet Nover

Mussolini's Wrong Guesses

MUSSOLINI has guessed wrong at least three times during the last five months, on each occasion with disastrous consequences to the Italian kingdom and people.

His first bad guess occurred last June, on the eve of Italy's entry into the conflict. The Italian people did not want to go to war again. They had been at war from 1935 to 1939, first against Ethiopia and later against Republican Spain and had derived no benefits from either conflict.

The only beneficiary in either instance was Hitler. The Ethiopian war enabled him to rearm the Rhineland. The Spanish struggle not only gave his air force valuable training but also enabled him to seize Austria and later to dismember Czecho-Slovakia.

When Mussolini cast the die for war last June he did not expect the struggle to be long. France, he knew, was on the verge of collapse; Great Britain, he anticipated, would give up the struggle once her ally had surrendered.

THAT WAS MUSSOLINI'S first bad guess. It meant that he had plunged Italy into a war of other than limited duration. And Italy was unprepared for an extended struggle. She had neither the material nor the moral reserves for such a conflict.

Mussolini's second bad guess was that concerning British sea power. Britain's command of the seas had not stopped Hitler from overrunning Norway. In that struggle the German Luftwaffe was supreme. It had also played a decisive role in the victories achieved by Germany in the Low Countries and France. Like many others Mussolini may have been convinced last June that through the numerical superiority of their air force the Nazis would be able to invade and conquer Great Britain should the British refuse to surrender. At the same time he looked to the Italian air force to drive the British fleet out of the Mediterranean.

THAT, TOO, proved a sorry miscalculation. The Italian air force has succeeded in inflicting only negligible damage to the British fleet. And in the only major naval engagement in the Mediterranean, the Italians were definitely worsted, the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni being sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney. Since then the Italian fleet has feared to venture forth from its bases.

But that has not saved it. The brilliant raids of British naval planes on Taranto have put out of action between a third to a half of Italy's capital ship strength, thus fundamentally altering, to Britain's advantage, the naval balance of power in the Mediterranean. At the same time British naval units penetrated the Adriatic to do real damage to Italian supply ships heading for Albania.

In the meantime British sea power has made it difficult for Mussolini to keep Graziani's army in Libya sufficiently supplied to make good the repeated Italian threats of a lightning drive on Alexandria. Italian forces reached Sidi Barrani weeks ago. They have gone no further. And with the supply problem made worse by the Taranto disaster, they may now be unable to move at all, unless the balance of power in the Mediterranean can again be altered, this time in Italy's favor.

MUSSOLINI'S third mistake was to suppose the Greeks would not fight. At most he expected only a token resistance, followed by a capitulation that would give Italy naval and air bases within submarine and bombing range of the British life line.

During the 19 days that have elapsed since the Italian invasion began, the Greeks have not only held their own, but have actually succeeded in penetrating enemy territory. In the meantime, British and Greek planes have done great damage to Italian ports of embarkation. Even should the Italians succeed in reforming their lines and ultimately overrun Greece, it would take Italy a long time to recoup her losses.

IT IS HARDLY surprising, then, that in the face of these disasters Italy has been enthusiastic about the Molotoff-Hitler conversations in Berlin. It has given the Italian press an opportunity to reassert the claim that Italy is on the winning side in the war and, therefore, one of the potential beneficiaries of the "new order" which is to be established in Europe and Africa.

Yet to the extent that Stalin does agree to cooperate with Hitler, to that extent will Mussolini's role be reduced in importance. No matter what the outcome of the war, the one certainty is that Italy will be one of the defeated powers.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Washington Choral Society presents Johann Sebastian Bach's "Magnificat," directed by Louis A. Potter, and Gabriel Urbain Faure's "Messe de Requiem," directed by Nadia Boulanger. Soloists: Cathreen Carrico, Ruby Potter, Henriette Bagger Plum, Mary Apple, Joseph Whittemore, Edwin Steffe and Charles Trowbridge Tittmann. Organist: Lyman McCrary. Pianist: Mildred Kolb Schulze. Orchestra of musicians from National Symphony.

Presenting its second performance of Bach's "Magnificat" and its first reading of Gabriel Faure's "Requiem Mass," the Washington Choral Society began its activities for the season last evening in Washington Cathedral. It was unfortunate that inclement weather reduced attendance below the usual numbers, for the occasion was signalized by the presence of Nadia Boulanger as guest conductor, and the quality of the music was exceptional. The two compositions offered are masterpieces of choral writing inspired by the highest spiritual motives, and the opportunities to hear them are infrequent.

BROWN

Louis A. Potter, whose direction of the society has led to consistent integration of the chorus, conducted the "Magnificat" with a fine sense of the majesty of the work. The choruses had solidity of tone, and the structural lines of the music were impressively delineated. The soloists carried their parts capably and exercised a style of phrasing in keeping with character of the music. Henriette Bagger Plum intoned the mezzo-soprano aria, "Et exultavit," and the soprano aria, "Quia respexit," was sung by Cathreen Carrico. Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, whose long experience in productions of Bach's major works gives him the assurance of authority, read resonantly the noble basso aria, "Quia fecit." The tenor aria, "Deposuit potentes," was assigned to Joseph Whittemore, and Mary Apple had the contralto aria, "Esurientes implevit," with its graceful accompaniment of flutes.

Nadia Boulanger, who arrived from France in time for the final rehearsals of Faure's "Requiem," conducted that beautiful work with a finesse that respected its delicacies of harmony and its spiritual subtleties. In her direction was evident not only her inherent musicianship and her instinct for choral effects, but also her affection for the composer who was once her teacher. She preserved the harmonic refinement, the exquisite details and proportions of the structure, and the spiritual serenity of the music.

In Faure's "Requiem" are not the pomp and the ceremonial of a pontifical service. Eternal rest is implored not for the heroic nor the great, but for the humblest of men. There is voiced no fear of punishment, no dread of the day of judgment, and only one strophe of the "Dies irae" suggests awe. The music speaks of confidence in infinite mercy and of a sorrow that is tempered by faith in future joy.

Ruby Potter sang effectively the tender soprano invocation, "Pie Jesu," which is a lyrically lovely prayer. Edwin Steffe was entrusted with the barytone solo in the "Offertoire" and "Libera me," and gave them eloquence.

Laden Tables Will Mark Festive Day

Many New Dishes Never Tasted by Puritans Will Be On Thanksgiving Menu

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

Martha Ellyn

MORE than 300 years ago—in October, 1621, to be exact—the Pilgrim Fathers demonstrated their appreciation of the new and abundant life in this country at a great feast of Thanksgiving lasting several days. The Indians were their guests of honor. Next Thursday, we Americans will give even greater significance to this occasion. In addition to giving recognition to the fruitful efforts of the early settlers and their great sacrifices, we will express our gratitude for our special blessing of peace in a world filled with strife.

For years, this autumn festival was almost exclusively a New England institution, celebrated by religious services and the scattered members of the families returning home. Thanksgiving is still a day of homecoming to many. However, some of the dinners now served have taken a wide departure from the heavily laden tables of the early feasts. Turkey and cranberry sauce, and pumpkin and mince pies have kept their places throughout the years. However, broccoli, Brussels sprouts and chestnut and oyster stuffings seem to be items on present day Thanksgiving menus that are not essentially traditional.

Stuffing—There's a Problem

To learn about the dishes that made the Puritan tables groan, and that are still favorite dishes of New Englanders, I have asked two Massachusetts-born persons — a woman and a man familiar with the traditions of their families—about the dishes that were and are still served on Thanksgiving. So if you want to serve the traditional Thanksgiving dishes in your home, here are the suggestions of these two modern "Pilgrims."

The stuffing for the turkey is still a matter of controversy in many households. Some like it dry, others like it moist; some vote for onion, while still others insist on sage.

Mrs. Kenneth Holland, born at Lexington, Mass., the scene of the shot that was "heard 'round the world," told me that neither oyster or chestnut stuffings are used by her family. The stuffing is of the plain variety, made of stale bread, plenty of butter, and always "Bell's seasoning." Mrs. Holland said she always thought this was something extra special in the way of seasonings, but has learned by comparison since away from Massachusetts that it is comparable to sage seasoning.

Must Have Cranberries

The traditional combination—turkey and cranberry sauce—dates back to the landing of the Pilgrims. Cranberry sauce might be said to figure in the very foundation of our democracy, so closely associated has it always been with our traditional Thanksgiving dinners. Today cranberry sauce is served in a variety of ways, and comes to the table firmly molded and cut in a variety of shapes—turkeys, stars or any number of other designs. These shapes may have their esthetic value but there are some persons who like the old-fashioned cranberry sauce, which means that the berries are cooked only until they are tender and burst, not entirely loosing their shape. Only sugar is added to the berries and a little water.

Mrs. Holland says that at their Thanksgiving dinners the cranberry is served in sauce fashion and not made into jelly. No doubt our present day use of gelatin is the answer to the many jelly presentations of the bog berries.

F. Joseph Donohue, Washington attorney and known for his culinary accomplishments, was born in Boston of a family that has lived there many generations. He says that one of his fondest recollections of Thanksgiving dishes is plum pudding—the kind that is steamed in a bag. He knows how to make a plum pudding, but says as yet he has never discovered why it is called "plum" pudding when no plums are used in making it.

And Boiled Onions, Too

"Squash has always been served at our Thanksgiving family dinners," said Mr. Donohue. "And I have never eaten a Thanksgiving dinner unless small boiled onions were served." He also says that neither oyster nor chestnut stuffing is used for stuffing the bird for Thanksgiving, and that cranberries are always served as sauce and not as a jelly.

When I inquired of Mr. Donohue if he knew if the early settlers had celery at their Thanksgiving meal, he answered, "I imagine so since I have read that a young lady of New England in 1779 wrote a letter saying there was roast turkey and goose and two kinds of pigeons and an abundance of vegetables, one from a new kind of seed just imported from England that was called celery and could be eaten without cooking."

Thanksgiving Day Dinner Menu

Clear Soup — Bread Sticks
Celery — Olives
Roast Turkey — Stuffing
Mashed Potatoes — Giblet Gravy
Cranberry Sauce
String Beans — Boiled Onions
Tomato Jelly Salad
French Dressing
Plum Pudding — Foamy Sauce
Nuts — Mints
Coffee

Home to Thanksgiving

This Currier and Ives print portrays the spirit of an old-fashioned New England Thanksgiving reunion. Thanksgiving is still a holiday when family reunions are held around heavily laden tables

Return Engagement Of Turkey Makes Attractive Dish

Everyone likes to be sure when serving turkey for Thanksgiving that there is plenty for second helpings and so they order an extra big turkey. In that case there is bound to be some of the fowl left over. So two or three days afterwards you get the meat out of the refrigerator and wonder how you might make the most attractive dish out of it. The recipe for turkey pie given below will serve you well on this occasion. The cream of mushroom soup with its delicious blend of seasonings and plentiful bits of mushrooms adds a luxury touch to this pie. Prepared in this way the turkey may well make a second appearance as a "company" dish.

Turkey Pie

Melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add 3 tablespoons flour and blend well. Add 1 medium (16 oz.) can cream of mushroom soup. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add 2 cups or more of diced cooked turkey, and ½ to 1 cup cooked peas. Pour into a buttered casserole and top with small biscuits one-four inch thick. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, 15 to 20 minutes or until the buscuits are richly browned. Serves 4.

Cherry Sauce Adds Fillip to Pudding

Fig pudding is a holiday dessert favorite. The kind that comes in a can is delicious and especially so when served with cherry sauce. To make the sauce proceed this way:

Cherry Sauce

Combine and then blend well, ¼ cup butter and 1 cup sugar. Add 1 cup cherry juice. Cook, stirring constantly, to boiling point, then boil without stirring 15 minutes. Add 1 cup drained cherries. Heat 1 large can fig pudding (1 pound 11 ounces) according to directions on label. Place the whole pudding on plate, then pour sauce over. Take to table and serve at once. Sauce may be made the day before and reheated or it may be served cold over hot pudding.

Extra Weight Reduces Life Expectancy

Diet Low in Calories, Rich in Vitamins; Will Improve Health

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU ask a plump friend how she is, she takes a jovial view of her plumpness and assures you that she is "too healthy"—or, perhaps, "disgustingly healthy!"

Well, there's no such thing as being too healthy.

A superabundance of fat represents stored energy but it does not represent an extra supply of all the materials that go to make good health—not by a long shot! If that were true, then the more fat piled on, the more good health stored up! But such a theory is knocked into a cocked hat by the statistics proving excessive weight cuts down life expectancy.

Let's look at it this way. Say you are 20 pounds above your pleasing weight. This excess means that you have put by quite a few extra calories. Every time you ate more than your activity for the day entitled you to, nature stored the excess in the least apt to be disturbed spots—probably under the chin, over the hips and around the waist

If you like arithmetic, you can figure to the calorie just how many of these little energy units you have in reserve. Each extra pound totals 4,320 calories. So, 20 excess pounds is a matter of 86,400 calories!

But that isn't stored health. In that vast number of calories you do not have an extra supply of red blood cells to keep up your pep, or a store of calcium or phosphorus to keep up your teeth from getting cavities, and to keep your bones strong, or a reserve of protein to protect the vital tissues and take care of the wear and tear, or an abundant supply of vitamins to step up your resistance. So you are not "too healthy"—you are just too fat.

Of course, you want to take those 86,400 calories out of storage and get rid of the 20 pounds. But you want to use the fat without drawing on your health. To do that, you include in your diet an abundance of everything you need, except calories. That's what's meant by balancing the reducing menu.

By following a diet that is low in calories but high in vitamins, minerals and protein, you can actually improve your health as you take off one or two pounds per week. You can't ask more than that.

Here is the list of foods which you must have daily to provide the essential elements:

One egg, an average serving of lean meat, fish or fowl (or two smaller servings of meat, etc.); two fresh fruits—one a citrus like oranges or grapefruit or pineapple, or fruit juices; two vegetables, one of the green, leafy type, and at least one raw vegetable; two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk—or one glass of milk and a serving of cheese; two or three slices of whole-wheat bread, and three pats of butter, each one-fourth inch thick.

Peach Dumplings, Warm Dessert for Chilly Nights

Chilly nights are brighter when the evening meal winds up with a warm dessert. Peach dumplings, flaky, tender and golden, are the answer to cold weather requests for heart-warming finales to dinners.

Served hot or cold, with cream or whipped cream, peach dumplings are inviting refreshment with hot coffee for the bridge foursome or evening dessert party. This is Clara Gebhardt Snyder's recipe, for making the dumplings.

Sift 2 cups soft wheat flour with 1 teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Cut or rub in ½ cup shortening. Add ½ cup milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and roll ⅛ inch thick. Cut into 3-inch squares. Cut each square diagonally, forming 2 triangles. Mix 4 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons chopped nuts and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon together. Place a peach half on triangle, sprinkle with sugar mixture and dot with butter. Top with another peach half and add lemon juice. Pull the 3 corners of dough over peach and seal. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream. Yield: 10 3-inch dumplings.

Pumpkin Ice Cream Pie Is Delicious

Thanksgiving party hostesses in search of a dessert will find pumpkin ice cream pie both delicious and appropriate for the occasion. From the culinary department of French Lick Springs Hotel, Indian's famous spa, comes the following recipe.

Pumpkin Ice Cream Pie

Prepare pumpkin as for pumpkin pie but omit the milk. Take 1 pint, vanilla ice cream, and mix with 1 pint of pumpkin puree. Fill a baked pie crust, and spread over with whipped cream.

Refurbish Home Before Flurry Of Holidays, Experts Advise

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Last call for refurbishing the house before the holidays put the household in a flurry!

A neighbor whom we always envy for her forethought in planning, no sooner finishes up her special gift conserves and her Christmas fruit cakes in the fall, than she cocks a shining eye at the house and tucks in the loose ends before Thanksgiving descends upon her. By giving these oft-neglected jobs a special place on the calendar, she attends to them in their own time and so gives them more serious attention than they'd likely get if she left them till grim necessity forced her to do something at inopportune times.

Her living room is up for honors this fall. The upholstery on her big pieces is all right, but all her sidechairs and one small open armchair are getting threadbare. One sidechair and the back and seat of the open armchair will get needlepoint that she's had in work for a long while—the sidechair a fruit design with a cream white ground, the armchair a flower design with a soft blue-green ground. Two sidechairs with uph lstered backs will be done in to the beige sofa. The flowered twill on the loveseat will be accented by some small cushions in shades of turquoise to blue-green (to repeat the turquoise of the two fireside wingchairs). The ninon curtains in the same pink-beige, as the walls and the beige rug will be cleaned, and there will be one or two new lamp shades.

An important addition will be the huge and hospitable low table that will replace the small coffee table now centering the fireplace grouping. And a small hanging curio cabinet for an odd wall space will hold a collection of small treasures. While a Victorian carved chest is going to be bleached to a smart pale finish.

Soap and Water Method May Be Path to Success

Men and women who get ahead fastest are usually the ones who keep themselves immaculate. We call these persons "clean cut." We find ourselves wanting to like them. They have pep and confidence we envy. They command respect.

Perhaps it's because of their greater wide-awakeness, their better color, their increased self-confidence, but the fact remains that we seem to know when other individuals do and do not take daily baths and wear clean underthings.

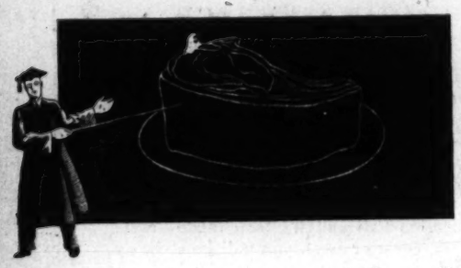
How Smart Are You About MEAT?
A modern health quiz about a modern food



This Seal means that all statements made in this advertisement are acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

1. What big health news about meat was recently discovered by scientists?
2. If you were picking the most digestible meat to serve a family with growing children, which of the following would you choose? Beef ☐ Pork ☐ Lamb ☐ Veal ☐
3. Has any civilized person ever lived exclusively on meat? Why?
4. Why is it now less of a hardship to go on a reducing diet?
5. When is a protein complete?
6. In which of the following conditions do you think meat could be included as an important part of the diet? Bright's disease ☐ High blood pressure ☐ Tuberculosis ☐ Arthritis ☐ Anemia ☐
7. This is easy for mothers. How old are babies ordinarily before they get meat in the diet?
8. A porterhouse steak contains more health elements than stewing beef. Is this statement True ☐ False ☐

Now look at the answers

1. The big health news is the discovery that meat is especially rich in certain vitamins—particularly the Vitamin B group, including Vitamin B-1 (thiamine).
2. You could choose any one of them and not go wrong—because, as tests prove, all meats are easily and equally well digested.
3. Yes—the explorer-scientist, Stefansson and his colleague, Anderson, lived exclusively and healthfully on meat for one year under strict scientific observation. Their purpose was to disprove once and for all the old wives' tale of the harmful effect of "too much meat".
4. Because the modern reducing diets prescribed by physicians allow a liberal amount of lean meat, you can lose weight without developing that haggard look and "always-hungry" feeling. Lean meat helps keep up your strength and satisfies you.
5. Scientists call a protein "complete" when it contains the ten essential amino acids. Meat is one of the foods that contains in liberal amounts all of these body building essentials which truly make proteins the "building blocks of the body."
6. If you guessed for only anemia, you are only one-fifth right. Diets liberal in meat are now recommended by modern physicians for patients with, not one, but any of these ailments.
7. Oftentimes meat soup is prescribed by child specialists as early as the fifth month and the baby gets bacon and other meats before the end of the first year.
8. The statement is false. It is a fallacy among many housewives that the expensive cuts are more nourishing. The fact is that the less known cuts, not only of beef, but of lamb, pork and veal are just as nutritious as the fancier ones, often even richer in flavor.

AMERICAN MEAT INSTITUTE, Chicago

Good News About Stews
Nothing stretches the flavor of meat so much as stew, whether it's beef, lamb or veal. Here are some of the secrets:
1. Cut meat in cubes of uniform thickness. 2. Keep it colorful, rather than "pale," by browning the meat in a skillet beforehand. 3. Cook gently and keep closed while cooking. 4. Give it new color and flavor interest by using vegetables other than carrots, potatoes and onions—for example, green beans, limas and celery. For added interest, slice the vegetables in strips. 5. Season it properly. For example, add a few whole cloves or a bay leaf. Your meat man will help you select the proper "stew meat."

U.S. May Have To Feed Europe, Says Wickard

Tells Grange He Doubts End of War Will Solve Export Problem

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard asserted at the seventy-fourth annual convention of the National Grange today that "since we are going to remain at peace, there should be no great tendency toward price-fixing."

"Price-fixing is not the great panacea, of course," Wickard declared. "You can fix prices on farm products but you can't make the consumer eat them."

As leaders of the farm organization turned attention to the farm export problem, he expressed doubt the "mere" end of the war "will solve our export problem.

He expressed concern how post-war exports would be paid for and said payments might be "in barter under certain conditions."

"We may have to give food to Europe," he suggested. "After the last war, we lent Europe money to buy our food, and the money wasn't repaid. That's pretty nearly the same thing."

In a discussion of the export problem, State Grange Master Herschel D. Newsom, of Indiana, commented: "I'd like to direct attention to the fact that the value of competitive farm products annually imported into this country is equal to the amount dispensed to farmers by the Government in the form of Government payments."

Newsom said he approved importation of "things we need and do not produce," but that he objected to "piling other countries' surpluses on top of our own."

Wickard cautioned also against regarding scientific search after new uses for farm products as sufficient unto itself, saying "we must keep in mind that such experimentation discovers new substitutes for farm products as fast as it finds new uses."

Gen. Cummins' Son, Sailor Die in Plane

Honolulu, T. H., Nov. 14 (INS).—Lieut. T. D. Cummins, 27, and Chief Machinist's Mate L. D. Staniewski were killed today when their naval plane from the aircraft carrier Yorktown went into a spin at 4,000 feet and plunged into the Pacific off Pearl Harbor.

Lieut. Cummins was the son of Gen. Joseph M. Cummins of the United States Army. Staniewski is survived by his wife, Patricia, in San Diego, Calif.

If You Won't Vote, You'll Like This

Bryn Athyn, Pa., Nov. 14 (AP).—Voters in this Philadelphia suburb approved Sunday movies in the general election, but found out today it didn't count. The elections board said the referendum had been placed on the ballot in error.

It didn't make a great deal of difference, though, because the borough has no theaters.

Ex-Rep. Cannon Pleads Guilty to Drunkenness

Milwaukee, Nov. 14 (AP).—Former Representative Raymond J. Cannon, defeated candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the September primary, changed his plea to guilty on a common drunk charge today and was sentenced to 90 days in the House of Correction.

Civil Judge Carl Runge then stayed the sentence for a year.

The charge had been filed March 2, but the case was continued to permit Cannon to obtain hospital treatment.

"I bought Guaranteed Meats 11 times and was proud to serve every cut . . . ." —Miss Mary Bourke

TRIAL by jury for 30 days! That's the test Sanitary's Guaranteed Meats were put to. The jury was composed of fifteen prominent Washington housewives, of which Miss Mary Bourke was a member. After visiting Sanitary's central meat control plant, the jury set out to test Guaranteed Meats in their own homes for 30 days. Each jury member bought meats from seven to twenty-seven times from the Sanitary market in her neighborhood. At the end of the month the jury rendered its verdict.

MISS MARY BOURKE'S OWN STATEMENT:

"I admit the way this test turned out was a big surprise to me. I bought Guaranteed Meats from my Sanitary market 11 times—steaks, roasts, chops and other cuts. All was meat I was proud to serve."

General Federation of Women's Clubs Honors Delegation of Clubwomen Here For Sessions at Pan American Union

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

A musicale and tea was given yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, honoring the members of the Inter-American Commission of Women, here for the sessions held the last three days at the Pan American Union.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation, and Mrs. Frederic C. Beggs, of New Jersey, chairman of international relations, who headed the delegation of clubwomen making the Good Neighbor Tour of South America last summer, welcomed the guests with Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president of the federation.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, made the introductions. In the receiving line with the three national officers were the honor guests, headed by the commission chairman, Senora de Martinez Guerrero, of Argentina. Others who arrived in time to join the receiving line were Senorita Minerva Bernardino, of the Dominican Republic, vice chairman of the commission; Senora Carmen de Lozada, of Bolivia; Senora Elena Mederos de Gonzalez, of Cuba; Senora Piedad Castillo de Levi, of Ecuador; Senora Amalia Caballero de Castillo, of Mexico; Senora Maria Currea de Aya, of Colombia, and Miss Mary Winslow, of this country.

Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, of Philadelphia, a member of the national board of the general federation; Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the headquarters and house committee, who had arranged details of the tea, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the division of Indian welfare, who was a member of th good neighbor delegation last summer, also were present.

Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and Mrs. Baldwin Cook, daughter of Mrs. Daniel, greeted the guests when they arrived, assisted by members of the eadquarters staff.

Among the many present were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Laurence Duggan, wife of the Adviser on Political Relations of the State Department; Mrs. Thomas Burke, wife of the chief of the division of international communications of the State Department, and herself a native of Chile, Mrs. Curtis Shears, accompanied by Mr. Shears; Miss Elsie Brown and Miss Julia McLean, of the Pan American Union.

Two gifted young artists from New York, Eleanor Southern, soprano, and Lenoir Patton, pianist, presented a program of North American music, including selections by Burleigh, Krehbiel, Guion, MacDowell, Griffes, Keeney, Lieurance, Foster and Watts.

N. B. C. Women's Program Director Is Guest

Group to See British Film

"Britannia Is a Woman," a British film, will be shown at the tea which the American Women's Voluntary Services are giving in the Sapphire Room at the Mayflower Hotel this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock.

The film depicts the work being done by members of Britain's Women's Voluntary Services, founded by Lady Reading, and portrays the unity of women in England carrying on their patriotic duties following bombing raids. Members of the local organization who are studying and enrolling in the various courses now offered, and those from the outside, may see what their British sisters are doing after the same type of training.

Sir Willmott Lewis, correspondent of the London Times, will make a short address befire the film is shown, and tea will be served.

Miss Catherine Poe is chairman of the committee of young debutantes who will serve as ushers, those in the group including Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Mildred Dunn, Miss Louise Stillwell and Miss May Byrne Simpson. Mrs. Melville D. Church will receive with Mrs. Daniel C. Long.

Shoppers League To Be Entertained At Tea Today

Mrs. William O. Douglas, a sponsor of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, is entertaining the league at her home in Silver Spring this afternoon.

After tea, there will be a business meeting during which the executive board will ask the membership for aid in drafting an active program for the year. Mrs. Lucille F. Ezekiel, president of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, will open the meting and present Miss Mary Taylor, editor of Consumers' Guide, published by the consumers' counsel division of the Department of Agriculture, and one of the founders of the Washington League.

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

THE APPROACH of the Thanksgiving season in this country seems to awaken increased interest in helping a sister people in distress. Several benefits in addition to those already announced for British war relief have been added to the calendar.

A tea for the aid of the British War Relief Society has been announced by the Daughters of the British Empire for Sunday from 4 to 7. The affair will be at 4971 Hillbrook Lane, Spring Valley, the home of Col. and Mrs. Charles S. Hamilton. Mrs. Walter Hinton will be joint hostess.

The Women's Welch Club also has announced a benefit for British War Relief. It will be a concert at the Foundry Methodist Church in Sixteenth Street, the night of December 11. Only the date has been set. The names of the artists to be presented and of the sponsors will be announced later.

COUNTY GROUP STARTS—Montgomery County's newly organized branch of Bundles for Britain will hold its first money-raising affair Monday night (November 18) at the Manor Club, Norbeck, Md., when a Monte Carlo party and dance will be given.

Many prominent men and women of the county are taking an active interest in the event, which promises to be one of the outstanding parties of the fall. Proceeds will be used to purchase wool for knitting and for hospital equipment and medical supplies.

Committee chairmen in charge of the affair have been named by Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, of Silver Spring, president, as follows:

Arrangements, Mrs. J. Russell McQueen, Linden; mailing, Mrs. J. Burke Knapp, of Takoma Park, and Mrs. Everett B. Wilson, jr., Sandy Spring; decorations, Mrs. H. H. Semmes and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffman, sr., of Chevy Chase; radio and motion picture publicity, Mrs. Frederic P. Lee, Bethesda; tickets, Mrs. Clifton Veirs, Rockville, and emblems, Mrs. Rose A. Dawson, Rockville.

Dr. E. A. Merritt, of Chevy Chase, heads a committee of men who will assist in the project. Dr. Merritt has also furnished a telephone for the headquarters of the branch, which have been established in the Maryland News Building at Georgia and Sligo Avenues in Silver Spring.

Besides Mrs. Lee, officers of the county group are Mrs. Ralph A. Wells, secretary; J. E. Troth, treasurer; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, chairman of the advisory committee; Mrs. John C. Livingston, chairman of the information bureau, and Mrs. F. Paul Clark, chairman of publicity. Mrs. James Cope is purchasing agent.

Babies Topic Of Parley

Sole discussion subject scheduled at today's annual meeting of the National Council for Mothers and Babies at the Hotel Washington here is: Prematurity—its prevention if possible, and good care if premature birth is unavoidable.

Sixty national organizations, lay groups as well as obstetricians and pediatricians, belong to this council and will be represented in the discussion of such factors as nutrition, hospital standards, economics, and baby incubators.

Cathedral School Holds Tea for Patrons Today

The annual fall tea of the National Cathedral School for Girls of Mount St. Alban, given for patrons, alumnae and friends, will be held at the school this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:30.

Senior students and faculty will act as hostesses, with Principal Mabel B. Turner and Director of Studies Bertha A. Morgan heading the receiving line.

Radio Caters To Women, Says Miss Cuthbert

N.B.C. Director Addresses Meeting Of Two Groups Here

Miss Margaret Cuthbert, director of women's programs for the National Broadcasting Company of Radio City, N. Y., last night addressed a joint dinner meeting of the Home Economics Women in Business and the Dietetics Association speaking on "Why a Woman's Department at N. B. C.?"

The answer, she said, was women's interest in the daytime radio programs for which they comprise the chief audience as well as the buyers for the products advertised.

Seven out of ten letters commenting on radio programs are from women, said Miss Cuthbert. They can make or break a program by their reaction. The stations, she said, appreciate their criticisms, both adverse and favorable, because they are usually constructive. Programs are built to cater to their interests.

Women today are asking what effect the impact of events in Europe and in this country will have on their homes, she said. They are eager to know better how to implant in their children an appreciation for the principles and practice of democracy; how to make it more secure; how to teach self-discipline and how to do their part as intelligent housewives, providing good nutrition for their families and conserving food. In answer to this demand, programs are being prepared to dramatize desired information.

The women's department prepares 700 programs a year, Miss Cuthbert told her audience, and deals with 200 women's organizations.

About 70 women were present at the dinner which was in the Garden House of the Dodge Hotel. Miss Bernice Burns, president of the HEWIBS, presided and Mrs. Margaret Dagen was presented as head of the Dietetics Association.

Greece-America Society Fetes Sen. King, Envoy

The Greece-America Society of Washington gave a dinner last night at the Broadmoor Hotel for its honorary president, Senator William H. King, and Mrs. King, and Minister of Greece Cimon Diamantopoulos and Mme. Diamantopoulos. Both the Senator and the Minister spoke.

The society's president, Peter Dounis, was chairman, and Dr. Harold Fowler, toastmaster. There was music by George Seymour, singer and guitarist, and Panos Vasiliades, violinist.

Toasts also were given by Achilles Cestsonis, past supreme president of the Order of Ahepa, and Miss Anne Darlington, past president and now recording secretary of the Greece America Society.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

The Thanksgiving date controversy has reared it's ugly head again among Truthtown socialites. With feeling running high, many notables have almost become nervous wrecks worrying over whether to give thanks for their blessings this coming Thursday or on November 28.

Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger has suggested that The Committee (as the group in charge of the annual Sub-debs' dance and the Emerald Charity Ball is known) meet and make a ruling on the matter.

"With society divided as it is now on this issue," said Mrs. Bigwigger, "many hostesses are in great danger of making irreparable social mistakes by inviting guests for the wrong Thursday. If we could have a ruling on the subject to apply to our crowd we would save ourselves a great deal of worry and expense. Under the present set-up many notables may find themselves in the position of having to entertain—and even attend church—on two occasions."

Back to the Mines

Having recuperated from their recent election activities, members of the Ladies' Parachute Patrol will now resume their fall defense program, Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, commander-in-chief of the patrol, has announced.

The patrol will open its new season with a tea Monday afternoon at the Plush Sofa Club. Subsequent meetings will be devoted to drilling on the lawn back of the club—so long as the weather permits.

"We hope soon to be in a condition to offer our services to the War Department," said Mrs. Bellwether.

Dizzy Deb

Miss Daphne Chitterton will be presented to society at a series of parties beginning next week. Tuesday afternoon her mother, Mrs. Smith-Chitterton-Luker, will present her daughter at a tea at the Plush Sofa Club. Thursday night Miss Chitterton's father, Courtney D'Kay Chitterton, will give a dance for his daughter at the Hotel Swank.

Next week Miss Chitterton will go to Philadelphia to be presented at a small tea by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Piedmont Smith-Dither, and that same week she will be feted in Tuxedo Park by her maternal grandfather, Nicodemus Smith, the marinated shrimp magnate. The following week she will be presented in Boston by her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Chitterton-St. Vitus, and in New York by her paternal grandfather, J. Patrick Chitterton, the tinted toothpick king.

A Woman's WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Mrs. John Lodge 'Dubbed' Garbo's Voice In Four Talkies for Showing in Italy

WHEN movie audiences in Italy see Greta Garbo's pictures, they hear a deep Garboesque voice speak the lines in pure Florentine Italian. This linguistic illusion is the contribution of Francesca Braggiotti, beautiful wife of John Lodge, who came to Washington to see him open in "Night of Love" at the National. She "dubbed" Miss Garbo's voice in four talkies; when she returned to Italy to make a movie of her own, the producers decided she would sound too much like Garbo to the Italians and HER voice had to be dubbed. At that point she happened to be wearing her hair in a loose shoulder-length bob similar to the Swedish star's and street urchins who noted the resemblance would pursue her, chanting throatily, "Dammi una sigaretta" ("Give me a cigarette"), the famous line from "Mata Hari."

Francesca Braggiotti

Her husband appeared with her in one Italian picture. He knew only a few words of the language, but they went together to a small town and he memorized the script, with her help, in 10 days. His latest picture, "Sarajevo," is in French; to increase the international complications Mrs. Lodge is arranging a British benefit performance of the picture here.

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, as everyone knows, distributes grapefruit, prunes and similar wholesome foods to relief families who otherwise might not get their vitamins. At present there is a vacant chair in the office of one of FSCC's headmen—he's at Johns Hopkins receiving treatment for a mild case of vitamin deficiency.

YOUNGER GENERATION—A Falkland Village mother gave a birthday party for her 5-year-old son not long ago. It started off briskly; the first guest to arrive rushed into the house and, when he had caught his breath, demanded, "Where's the ice cream and cake?" Later in the afternoon she overheard her own child say to another of his friends, "Yes, I like my pancakes and my whiskey."

A reporter preparing a story on Congressmen's wives who campaigned in the recent election telephoned the office of one Representative last week. "Did Mrs. Blank electioneer for her husband?" he asked the man's secretary, when he learned that both the Representative and his wife were out of town. The secretary (male) said he was reasonably certain Mrs. Blank did not. "Does she do any speaking at all?" the reporter persisted. The secretary replied, with almost painful restraint, "Yes, she SPEAKS—but not in public."

A photographer covering the recent medical convention at the Mayflower walked into an embarrassing situation. He was told that part of the evening's entertainment would be a revue put on by doctors dressed in Victorian ladies' costumes. So he knocked at the door of the dressing-room, and called out, "Id like to come in and make a few pictures of you getting into your costumes." Soprano chirps of consternation greeted his suggestion; it turned out that the performers were lady doctors.

Wed Four Months, Man's Bride Manages His Income, Gives Him Box Lunch and Obliges Him to Borrow Cigarettes and Money From Office Associates

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since my marriage, four months ago, I have become involved in a rather embarrassing situation. Before I married, I always had money in my pocket. I never had to borrow or "mooch." Now, although my wife works and makes a fair salary, she keeps a close fist over our combined earnings, allowing me scarcely a cent for spending money. She packs my lunch for the office, and seems to think I don't need cash-on-hand for little emergencies.

Hence, I find myself in the position of borrowing change, and even cigarettes, from office associates. Some of them have asked me, "What goes on?" and I have tried to laugh it off by saying my wife doesn't trust me with money. They came back with the question, "Are you a man or are you a mouse?"—and I'm beginning to wonder. I have reason to believe that my recent borrowing around the office is becoming the butt of general comment. I would like your advice on how to remedy this humiliating situation.

HENPECKED HUSBAND.

DEAR H. H.: The remedy for this "humiliating situation" is very simple. Before turning your salary over to your wife, just allocate to yourself, out of your regular pay check, the sum of money you think you will need to cover incidental personal expenditures until next pay day. Do this regularly, without a "by-your-leave."

In putting your foot down, come next pay day, you may say to her, either firmly or nonchalantly (as your temper dictates): "Well, here it is. Make the most of it. But please take note that I'm keeping back 20 bucks (or whatever) to see me through—for cigarettes, lollipops, chewing gum and such-like—until the ghost walks again." And then don't let her nag, bully, wheedle or otherwise manoeuver you out of your position.

If you have a notion that you're helping your marriage by catering to your wife's tight-fistedness—get rid of that notion. The moment any human relationship begins to take toll of a person's self respect and social acceptance—that moment, the relationship begins imperceptibly to lose both value and significance for him. Thus, you would be doing your marriage a favor in blandly moving to protect your unalienable rights—when, as and if those rights are threatened. M. H.

Father Prohibits Books On Sex in His Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are several brothers and sisters, aged 20 and over, whose father (we lost our mother ten years ago) has never given us any information whatsoever on the subject of sex hygiene. He has forbidden us to bring into the home any book treating the subject. In his opinion, we should have learned enough about the so-called "facts of life" from general conversation and our formal schooling. Please give us—and him—your opinion of his ideas. Sincerely, UNINFORMED.

Man Needs Authoritative Information He Shuns

DEAR UNINFORMED: Your father's attitude toward the subject of sex hygiene tells his own lifelong need of the instruction he denies his offspring. His attitude tells that his approach to both the theory and reality of biological phenomena has always been one of combined fear, ignorance and prudish shame.

Any adult who has a mentally healthy acceptance of the physical aspects of emotional expression and human reproduction, and who has experienced marriage and parenthood, not only can, but does discuss these vitally important subjects with his children—almost from their infancy—with candor, delicacy and sympathy.

I feel, indeed, that a parent is remiss in his guardian's obligation to his children, if he fails to try to give them a straightforward, clean-minded grasp of the essential facts, and spiritual import of the processes of human reproduction. If there are parents who feel inadequate to this teaching job, because of their own faulty education, they should promptly make available to their children, at suitable age, some of the excellent literature on the subject that abounds today. If they are at a loss to know what books to provide, the readers' advisory service at the public library is prepared to help them. M. H.

Canadian Air Marshal, Wife Feted in Capital

William A. Bishops Guests at Cocktails With Air Attache and Mrs. Kenny, as Hosts To 60 Members of Washington Society

By Hope Ridings Miller

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS to the Capital, Canadian Air Marshal William A. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop, were feted at a large cocktail party shortly after they arrived here yesterday afternoon.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Hosts were the Canadian Air Attache, Sir Commodore W. R. Kenny and Mrs. Kenny, who entertained in their apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. Most of the 60 guests who arrived around 6 o'clock to meet Air Marshal Bishop and his engaging wife, knew something of his record in the World War and his recent sojourn in England, where he flew over the front lines and observed at close range the workings of the Royal Air Force.

In charge of recruiting for the air force of his own country, Air Marshal Bishop returned to Canada last month. He came to Washington to lecture tonight before the National Geographic Society. "The Royal Air Force in Action" is to be his subject.

Since he entered the Canadian air service many years ago, the noted flier has won wide acclaim both in active service and in executive capacities. He shot down an amazing number of German planes in the World War and acquitted himself with such distinguished valor through the entire conflict that awards afterward came thick and fast. Today, therefore, the initials that follow his name are as long as the name itself. If you would have the full title, here it is—Air Marshal William Avery Bishop, V. C. (Victoria Cross); D. S. O. (Distinguished Service Order); M. C. (Military Cross), and D. F. C. (Distinguished Flying Cross).

Among those invited to meet him yesterday were top-ranking members of the British Embassy and all the legations representing that empire upon which the sun never sets; a sizable number of United States Army and Navy officials, and a few other distinguished persons, including Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, and their house guest, Mrs. George Fitzsmaurice, of Beverley Hills, Calif. Spending the season with a sister in Lancaster, Pa., Mrs. Fitzmaurice came from there yesterday afternoon. She will be guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. La Gorce today and will be widely entertained during her brief stay.

OTHER CURRENT VISITORS to town are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Patterson, of New York, who will be returning home soon. Both have a host of friends made here during the days when he was Assistant Secretary of Commerce and both have negotiated a crowded calendar during their short sojourn. Today, Mrs. Patterson will be feted at a luncheon given by Mrs. Bruce Smith at the 1925 F Street Club. The Pattersons are staying at the Carlton Hotel.

If the new French Naval Attache, Commander Count Denis Bourgoing, would speak freely, he might give an enlightening picture of occupied Paris. Shortly before he sailed for this country, he stopped there for several days and doubtless gathered a number of impressions that would be of interest here. Truth is, however, that most Americans meeting him for the first time find him much more inclined to dwell on the merits of this country than to discuss the plight of France. As is generally the case with diplomatic newcomers to Washington, Count and Countess Bourgoing are being entertained widely at small, informal parties. Yesterday, they were luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Hoffman, who gathered in a few friends to meet them. Among those in the small company were Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten, of the Netherlands Legation; Miss Janet Fish and George Abell.

WHISPERS AND DRUMBEATS: On all sides, I've been hearing that Alfons Landa will be walking down the aisle soon with an attractive woman whose name I promised on my honor I would not divulge . . . Members of the famous duPont family may turn up in droves at Ann Huidekoper's debut tomorrow. Mrs. Huidekoper, the bud's mother, is a duPont, you know, and reports were making the rounds yesterday that pretty Ann has been wailing to intimates, "We've sent out 630 invitations—600 to the duPonts, and 30 to my friends" . . . Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell and Miss Hazel Edgar will be off today by plane for Montreal, where they will be week-end guests of Mrs. Harold Sims. The latter, incidentally, flew into Washington for a quiet visit several days ago, and flew out just as quietly on Wednesday . . . Mr. and Mrs. William Sprague will arrive here Sunday from Tampa, Fla., for a month's stay . . . Donna Julia Brambilla will be a luncheon hostess tomorrow and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Legare will have guests lunching with them on Sunday . . . Victor Sutro will be among those giving dinners before this evening's meeting of the Friday Supper Club.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

SENORA DE CARDENAS lingered on in Rumania to rest up for an operation only to find herself in the midst of an earthquake.

DUDLEY HARMON

Her husband, the Spanish Ambassador here, was relieved to learn that she is safe, though she was in Bucharest at the time. Her parents also escaped injury, though their chimneys were shaken down, carrying the ceilings of the house with them. The Ambassador talked with his wife the other afternoon by transatlantic telephone.

Senora de Cardenas will leave shortly for Spain to visit her sisters-in-law. From there she will take the clipper early in December to return to Washington. Her parents still refuse to accompany her back to this country, preferring to remain in their home, damaged as it is.

MORE diplomatic doings: Lord Lothian is due back the first of the week from London, it's said. . . . The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz gave a cocktail party on Wednesday for Senora de Guerrero of the Inter-American Commission of Women. Both hostess and guest of honor are Argentines. . . . The Soviet Ambassador, like every third person these days, is studying Spanish. . . . One of the most gifted linguists in the diplomatic corps is Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav envoy. She has made a study of nine languages. . . . The Canadian Legation has three new additions to its staff. They are Col. H. F. C. Letson, military attache; Commodore Victor Brodeur, naval attache, and Jean Chapdelaine, third secretary. The latter, as his name implies, is a French Canadian.

MRS. Snowden Fahnestock is ill with pleurisy, a sacrifice on the Willkie altar. She had a cold last week but got up to go to Newport and vote.

ODDS AND ENDS: Peggy Townsend has given up her modeling job in New York and is here with her mother again. She has been ill, but there is a more romantic reason for her resignation. Could the ring she is wearing on her engagement finger have been given her by John Rogers? . . . Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis will leave next week for their annual visit to their Florida plantation. Mrs. Davis will more or less commute to carry on her Red Cross work here. . . . Mrs. Peter Gerry, wife of the Senator from Rhode Island, is in town for a brief stay. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock will entertain at dinner tomorrow. . . . Gen. John Philip Hill will present his debutante daughter, Miss Kitty Hill, at the first Monday German in Baltimore on December 2. He will arrive in Washington shortly for a stay. . . . Beatrice Phillips is writing an article on her experiences as an ambulance driver in France for the Foreign Service Journal of the State Department.

WHEN THE District Commissioners heard that a blizzard was brewing in the Middle West, they immediately sent out to buy snow shovels one Maj. Beverley C. Snow.

ONE OF the most glamorous sounding jobs we've heard about is Willard Reed's. With Mrs. Reed, the former Mary Cowles, of Washington, he has left for Java, where he will instruct aviators for the Dutch East Indies government. Mr. Reed is a reserve in the Marine Corps and for the last few months has been teaching at Floyd Bennett.

AMONG THE many new couples defense has brought to Washington are Col. and Mrs. Kemper Williams, of New Orleans. They have leased the home of Capt. and Mrs. Paul Bastedo. Col. Williams was called here for emergency duty and is in the office of the Judge Advocate General.

Notables Gay At 3d Annual Venison Feast

Diners Take Part In Virginia Reel, Hobby-Horse Race

In a rollicking mood guests attended the third annual Venison Hunt dinner in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel last evening. Pine sprays and evergreen made an effective background for the deer heads and other trophies scattered throughout the room.

Garbed in hunting "pinks," waiters carried venison on silver platters to the various tables centered with horns of plenty overflowing with fruit. Many dinner parties had been arranged. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Semmes had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Bowie Chipman, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Morrow and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wynn.

Later in the evening many diners engaged in a lively Virginia reel or took part in the famous Pall Mall hobby horse races. Col. and Mrs. Donald R. Dunkle entertained Representative and Mrs. R. E. Thomason. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen was host at a large table. His guests included Dr. and Mrs. H. Lynn Colvin, Dr. and Mrs. E. Milburn Colvin, Dr. and Mrs. M. Hazen Colvin, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Galliher, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts Larson and Miss Margaret H. Davis. Dr. and Mrs. Bernard W. Leonard had as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Arch L. Riddick and Dr. and Mrs. Mathew White Perry.

A group were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Steuart. They included Mr. and Mrs. James Councilor, Col. and Mrs. Carl Hardigg, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Gude, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schneider and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lesh.

Still others attending the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. John Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler, Dr. William Chase, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rones, Dr. Benjamin Clotz, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd D. Akers, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Marston, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lansburg and their two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Flather, Dr. and Mrs. Victor R. Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Brand and many others.

Williamsburg Draws D. C. Set

Col. Williamsburg drew many from Washington society as well as from other cities last night at the first of the series of concerts of Eighteenth Century music to be given this week-end in the ballroom of the Governor's Palace there.

Mrs. Arthur Woods motored down from Washington for the occasion, taking her house guest, Mrs. J. Ronald McCrindle, who is better known as Susan Ertz, the famous English novelist.

Kenneth Chorley, president of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., entertained at dinner before the concert, as did many others. Other Washingtonians who were on hand for the occasion included Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. W. Cary Crane, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, Prentiss Taylor and many more.

The Bruggmanns Give Luncheon For Mlle. Boulanger

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann entertained at luncheon yesterday in their apartment at the Wardman Park in honor of Mlle. Nadia Boulanger. The famous conductor and teacher is a "friend of friends" of the Bruggmanns. During her visit to Washington she has been staying with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

The Minister and Mme. Bruggmann will be hosts at dinner on Tuesday in their apartment.

Joseph Millers Have 'Unity' Party

Entertaining at what they called a "unity" party, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller gathered in Democrats and Republicans yesterday afternoon for cocktails. Mrs. Miller had asked Mrs. Max Boyd, Mrs. John Pratt, Mrs. Mary Davis and Miss Edith Chandlee to assist. This is one of a series of parties planned by the Millers.

Among the guests were Miss Cecil Lester Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell, of the Canadian Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Jan Jordaan, of the South African Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Minor Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Poole, William Merriam, Henry Erlich, Neil O'Connor, Miss Marianne Bell, Mr. and Mrs. David Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Richardson.

Mary Sleman, H. Duncan Clark Are Betrothed

Mrs. Paul Sleman announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Sleman, to H. Duncan Clark, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Clark, of Chevy Chase, Md. The wedding will take place in December.

Miss Sleman was graduated from Goucher College. The prospective bridegroom was graduated from the University of Maryland and Harvard Law School.

Lee D. Butlers Give Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler entertained at dinner last night at their home in Kenwood.

Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Roger Robb, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Selby and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE AUSTRALIAN Minister and Mrs. Casey have a way all their own, and the nicest way, of doing things. When the Minister wished to give a small stag luncheon the other day, guests were invited by telephone with reminders to follow. When the reminders arrived, by hand, they were personal notes from Mr. Casey which said, "Dear Mr. Blank, I am glad to hear that you can lunch here tomorrow. The people who will be here are—" then the guest list—"and yourself and myself."

At this particular luncheon Minister Casey told a story of the war in England. Two pals met one day who hadn't seen one another for some time. One of them had joined the army while the other had remained at his job in civilian life.

• • • •

THE CIVILIAN inquired admiringly about the activities of his uniformed friend. "Oh," said the military man, "the boredom is dreadful, just staying in camp and drilling, no action."

Said his sympathetic friend, "Why don't you try to get out of the army?" He thought of his own exciting trek to work each day through bombed streets and of his dives for shelter.

"I did," said the melancholy soldier. "I applied for reinstatement as a civilian but I couldn't pass the physical test."

Luncheon guests at the Australian Legation that particular day included S. L. Childs, Counselor of the British Embassy in charge of press relations; F. R. Hoyer Millar, British First Secretary; Mark Sullivan, and Alan S. Watt, First Secretary of the Australian Legation.

PRINCE Alexander Hohenlohe spent a day in the Capital this week doing a round of chores connected with passports. He came down from Philadelphia to see that visas were in order for the trip which he and his charming Peggy will make to Cuba with her stepfather and mother, Ambassador and Mrs. Anthony Biddle. The job was complicated by the fact that each family retainer accompanying them on the trip is of a different nationality.

Commander and Mrs. Anthony Coleby asked friends in for dinner last night to meet the new First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. A. D. Marris. Perhaps one should say "A new first secretary" instead of "the", for there are five of them listed in the October diplomatic list.

Also dining with the Colebys were Mrs. George Howe—George, having attended a stag dinner, came in later—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Rebecca Wellington, Samuel Reber and Joseph Cotton. Attractive little Mrs. Cotton was in New York very busy shopping for the house which the Cottons have bought on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

BUZZY HEWES and his pretty blonde niece, Ellen Flowerree, find that 13 is, for them, a lucky number. It was on November 13 last year that Buzzy introduced Ellen to his friends at a tea and launched her successful debut year. This November 13 he again gave a tea for Ellen who shared honors this time with bright-eyed Kitty Hill, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham.

Most depressed over the present bad weather is lovely Kitty Du Bois, secretary to Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. Miss Du Bois is learning to fly and is most enthusiastic about her lessons. But days such as we have endured this week put a temporary stop to her flying lessons, and just when she was making good progress.

Pink and Black Ball Tonight

Several Mexicans will come down from New York today for the brilliant Pink and Black Ball to be given tonight by Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Among those who will attend the party are the Consul General in New York, Rafael de la Colina, his wife, and their daughter, Ruth. The Fiscal Agent of the Mexican Government and Senora de Gutierreaz and the Undersecretary of Finance and Senora de Monteros are also expected. The party will be held at the handsome Mexican embassy in Sixteenth Street.

The retiring Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero, who are in New York to sail tomorrow for their homeland, entertained a large party in their box at the closing performance of the National Horse Show on Wednesday evening.

Their guests included Oscar Schnake, minister of production of Chile, and Senora Schnake; Col. A. Kenny C. Palmer, director of the Chile-American Association, Inc., and Mrs. Palmer; Admiral Juan T. Gerken, chief of the Chilean naval mission to this country, and Senora Gerken, and Guillermo Gazitua, Charge d'Affaires of the Embassy.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes have taken an apartment at 3051 N Street in Georgetown. The former recently arrived in Washington for duty at the Navy Department.

Miss Marion E. Martin, chairman of the Women's Division of the Republican National Committee, has returned from Bangor, Me., where she has a home, and is at the Wardman Park for the winter season.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter B. Woodson will give a dinner at the Lounge Riviera, Hotel Twenty-four Hundred, on Monday evening in honor of their daughter, Miss Ruth Woodson, and Miss Betty Lou Kauffman, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. James L. Kauffman.

Mrs. Charles Henry Hamilton and Miss Josephine Kelly, of Ridgefield, Conn., will arrive here today to spend the week-end and will be at the Carlton. They are en route to Palm Beach.

Miss Lelia Snow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo L. Snow, will give a dinner tomorrow night at the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Miss Ann Moore. Other guests will include Miss Catherine Spaatz, Miss Helen Schaaff, William Manning, jr., John Manning, John Carter and Lawrence Clayton, jr.

Mr. and Mrs. John V. Hansen have returned to their apartment at the Shoreham after spending the summer in the West.

Miss Marcia O'Brien, debutante daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James A. O'Brien, will give a dinner on Monday at the Lounge Riviera before the Black and White ball. Also entertaining there that evening will be Mrs. Lilo McMullin Perrin, who will fete her debutante daughter, Miss Yvonne Perrin, and Miss Moira Kennedy before the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy von Keller will arrive here next Wednesday to visit the latter's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Graham. Mr. von Keller, who is a Swiss, will soon take out American citizenship papers and he and his wife, the former Miss Barbara Kent, will make their permanent home in Washington.

Miss Rosa May Fischer is making an extended visit in New York.

Shaff–McBurney Nuptials Held

Announcement is made of the marriage on November 2, in Baltimore, of Miss Betty Maurer Shaff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Urban Shaff, of Port Washington, Long Island, to Dr. John T. McBurney, son of Mr. and Mrs. John White McBurney, of Chevy Chase, Md.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Marietta College and Johns Hopkins Medical School and is at present an interne at the United States Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

Mary-Stuart Price To Be Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hobart have issued invitations for a dinner dance on Friday, December 6, at the Shoreham Hotel in honor of Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, debutante of the season.

On December 14, Miss Price will make her debut at a supper-dance at the Carlton to be given by her parents, Commander and Mrs. Allen Ingram Price.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Yates are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, November 3, in Doctors Hospital. Mrs. Yates was the former Miss Virginia Simms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry B. Simms, of this city.

REVISING TEXT OF CATHOLIC BIBLE—Reading galley proofs of the revised English text of the Catholic Bible are (left to right) the Most Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of Kansas City; Msgr. Edward H. Donze, general secretary of the Catholic Biblical Association, and the Right Rev. William L. Newton, secretary of the board of revisors, Catholic University

Prelates Hope to Be Able to Publish New England Version in Spring; Main Change Is to Eliminate Archaic Usage

The first revision of the Catholic Bible in English since 1750 came one step nearer yesterday at a meeting at Catholic University of a group of scholars engaged in that work for the past five years.

The changes are mainly modernization of expression, such as "you" for "ye" and "say" for "sayeth." The Right Rev. Msgr. William A. Newton, secretary of the revision committee, said also that the old inversions have been dropped, and "fear not" becomes "do not be afraid."

"The changes are minute, but they make a great difference in the reading," Msgr. Newton said. The revised edition should be ready by next April.

Galleys were shown yesterday to members of the Episcopal Committee on the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. The volume is expected to come from the printers about April 1.

The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, and the Most Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of Kansas City, chairman of the Episcopal Committee on the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, attended yesterday's meeting.

The revision is being done for the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine and, through it, will be received by all the bishops in the country.

Msgr. Newton, associate professor of Sacred Scriptures, and the Rev. Edward Donze, secretary of the School of Theology, are among the Catholic University scholars connected with the task.

The Rev. Edward Arbez, of the university's department of Semetic languages, is archivist of the editorial board, on which the Rev. Charles Pickar, of the Augustinian College, the university, also serves.

Dr. Barnhart Named to Serve Church Group

Head of Hood College Religious Department To Succeed Dr. Darby

By Robert Tate Allan

Church Editor of The Post.

The Rev. F. Nelson Schlegel, pastor the department of religion at Hood College, Frederick, Md., will become the new executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, effective December 1, it was learned yesterday.

He will succeed Dr. W. L. Darby, who tendered his resignation some time ago, but who has been serving until appointment of a successor. Dr. Darby has been requested to serve as secretary for the local phase of the National Christian Mission until March 1, 1941.

Dr. Barnhart said last night he had made no formal acceptance of the position and did not wish to make any statement until he had conferred with his superiors at Hood College.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church and chairman of the selection committee for a new secretary, explained last night that Dr. Barnhart had said he would accept, and had previously given the Federation officials that assurance.

Dr. Barnhart, in his late thirties, has served his present post for ten years and previously was teacher of religion in colleges in the State of Washington. He was educated at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., and Union Theological Seminary, New York.

The Rev. F. Nelsen Schegel, pastor of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church, Thirteenth and Monroe Streets, Northwest, last night praised Dr. Barnhart as "one of the outstanding younger clerics of the denomination."

Democrats to Meet In Silver Spring

A caucus of Montgomery County Democratic leaders will be held at 8 tonight in the Liquor Control Building, Silver Spring, to discuss legislative proposals.

Recommendations for a delegate to the Legislature to succeed Joseph D. Buscher, newly appointed deputy clerk to the county commissioners, also will be considered. Buscher's place will be filled by the Governor on recommendation of the County Democratic Central Committee.

Bullitt Wants To Resign, but Not Stimson

While William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, was revealing that President Roosevelt had declined to accept his resignation, Secretary of War Stimson said yesterday that he had no plans to leave the Cabinet.

"So far as I know, nobody has thought of making me resign," he said with reference to reports that he contemplated giving up that post.

Bullitt issued a statement saying he had submitted his resignation on November 7, believing he could be of more service to the country if he were free to write and speak without restrictions imposed by public office. Mr. Roosevelt, however, expressed the wish that he should not resign and there the matter rests, Bullitt said.

He has been mentioned for the London ambassadorship in case Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy does not return to that post from his present trip home.

Attorney Plans To Test Marlboro Building Code

Robert E. Ennis, Capitol Heights attorney, was fined $3 and $3.50 costs in police court at Marlboro yesterday on charges of shingling his home without procuring a $1 building permit from the town.

He noted an appeal and posted $50 bond after the hearing. He said the incident involved not the small building fee, but the right of the town to require persons to obtain such a permit before making minor repairs on their homes.

After Ennis' arrest last September, Building Inspector Norris Simpson swore out warrants for two workmen, Carl Maske and Edward Merryman, both of Capitol Heights, who were working for Ennis in the shingling operation. Ennis said he will defend them when their case comes up next Thursday in Hyattsville.

Planning Board Seeks Funds for Fort Drive

Group Votes to Ask Appropriation for Long-Studied Project

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Determined to make Fort Drive a reality, after 13 years of study and land acquisition, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday voted to press for a Congressional appropriation to begin construction.

Meeting jointly with the District Commissioners, the planning body adopted the most aggressive stand it has taken to date in behalf of the proposed parkway, 23 miles long, which would link the 15 historic Civil War forts on the Capital's outskirts and provide a by-pass route around the congested area.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, however, had a word of caution to offer last night.

"This drive project is not new," he told The Post. "Agitation for it has been going on 50 years, ever since the District highway plan was made.

"Before we get too deep into this, we want to find out how much it will cost. The planning commission is going to draw up a bill and submit it to us, then we will hold a public hearing. That is only proper before starting something that might cost $15,000,000."

If the District is forced to bear the entire cost, an increase in the gasoline tax would be certain, Hazen declared. He pointed out, however, that financial arangements for the Fort Drive projects are still in a nebulous stage.

The president of the Board of Commissioners expressed the belief that Congressional authorization, as well as appropriations for the venture must yet be obtained.

However, according to John Nolen, jr., chief staff member of the planning commission, only the allotment of construction funds is necessary to get started. Approximately 90 per cent of the land and rights of way needed for the project has been bought since the planning body took up the Fort Drive program in 1927, he declared.

Land acquisition funds were made available under the Capper-Cramton Act for development of parks and parkways in the metropolitan area. The money was lent to the District by the Federal Government.

The Fort Drive plans were explained at the session by Jay Downer, of New York, engineering consultant. He placed emphasis on the drive's usefulness as an outskirt bypass which would measurably relieve the downtown traffic problem.

Originally the parkway was conceived as a scenic thoroughfare to carry sightseers from one Civil War fort—Stevens, Slocum, Mahan, Reno, etc—to another. Now, however, the planners emphasize that its construction is necessary, even if there were no forts to link, because of auto congestion downtown.

Downer, chief engineer of the Westchester County (N. Y.) park system, pointed out:

That Fort Drive, as now planned, would be a miniature Pennsylvania Turnpike, having no traffic lights or grade crossings, enabling the motorist to make 40 or 45 miles an hour with complete safety.

That it would be divided into two lanes, separated by a parking strip, obviating the danger of head-on collisions.

That it would be feasible to develop the enterprise on a 10-year-plan basis.

The planning commission adopted his recommendation that the sections which should be built first are those running from Good Hope Road in Anacostia to Benning and from Bladensburg Road and Eastern Avenue to Fifth Street and Concord Avenue Northwest.

These two links, he said, run through relatively undeveloped sections of the Capital and their construction would stimulate their growth, Downer declared.

At its morning meeting yesterday the planning commission approved acquisition of 64 additional acres for Oxon Run Parkway, in Southeast Washington; purchase of land for expansion of Barry Farms Playground and miscellaneous reservations, and two jurisdictional transfers, Key Bridge Plaza from the District to the National Park Service and the two new yacht basins in Washington Channel from the War Department to the District.

Foundry Church Celebrates 126th Year

An 85-year-old woman who has belonged to Foundry Methodist Church for 75 years, and one of its youngest members, a 12-year-old boy, told what the church meant to them at its 126th anniversary program last night.

Among other representative members who spoke, Robert E. Freer, member of the Federal Trade Commission, pointed out that "in days of national stress" it should be remembered that "strength of spirit is as important as that of mind and body."

Miss Sallie S. Childs, with the 75 years of membership, sat among the honor guests on the platform, as several hundred members gathered for the anniversary fellowship banquet in the church's dramatic hall. A brief statement which Miss Childs had written was read by the toastmaster.

Billy Hooper, the 12-year-old spokesman, named among the things he likes about the church items as various as a certain "red carpet" and the fact that the minister "likes boys and depends on us to do our part."

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, new Methodist resident prelate here, and Mrs. Leonard, were special guests. Arthur S. Flemming, member of the Civil Service Commission served as toastmaster. He is lay leader for Foundry.

Talks on "United Methodism Marches" were given by Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service, Baltimore Conference, and Jesse P. Crawford, District lay leader.

The program celebrated two other anniversaries simultaneously, the church's thirty-sixth year in the present building and the sixteenth year of the pastorate of Dr. Frederick Brown Harris.

Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District, and several former district superintendents brought greetings and reminiscences. They were Dr. John Edwards, Dr. J. Phelps Hand, Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, The Rev. Merritt Earl and the Rev. Willis W. Delaplain, who entered the ministry from Foundry, also spoke briefly, along with a former assistant pastor, Dr. Clarence Wise. These three are now ministers in Baltimore.

Grover Hartman and Mrs. A. D. Morehouse also made statements on "What Foundry Means to Me."

Student Dies, 11 Injured In Accidents

Robert Lancaster Year's 63d Victim; His Girl Friend Seriously Hurt

Heavy rains and slippery streets yesterday were believed to have contributed to a toll of one dead and 11 injured, 3 seriously in traffic accidents within the Washington area.

Robert M. Lancaster, 21, of 130 Twelfth Street Northeast, a second-year student at George Washington University Medical School, was fatally injured last night by an automobile while crossing at Tenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast. He died shortly after being taken to Casualty Hospital.

A companion, Miss Anna E. Watson, 21, of 1429 B Street Northeast, was seriously injured. At Casualty Hospital she was said to be suffering from head and internal injuries.

Lancaster was Washington's sixty-third traffic fatality of the year. He had lived here for five years, attending G. W. U. premedical school. Previously he was graduated from Randolph Macon Academy. His parents, who live at Indianhead, Md., were reached at the home of relatives in Scranton, Pa., and were en route here.

Driver Held for Coroner

Miss Watson, a stenographer with the Alley Dwelling Authority, came here two years ago and made her home with an aunt, Mrs. Fred J. Crenshaw. Her father, Elmer J. Watson, died two months ago at Fentress, Va.

Listed by police as driver of the automobile which struck the couple, William H. Myerly, 49, of 22 Sixteenth Street Southeast, was held for action of the coroner.

Mrs. Caroline M. Morgan, 66, of Baltimore, mother of Lieut. Comdr. Philip S. Morgan, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., was seriously injured when her automobile collided with one driven, according to police, by Charles Cole, 19, of Colmar Manor, Md. The accident occurred at Randolph Street and Glebe Road, Arlington. Mrs. Morgan was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a fractured right ankle and right wrist, as well as head and internal injuries.

Held for Fairfax Police

Cole was charged with driving while drunk and driving without a permit by the Arlington County police. His companion, James E. Pollen, jr., of 3326 Prospect Avenue Northwest, was held in the Arlington jail for Fairfax authorities, who have a warrant charging Pollen with assaulting and threatening to kill his wife, Estelle. She lives at Chesterbrook, Va.

While crossing the 3700 block Thirteenth Street Northwest, Mrs. Bertha Weiss, 39, of 4000 Kansas Avenue Northwest, suffered severe head injuries. She was taken to Emergency Hospital. The driver, police said, was Roy E. Gordy, 18, of Silver Spring, Md. Also seriously hurt was 7-year-old Josephine Water, of East Hyattsville, Md., knocked down by an automobile near her home, 811 Edmonston Road. She was brought to Casualty Hospital with a fracture of the left leg and head injuries.

Other accidents yesterday were as follows:

Charles Edmonds, 1413 H Street Northeast, hit by auto while at Fourteenth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast, broken collarbone; Henry Y. Plander, 49, of Eastport, Md., was listed as the driver.

Oliver W. Dunbar, 23, fractured knee, and Orvill Gilliam, 27, lacerations, both soldiers at Walter Reed Hospital, injured when their car ran out of control in 6400 block Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Mrs. Beatrice Maher, 41, of 3718 Huntington Street Northwest, occupant of automobile in a crash at 3000 block Connecticut Avenue Northwest, knee and back injuries.

Running for Street Car

Louis R. Cantor, 27, of 1754 E Street Northwest, hit by automobile while running for trolley at 1300 block New York Avenue Northwest, minor injuries; Brody Moore, 25, colored, of 105 G Street Northwest, listed as driver.

Melba W. Cooke, 28, of 3620 Sixteenth Street Northwest, hit by automobile at Twelfth and E Streets Northwest, minor injuries.

Ella Hedrick, 25, of 3708 Morrison Street Northwest, struck by automobile while at Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest, minor injuries; driver listed as James B. Fisher, 32, of 6113 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

U. S. Traffic Experts Heed Roosevelt's Plea To Parley Here to Prepare Setup for Defense

RACER SHOWN AT A. A. A. CONVENTION—Thomas Henry, national president of the American Automobile Association, and Loretta Carley, racing helmet and all, look over the racing car displayed at the A. A. A. convention in the Mayflower Hotel. The racer set the fastest speed record ever made on regular gasoline in a qualifying trial at the Indianapolis Speedway

By Howard F. Wentworth

National defense was motordom's theme yesterday as two branches of the country's traffic control system opened convention sessions here—the American Automobile Association at the Mayflower and the Eastern Conference, Motor Vehicle Administrators, at the Willard.

Paced by a message to the A. A. A. from President Roosevelt asking assistance in coordinating normal and military use of roads, the two groups opened detailed discussions of how they might best fit into the defense picture.

The President cited the "immediate need" of improving the country's major highways and connecting them with centers of mobilization and defense production. He said defense needs can be met without any serious interference with civilian traffic.

Arnold Speaks

Addressing some 500 delegates to the A. A. A.'s thirty-eighth meeting, Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, described trade with other nations as the "real fifth column for us to worry about."

To assure permanent ties with South America, he said, the United States must continue trade on a large scale.

Battleships," said Arnold, "will not make permanent friends of South America. If South America makes money in trade with Germany, they will trade with that country and not be hampered by any obligations to this country for sentimental reasons."

At a Pan American luncheon tendered by the A. A. A. to 14 Central and South American representatives, Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., followed the same theme, stressing the need of hemispheric solidarity.

'Inter-American unity," he said, "is more than a diplomatic phrase. The 21 American nations represent now the oldest group of nations in the world to etablish a satisfactory working peace."

Calls for Travel Code

He called upon the A. A. A. to draft a travel code to guide Americans on their responsibilities while visiting other countries.

In line with the President's message, Col. Sidney D. Waldon, of Detroit, chairman of the A. A. A. highway and legislative committee, urged immediate action in bringing the Nation's network of roads up to necessary standards, explaining the job does not call for wholesale construction of new highways to meet national defense demands.

He charged that delay in American road improvements has been caused by "diversion and misuse" of road revenues.

"Well over $1,000,000,000," he said, "has found its way into nonhighway channels through misspending by State governments."

Four Methods

He outlined four methods of strengthening the national highway system for defense purposes:

Building the priority system of major highways to standards required for efficient movement of mobile military equipment.

Construction of access roads to naval and military establishments.

Provision for roads to new or expanded industrial plants engaged in national defense work.

Building of express highways into and through congested areas on the basis of highway planning surveys eventually connecting these roads with the interregional system.

At the Motor Vehicle Administrators' meeting, Sidney J. Williams, director of public safety, National Safety Council, predicted confusion in the operation of military vehicles because of a lack of uniform rules and regulations governing traffic in the various States.

Full cooperation of the Public Roads Administration in defense plans was pledged by C. D. Curtiss, chairman of the control division. He told the 100 vehicle administrators that the Government soon plans an extensive "auto census" to determine the number of vehicles qualified for military use in case of an emergency.

Recent agitation for a new system of "superhighways" linking all sections of the country has been eclipsed by the sudden importance of preparing existing roads for defense activities, Curtiss added.

The administrators were welcomed by Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., who admonished them that public safety was still the Nation's most important traffic problem. The program was arranged by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

The A. A. A. discussed numerous committee reports. Among the most important:

To abolish the system of "fee-splitting" among certain traffic-enforcement officials and establish regular courts.

To continue the long-standing campaign against the so-called "gyp - fringe" of automobile financing.

To conduct a broad-gauged attack on the parking problem, providing additional facilities for motorists and stabilizing property values in central business districts.

To launch a concerted drive to bring about Nation-wide adoption of legislation designed to protect roadsides in the interest of health, safety, decent appearance and general public welfare.

Senator King Advocates U.S. Aid to Greece

Referring to Greece as the victim of "greedy and wicked Axis conspirators," Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, last night expressed deep sympathy with the kingdom's struggle and advocated American aid in the cause of liberty.

Senator King spoke at the Broadmoor Hotel before sixty members of the Greece-American Society of Washington, of which he is honorary president. The dinner was given in honor of the Utah Senator, a long standing supporter of Greek-American ideals.

He called Hitler the "fiend of the day" and said America must prepare to survive the assaults current in Europe as a "duty not only to ourselves but to humanity."

Toastmaster was Dr. Harold N. Fowler, who introduced the Greek Minister, Kimon Diamontopoulos; Peter L. Dounis, president of the society; Achilles Catsonis and other speakers.

Diamontopoulos predicted his country would drive the Italians into disorder.

Citizen Unit Asks Blood Test Law

Congress Heights Group Names Two To Attend Hearing On Proposal Nov. 25

Congress Heights Citizens Association last night voiced approval of proposals to obtain a premarital blood test law for the District. The unit named Dr. I. Phillips Frohant and J. Louis Gelbman as delegates to attend a hearing on the matter to be held by the Commissioners November 25.

Gelbman was elected president for a third term and Edna G. Dulin was chosen secretary for the fifth year.

Other officers elected last night include Benson Taylor, first vice president; Mrs. Maude Liebrand, second vice president; Mrs. Florence Read, treasurer; Alma Allen, financial secretary; John Gutman, trustee for three years.

E. E. Chapman and Taylor were selected as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association; Godfrey W. Ramsey, E. J. Read, and R. A. Fletcher, delegates to the Southeast Council; J. M. McDonald, Read and Chapman will comprise the auditing committee.

The association urged the Commissioner to name a member of the Fire Department to the local defense commission.

American University Park

The Board of Education was requested to fence in the playground at the Janney School, Albemarle and Forty-second Streets Northwest, because of growing traffic hazards in the area. The unit urged the reopening of the District Testing Laboratory and discussed means of improving bus service in the neighborhood.

John R. Moore spoke on behalf of the Community Chest. Mrs. John P. Davenport took charge of an entertainment program following the business meeting.

Police Cars Get Anti-Freeze

Winter is on its way—at least as far as the Police Department is concerned.

Yesterday Inspector William G. Stott, who is in charge of police equipment, ordered all department cars—more than 100—to report to the police garage for radiator anti-freeze.

He specified, however, the cars were to receive only a "limited" amount.

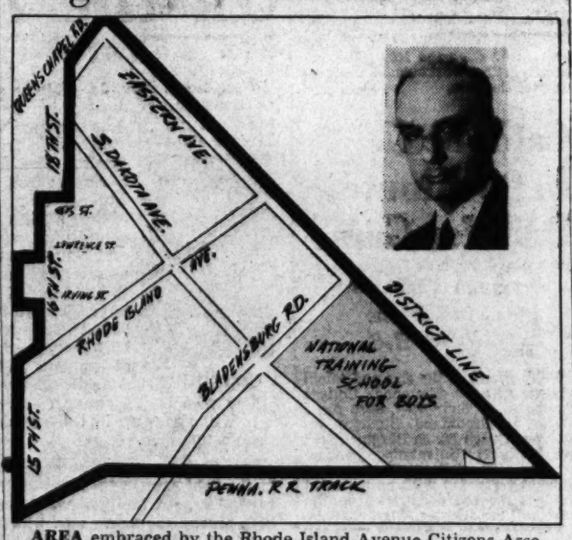
Rhode Island Ave. Ass'n Claims Largest White Citizen Area



AREA embraced by the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, headed by Harold Clay (inset)

This is the forty-seventh article in a series about citizens' associations in the District and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

One of the four largest citizens' bodies in the District is the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, which celebrated its thirtieth anniversary two years ago. It has more than 1,000 members, and claims the largest white citizen area in Washington.

Efforts of the association in the past, according to Harold Clay, president, have been largely responsible for Woodridge School, at Central and Carlton Avenues Northeast; the Burroughs School, at Eighteenth and Monroe Streets Northeast; the Woodridge Subbranch Library; the Eastern Avenue railroad bridge, and Langdon Park.

Members are driving this year for a field house in Langdon Park, an addition to Taft Junior High School, full-time service at the Woodridge Library, and additional police protection for the Woodridge area.

Other aims of the association range from a new high school for the vicinity of Sixteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast to resurfacing of streets in the area and construction of a pedestrian underpass under the railroad tracks in the vicinity of the Pathfinder Printing Co.

Garden contests begun by the unit in 1926 resulted in the formation of a "step-child organization" of the association, Clay said. The Woodridge Garden Club, composed largely of association members, now conducts nine flower shows annually and has regular and active meetings. Dr. Freeman Weiss, who formerly headed the citizens association, is president of the club.

Effective in keeping up Rhode Island Avenue citizens' interest is the monthly publication of the association, an elaborate 20-page booklet called Neighborhood News. Editor and business manager is Clay, aided by Freeman Weiss, Katherine Donahay, W. S. Torbert and W. E. Perry.

One unique coup of the association was in recently making it illegal for cattle to bellow in downtown Washington. Specifically, cattle trucks were rerouted off of Rhode Island Avenue, thus eliminating said noises which had been keeping citizens awake at night.

At the unit's silver anniversary recently, ceremonies were held in Sherwood Hall, during which Senator William H. King, head of the Senate District Committee, joined with District officials in congratulating the organization on its accomplishments and predicted many more years of service for "one of the outstanding citizens' associations in the National Capital."

Meetings of the association are held on the second Wednesday in the month in Woodridge Subbranch Library, 2206 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Besides Clay, officers include: John L. Fowler, first vice president; Mrs. A. H. Englebrecht, second vice president; J. A. Duerksen, treasurer; Wallace E. Perry, secretary; Joseph A. Smith, financial secretary; Katherine Donahay, assistant secretary, and T. J. Llewellyn and W. L. Howensteine, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Library Accepts Resignation Of Felix Morley

Resignation yesterday of Felix Morley, former editor of The Post, as a member of the board of trustees of the Public Library, has been accepted with regret by the Commissioners.

Morley, who informed the Commissioners by letter of his resignation, is now president of Haverford College. His letter, made public by the Commissioners, follows:

"In view of my departure from Washington, to assume the presidency of Haverford College, it becomes inevitable that I should present to you my resignation as a member of the District of Columbia Board of Library Trustees, which I do forthwith.

"I am naturally reluctant to leave a position which I always regarded as an honor and a privilege. But obviously I am no longer in a position to fulfill the duties of the post and should, therefore, make way for a resident of Washington. I would have presented my resignation earlier, but Dr. (George F.) Bowerman suggested that I delay it until Miss Clara W. Herbert was installed as librarian.

"Please be assured of my appreciation of this honor, bestowed at your hands some years ago, and of my continuing interest in the Washington Public Library, regardless of my removal from the scene of its very important activities."

Mrs. Wolf Honored

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Maurice L. Goldman, of San Francisco, today was re-elected president of the National Council of Jewish Women. Other officers include Mrs. Alexander Wolf, of Washington, honorary vice president.

Georgetown Squad of 36 In Top Shape

Bowl Bids Will Await Winner of Hoya-Boston College Game; 42,000 Expected

By Jack Munhall

En Route to Boston, Nov. 14.—Bidding for bowl games, Nation-wide recognition and a new peak in Hoya football history, Georgetown's three-year unbeaten football team left Union Station tonight for Boston College and Saturday's climactic contest with the powerful Eagles.

Thirty-six strong, the Hoya squad boarded two private Pullmans for the most important adventure ever to befall a local college eleven. Ahead, in Boston, lay fame or comparative obscurity in the Nation's football realm.

In Beantown on Saturday Georgetown's dreams of a third successive undefeated season and attendant high national ranking and rich bowl offers may be furthered, or materialized their dread fears of being stopped just short of their long-awaited goal.

42,000 Expected

Before what is expected to be a turn-away crowd of 42,000 fans in Fenway Park, Boston College and Georgetown will meet Saturday in the outstanding football attraction of the week. Both are undefeated and untied and rank and as the two highest scoring major elevens.

The National Broadcasting Company announced last night that Ray Michael, Washington radio announcer, would broadcast the game play-by-play over station WMAL. A refining company holds all rights to the B. C. game broadcasts but upon learning of the intense interest here it agreed to cooperate with the local station. The broadcast will be sponsored by a local firm.

It is the big test of the campaign for both teams and they are ready, having looked ahead to it for seven weeks while polishing off as many weaker opponents. In size and in speed and off their records, Georgetown and Boston College shape up even. The Eagles have scored 261 points, the Hoyas 247. The Eagles have yielded 27 points, the Hoyas have surrendered 22.

Georgetown's toughest assignments were Temple and Syracuse, and B. C.'s were the same, Temple and Tulane. Only direct means of comparison is Temple. And here again little was learned that was not already suspected. Georgetown blanked the Owls, 14-0 and B. C. outpointed 'em, 33-20, lending strength to the supposition that Georgetown has a stronger defensive team, but a weaker offensive club than the Eagles.

Hoyas in Top Shape

Entering into the most crucial game ever played by a District eleven, Georgetown is, appropriately, in its best shape of the season. Though they were forced indoors to practice the last three days, every Georgetown key player will be ready mentally and physically for this game.

Boston College, too, expects to be at near full strength, although latest word from Beantown indicated that second string fullback, Adolph Kis-

Cornell Still Tops Nation In Offensive

Texas Tech Second In Average Yards Per Game; Alabama Best on Defense

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Nov. 14.—Although they slowed up somewhat since last week, Cornell's Big Red gridders still rank comfortably ahead of the field in American Football Statistical Bureau figures released today.

Cornell dropped from 429 to 409.2 average yards per game as a total offensive unit but is still some 42 yards ahead of its nearest competitor, Texas Tech.

Also, Cornell is the only team among the Nation's leaders which has gained more yardage in the air than on the ground. The Cayucans have made 1,199 yards rushing and 1,256 upstairs, for a total of 2,455 yards in six games on 370 plays.

Top Total Offensive Rankings

The bureau's report marked the fifth straight week the Cornellians have topped total offensive rankings, and the sixth straight week—or ever since this season's first compilation—that they've been the number one passing team in effectiveness.

Alabama retained its leadership as the best total defensive team in guarding against rushes and passes; Lafayette kept first place as the rushing leader and Texas A. and M. retained line play honors in defense against rushing, a department in which the Aggies also led last year. Utah State is again the best defender against passes and Texas Mines is still the team with the best punting average.

The leaders:

TOTAL OFFENSE—(Gains rushing and passing)—Cornell, 409.2 yards average per game; Texas Tech, 367; Navy, 344.6; Boston College, 340.7; Arizona, 332.2; Duke, 322.3; Detroit, 319.9; Mississippi State, 317.7; Lafayette, 315.7; Penn State, 313.3.

RUSHING OFFENSE—Lafayette, 290.6 yards per game; Texas Tech, 287.6; Boston College, 258.1; Brown, 254.6; Tennessee, 242.

PASS OFFENSE—Cornell, 209.3 yards average per game; Marquette, 152.8; Texas Mines, 145.9; Princeton, 139; Missouri, 133.1.

TOTAL DEFENSE — Alabama, 91.8 yards per game yielded to rushes and passes; Navy, 94.1; Mississippi State, 101.3; Boston College, 107.3; Santa Clara, 118; Penn State, 118.8; San Jose State, 119.7; Tennessee, 120.7; Michigan, 130.2; Duquesne, 133.2.

DEFENSE AGAINST RUSHING—Texas A. & M., 23.3 yards average yielded per game; Arizona, 42.8; Boston College, 46.; Navy, 49.6; Mississippi State, 50.2.

DEFENSE AGAINST PASSING—Utah State, 27.5 yards average per game yielded to forward passes; Denver, 29.8; Tennessee, 35.1; Fordham, 38.2; Alabama, 40.

PUNTING—Texas Mines, 42.94 yards average per punt; Auburn, 42.22; Oklahoma, 42.19; Holy Cross, 41.80; Colorado, 40.82.

Looks Like the Old Andy Again

Turk Needed More Than Ball-Carrier

In Good Shape, Andy May Miss Bears Game Because of Full Player List

Sudden signs of rejuvenation by big Turk Edwards, mastodonic captain and tackle of the Redskins, yesterday posed a problem for Coach Ray Flaherty and may keep Andy Farkas out of Sunday's game with the Chicago Bears.

Farkas, nursing a leg injury all season, was hopeful of making his 1941 debut in the Redskins' backfield against the Bears, and has virtually convinced Coach Flaherty that he is fully recovered. But Flaherty doubts now that he will use Farkas.

"Turk Edwards has suddenly rounded into shape for us," said Flaherty yesterday, "and he may be of more value to us in the line than Farkas would be in the backfield.

Plans Disrupted

"I had planned to put Edwards on the inactive list and restore Farkas to active duty," said Flaherty. "We can't use both players in the game because it would put us above the 33 maximum. I have to make a choice between Farkas and Edwards, and I now think it will be Edwards who will be in there. Andy can help us in the later games."

The Redskins' coach did not conceal his joy at the physical condition of Edwards who has been troubled with an injured leg muscle. At yesterday's workout the big 260-pound tackle was frolicking all over the premises and showing more speed than at any time this season.

"We need Turk especially for our running game," said Flaherty. "There isn't another lineman on the club who can open a hole like Turk, especially if we are in scoring position. If we had had him in there in some of our previous games this season it would have been easier for us."

Tickets Scarce

The scarcest commodity in Washington for the past week has been a ticket to the Bears-Redskins' game. A sell-out crowd of 35,000 was assured two weeks ago, and scalpers who somehow obtained reserved seat tickets are peddling them in Washington at fancy prices.

Since their defeat by Brooklyn last Sunday, the game with the Bears has taken on added importance for the Redskins inasmuch as they need one more victory to clinch the Eastern Division title. Flaherty is hopeful that his club can best the Bears Sunday and thus lift the pressure until his team takes the field for the play-off with the Western Division winner.

The Bears will arrive here tomorrow morning and work out at the Stadium in the afternoon. For the past three days the Redskins have been staging workouts in the park despite the rain.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Georgetown moves into main-event billing tomorrow. They can sweep the college football schedule from coast to coast, and if it is half-smart it will perceive in the Georgetown-Boston College clash at Fenway Park the No. 1 encounter of the week-end.

Nowhere else will a pair of the Nation's unbeaten, untied teams be on the same field. The Georgetown-B. C., affair has crystalized with a rush as something of a dream-game. It's the highest-scoring team in the land (Boston College) against a Georgetown team that has scored only 14 fewer points. It's a battle of the Irish vs. the Irish, with a sprinkling of Poles, Liths and Slavs. From it will emerge the team that can challenge Cornell for the Eastern title if, indeed, it cannot claim it outright.

The impression is that Georgetown is the solid team of the pair, its peak power as yet untested. Boston College has come by a reputation for being a rootin', tootin' club given to gambling. If it is, then harum-scarum football is quite all right, because the Eagles have not come close to getting licked.

Nowhere else will tomorrow present as accomplished a pair of forward passers in the same game. The throwing arms of Georgetown's Jules Koshlap and Boston College's Charley O'Rourke bulk as a potent factor in the final result. New England is acclaiming O'Rourke as the best passer in the East, if not the Nation. Georgetown vows that the best is Koshlap. But O'Rourke, with his running and kicking, is a triple threat.

Cornell can scarcely enhance its reputation tomorrow even by winning its ball game. The Ithacans are meeting up with a Dartmouth team that has been licked four times and anything less than a one-sided victory for Cornell will affect the Ithacans' Eastern title claims.

Otherwise, in the East, no title claims of any description are at stake. Navy would welcome a victory over Columbia after consecutive setbacks by Penn and Notre Dame and will probably beat the Lions. Army appears up against it on the same field with Penn.

In the Midwest, Minnesota will be in no mood to pull any punches against Purdue. The Boilermakers have been beaten four times this season, but they were beaten four times last year yet managed to hold the Gophers to a 13-13 tie. With only two more victories needed to assure Minnesota the Big Ten title, Bernie Bierman faces the job of keeping his lads hepped up. After the schedule Minnesota has played, Bierman's story of "this is the important game" is an old one to his Gophers. And in the offing is Wisconsin, a team that always goes all out against Minnesota.

Michigan will be fighting to stay in the Big Ten race in the event that Minnesota is bumped off. The Wolverines will be meeting no less than Minnesota, with the prospect that Tommy Harmon may not be in condition to play. Nobody has ever accused Northwestern of being a push-over this season despite its defeat by Minnesota. The Wildcats may enter the game the favorite to beat Michigan.

The Notre Dame team that cannot yet be tabbed as a great one despite its unbeaten and untied record faces no shallow hurdle in Iowa. The Hawkeyes held Nebraska to a 14-6 score last week, and against Navy Notre Dame appeared to be no superclub. The real low-down on Notre Dame, however, may not be learned until next week when the Irish meet up with Northwestern.

Down South the stand-out game of the week-end doesn't involve Tennessee, which is the only unbeaten and untied major team in that sector. It brings together North Carolina and Duke in a game that has been sold out since September 1. It will settle no national title but it is one of the more attractive of the intra-State feuds.

Tennessee, which is forfeiting its claim to national honors by a schedule that is restricted exclusively to Southern teams, faces little threat to its clean record. The Volunteers will be playing Virginia and the size of their victory is the only concern in that game.

On the West Coast, Stanford meets one more threat to its clean slate. The Indians will be meeting no push-over in Oregon State. Last week Oregon State knocked off by a 21-0 score a Washington State team that Stanford was able to beat only 26-14. Stanford's Pacific Coast title and Rose Bowl engagement is safe enough, but it's unbeaten record isn't.

In the Southwest Conference, they'll be having another one of those games in which an upset will not surprise Southwest folks. Texas A. & M. figures to beat Rice, but when Southwest team meets Southwest team nothing is taken for granted. Texas A. & M. may have to take the blanket off John Kimbrough and let him roll for the full 60 minutes.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 14.—We've got a couple of 10-minute eggs on the menu at the Garden tomorrow night. Bummy Davis, the slum bum, meets the new welterweight champion, Fritzie Zivic, a light-hearted ruffian from the coal region of Pennsylvania. The current odds are 8-to-5, with Zivic favored to commit more mayhem on Bummy than vicious versa.

It is Zivic's first Garden showing since his astonishing victory over Henry Armstrong, and Davis' first since he shot home a last moment haymaker to the jaw of Tony Martellano to get the nod over Anthony. There will be no crown at stake, though the toughs will spend the evening crowning each other. However, a good turnout is expected. A lot of persons who didn't show up for the Armstrong-Zivic fight will want to see the fellow who beat Hennery, and as usual several thousands of fans will show up in the earnest hope of seeing Bummy get a come-uppance.

This Zivic has the most magnificent broken nose and curled ears in the fight game, with a sadistic twinkle in his eye that bodes no particular good for Bummy. Fritzie must be close to 30 and has been around the fight game, with his fighting older brothers, since he was 12. Like Ken Overlin, the title has come to him near the end of his career, and like Overlin he apparently is barring no fighter, else he wouldn't be taking a chance on curdling his new found rep by fighting the toughest young mugg in the business. Zivic has not seen Davis fight, but he studied the bootlegged pictures of the Davis-Ambers fight and says he'll smack the surly southpaw silly.

Davis, doubtless, is improving. He is barely 21, if that, is strong as a bull and can take 50 punches to get in one. He's the kind of fellow who can nail you even in the last round and knock you kicking, even if you've won every other round. As usual he is betting heavily on himself. Even when he had little or nothing, he would bet it on himself. He spent all the afternoon before his fight against Mickey Farber calling up local bookies and placing bets. The $300 he bet with a guy on the street, on the way to that fight, brought his total bets to $3,200—on a fight in which he was getting only $2,700.

He is in much the same forbidding mood as the day he slugged one of his Brownsville neighbors, for he refused to pose for photographers the other day. All he wants is to be left alone. He'd rather horseplay in a tenement-lined street, near his home, than be lionized along Broadway, which, of course, indicates a latent good taste.

"New Yorkers are all phonies," Bummy says, and won't cross the Brooklyn Bridge unless he has a fight. He trained for Zivic, as usual, in Charley Becher's gym, in back of a poolhall and over a fish house. The distressed praise-agents at Mike Jacobs office spent much of their time trying to reform him and delouse the stories about him that make him resemble the "hero" in Ring Lardner's immortal "champion." But why? They should leave him alone, as he wishes. He's got more color, ornery as it sometimes is, than any little man since Mickey Walker. We think he is ornery enough to give Zivic a bouncing around tonight, just when Zivic is getting into the big sugar after years of hinterland obscurity.

A recent piece of ours on Notre Dame has aroused James Ray, poet laureate, of the New York Central Railroad, he asks:

Where are the scores of yesteryear,
When the Irish backs ran wild,
When the horsemen rode, and the fighting mick
Was never a problem child?

Where is the 59 to 6,
When Carideo rode to fame,
When Mohardt, Anderson and Gipp,
Battled for Notre Dame?

I wonder if Rockne's ghost above
Recalls the days gone by,
When the immortal deeds of Irish backs
Flashed 'neath an autumn sky?

When the Irish fought
As the Irish can
And never pulled a punch
When the name could never be sullied
By a sportswriter's timely hunch?

Leo Walper, Ball Take 3d At Pinehurst

Heafner and Oliver Win Mid-South Play; Walper-Ball Win $283

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 14.—Clayton Heafner, of Linville, and Ed Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., won the annual 6-hole Mid-South Best Ball Golf Tournament today.

Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., driving range professional and his partner, Errie Ball, of Charlottesville, Va., tied for third place and second pro money with two other teams.

Walper and Ball paired for a best ball 69 in Tuesday's opening round and came back with another 69 today for a 138 total to win $283.33. The team got a break yesterday when they started with two bogeys but all play was postponed due to the rain.

Playing on a windswept, rain-soaked course, the winners carded a 34, 34—68 for the second 18, which, with their subpar 64 for the first round, gave them victory with 132.

The opening day's 64 was 8 under par, and the twosome managed a 4-under round despite rought treatment by the elements today.

Oliver holed three birdies and Heafner two.

Richard Chapman, of New York, national amateur titlist, and Jim Ferrier, Australian amateur, finished second with 65, 72—137.

Oliver and Heafner collected $500 for their victory. Two other pro twosomes tied Walper and Ball. They were Jack Patroni, of Manchester, Vt., and Jim Turnesa, of East View, N. Y.; Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass. Patroni-Turnesa and Smith-Thomson scores were 68-70.

Vic Ghezzi and Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J., and Joe Kirkwood, of Philadelphia, and Ralph Hutchison, of Bethlehem, Pa., got $125 for scores of 68-71.

Louis Matched In Philly Bout

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—Promoter Herman Taylor announced today the signing of Joe Louis to defend his heavyweight title in a bout here in January against the winner of the Gus Dorazio-Clarence (Red) Burman bout.

The date will be fixed later, Taylor said. The fight probably will be staged in Convention Hall.

Burman, Baltimore heavyweight, and Dorazio, Philadelphian, who dropped a decision to Arturo Godoy last summer, are scheduled to meet in Baltimore Monday.

Maple Leafs Score Early in Taking League Game

By the United Press

Montreal, Nov. 14.—The Toronto Maple Leafs tonight handed the Canadiens a 6-to-2 trimming and a lesson in hockey in a rough, one-sided National Hockey League game before 6,000 fans.

Completely outplaying and outskating the rookie Canadiens, the Leafs scored two goals within 27 seconds in the first period, and went on to mark up two more in each succeeding period.

Goldup scored two of Toronto's goals and assisted in another, and Langelle also scored two, one unassisted.

Canadiens	0	2	0—2

First period—Toronto, Hamilton (Apps), 16:02; N. Metz (Drillon), 16:29.

Reporter Made Cubs' General Manager

James T. Gallagher, Many-Time Critic Of Team, Gets Post in Surprise Move By Wrigley; Managerial Rumors Fly

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 14.—The Chicago Cubs, continuing a "rearrangement" of executive personnel which began with the dismissal of Team Manager Gabby Hartnett, named a Chicago newspaperman general manager of the club today.

The post, a new one for the club, will be filled by James T. Gallagher, 36-year-old baseball writer of the Chicago Herald-American, who on many occasions was extremely critical toward the National League team, particularly during the 2½ years it was under the direction of Hartnett.

Gallagher, a baseball writer who traveled regularly with the Cubs for seven years, said the principal aim of his office would be to "eliminate the confusion which seems to have marked Cub executive matters and to improve the team's relations with the public."

"We will definitely name a manager to succeed Hartnett before the minor league meetings early in December," said Gallagher, a native of Lorain, Ohio. "Running the team on the field will be the team manager's job, and his alone. With several promising young players coming up I think the club has possibilities. So far as Dizzy Dean is concerned, I favor taking him to camp and determining once and for all whether he can pitch major league ball."

Meanwhile, the hot-stove-league rumor kettle boiled merrily over

Sewanee May Withdraw From Conference

Report States New Circuit May Be Formed For Smaller Schools

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 14.—The Banner said today it had reliable information indicating Sewanee would withdraw from the Southeastern Conference in December and join a proposed conference of smaller schools.

The plan, the paper said, was for Sewanee, Davidson, The Citadel, Hampden-Sydney and "possibly one or two others to withdraw from their respective conferences and join up in the new one."

Dr. Alex Guerry, vice chancellor of Sewanee, said when asked about the report that there had been "absolutely no action taken one way

Catholic U. In 90-Minute Drill for Game

Bergman Prepares Squad in Various Defenses for H.-S.

Fully aware of the size and talent of the Hardin-Simmons College Cowboys on their way here for a battle at Brookland Stadium tomorrow, Coach Dutch Bergman sent his Catholic University gridders through a 90-minute drill at Turkey Thicket yesterday with no apparent thought for the deep mire on the field and the leaking skies.

Various types of defense were the order of the day, as Bergman prepared for what will probably be an aerial-less game. Five, six and seven-man lines were practiced, all in the hope of stopping a H.-S. line which will outweigh the Cardinals 15 pounds to the man.

Moutenot Ailing

Only regular absent from the workout was Charlie Moutenot, left halfback, both of whose ankles are swollen immensely. He will be replaced by Bill Mulvey tomorrow.

The weight of the invading Cowboys was Bergman's main worry, though the entire Card coaching staff has been cheered by the fact that rain and mud will interfere with the unbeaten, untied Cowboys' highly touted passing attack.

It was this type of offense, as a matter of fact, which was most responsible for the Texans' undefeated status. With Owen Goodnight, 190-pound triple threat, throwing and H. C. Burrus doing most of the catching, the Cowboys have run up six straight victories by one-sided margins.

Squad to Arrive Today

The Hardin-Simmons squad, 28 men strong, is expected to arrive here today and set up headquarters at the Roosevelt Hotel.

A special section of the Brookland stands on the 50-yard line will be reserved for Hardin-Simmons alumni.

Tickets may be obtained in advance at the A. A. A. and Henderson's Store, Fourteenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest.

Franklin Field Sold Out for Penn-Cornell

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—A complete sell-out of tickets for the University of Pennsylvania-Cornell fotball game at Franklin Field November 23 was announced by Penn officials today.

A total of 78,205 tickets have been sold, including 7,500 for specially erected bleachers. This is the first Franklin Field sell-out since the Notre Dame-Penn game in 1930.

Don Siebert Takes Over G. W. Center Post for Kansas Game

Monchlovich To Miss First Of Career

George Washington Drills in Rain, Mud For Tomorrow's Stadium Attraction

Coach Bill Reinhart figured that if it rained for four days it could rain for six so he moved his George Washington gridders outdoors yesterday to let them handle the ball in the mud in anticipation of a slippery footing for tomorrow's semiwindup game with the University of Kansas. Game time is 2 p. m.

The familiar figure of Mike Monchlovich, who has never missed a varsity contest at center, was missing at the pivot post as Big Mike is out with injuries and 18-year-old Don Siebert took over center for the workout.

Siebert played most of last week's game with Bucknell as Monchlovich was injured early, and he performed very well. He intercepted two passes and played a creditable offensive game in the scoreless deadlock with the Bisons. He hasn't had much of a chance heretofore as Monchlovich has been too valuable to remove from the lineup.

To Drill Today Also

The rain has prevented any real rough work for the Colonials this week, although they sorely need it with reserves dotting the lineup. Sam Babich, Walter Welc, Murphy Booth and Burnell Martinson are still undetermined starters while several other regulars will not be in top shape, although they will probably see action.

The Colonials will take to the Polo Field again this afternoon, rain or shine, for if it is still raining the Griffith Stadium turf is bound to be sloppy tomorrow and they need work with a wet pigskin. G. W. didn't look any too good on wet field against Wake Forest, although the Kansans are not rated in the same class with the Deacons.

Reinhart's boys need a victory tomorrow to put them in the right frame of mind for the Georgetown game a week hence, for if the Hoyas beat Boston College tomorrow G. W. will be in a position to pull the No. 1 upset of the year, bar none.

Kansas Arrives Tonight

The Colonials haven't scored a point since October 25, when they beat West Virginia, 19 to 0. Wake Forest just reversed that score the following week and then the stubborn Bucknell eleven played to a scoreless tie.

The Kansas team will arrive here at 8:30 o'clock this evening, following a workout on the high school field in Martinsburg, W. Va., dinner, and then the short hop to Washington. The Jayhawkers will be quartered at the Willard Hotel.

The visitors will be without the services of Ralph Miller, who completed a dozen passes against the Colonials last year. He was known as the only rival to Passin' Paul Christman in the Big Six Conference, but he has dropped football this year due to an injured knee.

Eagles Dress to Suit the Occasion, Which Is Slightly Moist

No better indication of the condition of local gridirons could be furnished than this shot of American University's football players, going through a brief workout yestreday. Rigged out in bathing suits and shoulder pads, the Eagles got in a few licks (mainly for the benefit of the photographer) before rain drove them inside. American U. Eleven Practices In Rain for Juniata Battle

Student Body to Hold Pep Rally, Torchlight Parade Tonight

American U. gridders went outside for the third straight day, despite the rain, yesterday as Coaches Cassell and Menke put the gridders through the workout in bathing suits for tomorrow's homecoming game with Juniata.

Although hopes of an American U. victory over the Huntindon, Pa., team depend largely on an air attack, passing was taboo due to the mud and the only offensive work consisted of Ernest McCarthy handling the ball on hort line plunges.

The Eagle students will hold a pep rally and torchlight parade tonight for the final game of American University's abbreviated season. More than 3,500 fans are expected in the A. U. stadium Saturday afternoon for the 2:15 homecoming attraction.

Head Coach Cassell has a personal reason for a victory, as he is a former pupil of Juniata Coach "Carty" Swartz, at Dickinson Seminary. Although the teams are basketball and baseball opponents of long standing, it will be the first meeting on the gridiron.

The Juniata squad of 29 players is expected to arrive today. Of the 29 visiting players, 16 are freshmen although the frosh are used mainly for reserve duty while several of the A. U. frosh are regulars.

Desires Grid Foes

The Murray A. C. is without an opponent for Sunday, November 24, and Thanksgiving Day. Out-of-town unlimited football teams may contact Manager Tony Neri at Adams 2901, or by writing to 1443 Monroe Street Northwest.

D. C. Fans To See Eagles Play Boston

Washingtonians to See Georgetown Game and Hockey Matches

Several hundred Washingtonians are expected to be in attendance tonight and tomorrow night when the Washington Eagles inaugurate their Eastern Amateur Hockey League season with a two-match series against the Boston Olympics in the Boston Garden.

Local fans planning to attend tomorrow afternoon's Georgetown University-Boston College football game at Fenway Park are expected to swell the hockey attendance and to give the matches an intercity touch missing in most competitions where cities are widely separated.

The Boston management yesterday emphasized that Washingtonians attending these matches will be seated comfortably. Indications are that capacity houses ranging from 15,000 to 18,000 will be present for both matches and elaborate opening night ceremonies are to precede the inaugural.

The Olympics, who are making their first home start in Eastern League competition, served notice on the Eagles last Wednesday night when they played the champion Baltimore Orioles to a tie in Baltimore, 1 to 1. Against the Eagles, an as yet unknown quantity, they will rule a slight favorite.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie, entering his eleventh season as an outstanding coach of hockey, starts a squad tonight that includes eight new players. Numbered among these are Gordon Hemming, goalie, who was with River Vale last season, and Norma Burns, high-scoring center, who was with Atlantic City and River Vale.

Alumni of Cornell, Dartmouth Lunch Here

Alumni of Cornell University will be hosts to Dartmouth Alumni tomorrow at the Lee Sheraton Hotel at a luncheon marking the meeting of the schools' grid forces in Hanover, N. H. Following luncheon, which will be served at 12:30 p. m., a play-by-play radio account of the game will be heard.

Fritzie Zivic 8-5 Favorite Over Al Davis

Welterweight Champ Meets Brooklyn's Bad Boy Tonight

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 14.—Fritzie Zivic, making his first ring appearance since winning the welterweight crown, is an 8-5 favorite to chastise Brooklyn's bad boy, Al Davis, tomorrow night in their nontitle 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Zivic, of Pittsburgh, is favored because of his impressive showing on October 4 when he wrested the 147-pound title from Henry Armstrong, who was flat on the canvas at the final bell.

The Pittsburgh veteran gained a large New York following that night when he dished out to the "Dusky Dynamo" the worst beating in Armstrong's long and glamorous career. Because of Fritzie's popularity and the city-wide desire to see unpopular young Davis get his block knocked off, there will be a near capacity crowd at the Garden. Three days of rainy weather hampered the advance sale a bit, probably preventing a sell-out, which Promoter Mike Jacobs originally expected. The gate should top $50,000.

Pricemaker Eddie Borden reports heavy betting on the bout. Despite Davis' unpopularity, he has heavy backing in the wagering marts because of the dynamite in his left hook. This 21-year-old Brooklyn blond has knocked out 25 of his 43 professional opponents. In that string of encounters, Al dropped but one decision—to the then lightweight champion, Lou Ambers.

Boston College Alumni Hear Game

The Boston College Club of Washington will meet tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 p. m. at the Dalker Haus, 824 Fourteenth Street Northwest, to hear the radio broadcast of the Georgetown-Boston College game. All B. C. alumni are welcome.

Sachons to View Pete in Action Against Cowboys

"Pistol Pete" Sachon, Catholic University's bid for All-America quarterback honors, has found himself on many a tough spot during this season's football games, but the spot he'll be on Saturday when his team meets the Cowboys of Hardin-Simmons College will top all.

For down from Coaldale, Pa., to see him in action will be his mother and father, two brothers, one sister and two cousins. The folks are coming down to see if Petey is as good as his press clippings.

Americans Tie Black Hawks, 2-2

New York, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The New York Americans and the Chicago Black Hawks battled to a 2-2 tie tonight in the New Yorkers' 1940-41 metropolitan debut before 9,000 hockey fans in Madison Square Garden.

The Americans had to come from behind twice to earn the tie. Mush March scored for the Hawks early in the first period during Conacher's absence on an interference charge. Lorne Carr evened the count a few minutes later and the deadlock lasted into the third period.

With less than five minutes to go Bob Chase put the Black Hawks in the lead again but when Portland drew a hooking penalty the Americans came through. Murray Armstrong registering on passes from Carr and Tommy Anderson.

Hoyas Visit Father Kehoe Before Leaving

Father John J. Kehoe, director of athletics at Georgetown University, who is credited with Georgetown's rise to national recognition in all branches of athletics within the past few years, remained in his sickbed at Georgetown Hospital last night as the Hoyas entrained for Boston and tomorrow night's football game with Boston College.

Prior to their departure, however, the football players, chaperoned by Coach Jack Hagerty, paid Father Kehoe a visit and assured him they intended winning Saturday's game and dedicating it to him.

Father Kehoe, who never missed a game prior to this year, expressed confidence in the ability of the Hoyas to come through and assured the players he would be listening in on every play over the radio.

Father Kehoe submitted to a serious operation in early season and recently suffered a siege of la grippe. He is well on the road to recovery at this time.

Boys Club Rally Carded Tonight

The Boys Club of Washington will hold its second annual pep rally tonight for the Merrick Boys Club game.

A parade, music, cheers and entertainment will feature the rally that starts at 7:30 p. m. at the Eastern branch of the club.

Hardin-Simmons Coach Rues Day He Sent Brother to Aggies

Frank Kimbrough's Advice to John Robbed Cowboys of All-American

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 14.—Once in awhile Frank Kimbrough winces when he thinks about it, but generally speaking, he has a "water over the dam" feeling about the whole thing.

Bulky, jovial Frank Kimbrough is coach of the unbeaten, untied Hardin-Simmons Univesity football team that plays Catholic U. in Washington Saturday, and the matter that haunts him is simply that he once advised his "little" brother, a boy named John Alec Kimbrough, to get his higher education at Texas A. and M. College, instead of Hardin Simmons.

Brother John accepted the advice became an All-America fullback and is just before making the mythical team for the second successive year—unless he breaks a leg.

Frank Kimbrough paused here en route to Washington, where his Cowboys attack the Cards in their seventh outing of the year.

Frank has done all right in a football way himself. This season his Cowboys have licked Daniel Baker, 33-0; Centenary, 15-13; Arizona State, 17-0; Texas Mines, 14-6; West Texas State, 28-7, and Loyola of Los Angeles, 40-6.

Anacostia Tests Tech Today in Interhigh Series Battle

Weather May Force Game's Postponing

Schools' Principals To Decide at Noon Whether Game Will Be Contested

Given a few hours' let-up in the downpour, Tech High gridmen today take the step which will give them a berth in the interhigh championship game or throw that berth to Eastern, meeting the upsetting Indians of Anacostia on the Manual Training field at 3:30.

Final decision as to whether the game will be played will be withheld until noon today, when principals of the schools involved decide whether the field is playable. Whether Central and Wilson get together for their final interhigh outing will also be undecided until the same time.

Nobody wants to play today more than Coach Artie Wondrack of the Trainers, who hopes for a full week of rest for his club before a possible title game with Western next Saturday. The 1940 championship engagement, as a matter of fact, may be moved up to Thanksgiving Day if Tech and Anacostia settle their differences today.

Manual Trainers Favored

Pre-game predictions favor the Manual Trainers by a wide margin. But the same was true in 1939 and 1938, and both times the tiny Indians came up from nowhere to trip their huge foes.

No matter what the playing conditions, Wondrack is determined his team won't let its golden opportunity slip this time, however. Every player is in perfect condition, including Carleton Smallwood, line plunger and defensive star whose injured ankle kept him out of a 16-0 victory over Western last week.

At Anacostia, Coach Rolland Lund is equally determined to keep the Indians' jinx on the Trainers intact. His mighty mites, as usual, have been pointed for the clash, a victory in which would atone for a large number of losses to date.

Game Postponed

Rain yesterday and the day before forced the definite postponement of Bullis' battle with Devitt in the annual prep school feature. A future date will be announced later.

Also on the scholastic card here today, but problematic because of the rain, are games between Gonzaga and Roosevelt and Washington-Lee and Eastern, both on the field of the last-mentioned. George Washington High, of Alexandria, will entertain Hopewell High; Georgetown Prep plays host to Loyola, of Baltimore, and St. Andrew's School, of Middleton, Del., invades Landon Prep for its annual game.

the flame of speculation on a successor to Hartnett. While the Cub president, P. K. Wrigley, said he had interviewed no one, the name of Bill Meyer continued to lead the list. Meyer, who is expected to retire as manager of the American Association Kansas City Club, said today:

Job Is Appealing

"I'd be glad to take the Cub job if an offer is made. It looks like a very good proposition and it seems to me the team could be built up easily."

Jimmie Wilson, of the Cincinnati Reds, former Philadelphia Phillies manager, who has been mentioned as another possibility, said he would not bid for the post but would "certainly give the matter deep consideration if I were approached."

The Cubs, who have won three pennants in the last decade (1932, 1935 and 1938) as Rogers Hornsby, Charlie Grimm and then Hartnett took their turns at the managerial helm, also announced the resignation of Charles A. Weber as treasurer. He is being succeeded by William L. Veeck, jr., son of the late Cub president. Weber withdrew his resignation as vice president and will aid Veeck and Gallagher.

Wrigley "Bogged"

Wrigley said his job as club president was "still bogged up." He desires to retire as president but the man he wanted for the post, Weber, declined the job.

Even though there have been numerous managerial changes and personnel shape-ups through the years, the Cub record has been outstanding. The team finished fifth this past season, being out of the first division for the first time since 1925. From 1926 to 1939, inclusive, it won four pennants, finished second three times and in four other years finised third.

Golf Body Decides To Continue War Relief Program

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 14.—The Professional Golfers Association, winding up its twenty-fourth national convention, decided today to continue its war relief program and to admit, free of charge, properly supervised groups of young people 16 years of age and under to all of its 1941 tournaments.

Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager, will arrange a program of exhibition matches to raise money for the Red Cross during the year. This past summer the P. G. A. contributed $50,000 to the American Red Cross.

Tom Walsh, P. G. A. president, said the site of the 1941 P. G. A. championship will be determined within the next two months.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Water temperatures are now so low there is little doubt but what the last of the migratory fishes are on their way down to the capes, or already past them.

ACKERMAN

With the exception of a few species, the waters of Chesapeake Bay are barren of fishes during the winter months—the one saving point for anglers is that one of these is the striper, without counting bluefish, the greatest sportfish we have. But with no more action from them than we have had this fall, there seems little to look forward to until next April.

Many anglers have complained of the poor fishing this season. We have had our 5 cents worth of say on the subject, yet to look over the prize fishes of some of the contests there is some doubt as to whether 1940 was as bad as it has been pictured.

Take the winning entries of the Cape May, N. J., contest for instance. The winning flounder weighed 13 pounds 9 ounces with runner-up just an ounce behind. Not small fish in any company. Neither was the first-place trout which weighed 10 pounds 11 ounces.

And hardheads—we think we have them here just about as large as they come, but the South Jersey contest produced one weighing 6 pounds and 9 ounces, a seabass weighing 9 pounds and 3 ounces, and a porgie of 4 pounds 6 ounces. Everyone larger than we have ever seen for these species, and we have seen considerable in all the years we have traveled up and down this Atlantic Coast.

But so long as there is the sublime, just as sure must there be the ridiculous. That was in the blue-fish entry, the winner weighing but 2 pounds 8 ounces, when there should have been many several times that weight had the schools been normal and in their rightful place.

To local anglers fishing the surf of Maryland and North Carolina beaches a 50-pound channel bass is no great shakes, nor even the 84-pound black drum that placed at the head of that species, but how about a 14-pound eel and a 14-pound tautog. We bellyached for hours here in the bay country when the "snakes" started taking our baits, and it is seldom they weigh more than a pound or two. Imagine taking a 14-pounder off if you can? It would be little short of a major operation.

The total world catch of the commercial fisheries approximates 34,900,000,000 pounds annually, valued at about $759,000,000 according to data compiled by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service.

Japan, with an estimated catch of 8,108,000,000 pounds, valued at about $100,807,000 (1936), led the world in volume and value.

Tangier Sound Reports Arrival Of Wild Ducks

Princess Anne, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Wild ducks in large numbers are arriving at their winter feeding grounds in Tangier Sound.

Mild weather early in the season had kept the ducks in the northern reaches of Chesapeake Bay, but with the arrival of cold, rainy weather this week, the flocks began to settle in the lower bay.

R. M. Carey, Somerset County game warden, said more than 50 blinds had been licensed. He said he found nine in one day that had not been licensed.

Clerk of Court Benjamin L. Barnes has issued 550 individual hunting licenses for the upland game season opening tomorrow.

Yates and Peden Lead Bike Race

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—The American team, Cecil Yates, Chicago, and Torchy Peden, Victoria, B. C., were the technical leaders in the Forty-third International Six-Day Bike Race at the Chicago Stadium tonight at the ninety-sixth hour.

They paced the field of nine remaining teams on a point basis, but were tied in mileage with Charley Bergna, Paterson, N. J., and Angelo De Bacco, Newark, N. J., the Italian team, and Doug Peden, Victoria, B. C., and Archie Bollaert, Detroit, the Canadian-Belgian duo.

The standings at 9 p. m. (Central standard time):

Teams	Miles	Laps	Points
Yates-W. Peden	1643	9	499

Outstanding member of the invading Richmonders will be Albert Myrick, 126-pound sensation of last year's Southern tournament. His opponent will be either Harry Butler or Billy Johnson, the first holding the featherweight championship of the District.

Other out-of-town fight teams to engage the District "Y" squad this season will be Philadelphia and Baltimore.

126-Pound Class
Harry Butler or Billy Johnson (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Albert Myrick (Richmond).
Harvey Smith (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Tom Davis (Richmond).

135-Pound Class
George Ferrell or Wayman Stewart (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Walter Smith (Richmond).

147-Pound Class
Leon Kennedy (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Joe Louis (Richmond).
James Price (Y. M. C. A.) vs. John Green (Richmond).

160-Pound Class
Livingston Wilson (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Julius Wood (Richmond).
Sam Lewis (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Joe Williams (Richmond).
Chappy Manning (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Parlton Hartman (Richmond).

175-Pound Class
Carl Greenfield (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Joe Tinsley (Richmond).

Heavyweight
Leroy Perry (Y. M. C. A.) vs. Raymond Lee (Richmond).

Girls Beat Harvard Field Hockeyists; Yale Challenges

By the United Press

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 14.—Harvard University's field hockey team couldn't beat a girls' team—so it is going to play Yale.

A couple of weeks ago the Harvard team dropped a 1-0 decision to Wheaton College for Girls and they received this challenge from Yale:

"Heard about your game with Wheaton. It coincides with games we have been playing with girls' schools around New Haven. Our team thinks it would be pretty good sport to have a field hockey hackaway. We have enough sticks. Bring 11 players Friday afternoon."

Fran Simpson, Harvard captain, replied today, "We suffered a humiliating defeat from Wheaton, but we think we can beat Yale. We'll be there."

U. S. Duos Gain Argentine Finals

Buenos Aires, Nov. 14 (AP).—The finals of the mixed doubles division in the Argentine national tennis championships were reached today by two United States couples.

Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., defeated their fellow countrymen, Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., and Jane Stanton, of Santa Monica, 6—3, 8—6, in one semifinal match.

In the other Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and his bride, the former Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, Mass., eliminated Augusto Zappa and Felisa Piedrola, of Argentina, 6—2, 8—6.

sell, may not be able to play, in deference to an elbow injury.

The Georgetown squad is scheduled to reach Boston early tomorrow morning, hear mass and then be quartered at the Hotel Shereton. In the afternoon a limbering-up drill will be held at Fenway Park, scene of the game.

The 60-piece school band and hundreds of Georgetown students and other rooters will go up to the game on specials leaving tonight and tomorrow.

Boston College Drills Indoors for Georgetown

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 14.—Coach Frank Leahy and his unbeaten Boston College Eagles moved in from Newton to work out in the Boston Latin School gymnasium today when continued rain turned their practice field into something resembling a swamp.

The Eagles defied the downpour yesterday and staged a long outdoor drill, which was so satisfactory that Leahy is confident his players are well primed for Saturday's crucial game with Georgetown's undefeated forces.

Every player except Adolph Kissell, the second-string fullback, was in action at Latin school, where the Eagles stiffened their defenses by engaging the freshmen in a dummy scrimmage. As was the case yesterday, the varsity had little difficulty solving the Hoyas' formation as demonstrated by the yearlings.

When the squad returned to Newton and dined, Leahy ordered it to assemble in its lecture room for a final checkup of the individual assignments he has given his players for Saturday's game, which promises to be the first sell-out in the college's football history. Today only a handful of the 39,800 tickets remained unsold.

All-America Notices Center Around Mississippi Back

Opposition Coaches Laud Merle Hapes, Junior Halfback; Has Gained 553 Yards

By the Associated Press

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 14.—Should selection of an All-America team be decided in court, on the strength of documentary evidence and testimony of expert witnesses, Merle Hapes would be willing to submit his petition before the toughest jury in the land.

Superlatives have fallen like confetti about the 190-pound Californian fullback for the University of Mississippi.

In eight games he has carried the mail 83 times for a net 553 yards, an average of six and two-thirds yards per try—and he's a fullback! He has passed 15 times for seven completions and three touchdowns, and his punting average is 45.8. He is leading the Southern Conference in scoring.

Runs for Yardage

Merle obviously isn't the kind of a fullback that nudges a yard here and there as needed, although he does that too. His scoring runs have included jaunts of 75, 70 and 56 yards, and several times he's picked up 30 to 35 at a gallop to aid a touchdown drive.

As Coach Wally Butts of Georgia described him and his manner of play: "Finest tailback in the South . . . only he's playing fullback."

"The best back I've seen in many a year," was the comment of Louisiana State's Bernie Moore. "He's the gentleman who sank us."

"The best back I have ever seen," improved Joe Sheeketski of Holy Cross, who played with Notre Dame in the days of Schwartz and Savoldi.

Buff Donelli, of Duquesne, credited a pass by Hapes with turning the tide against his club and bringing its first defeat in two seasons.

"That seemed to be the lift Mississippi needed," he said. "For Hapes began running through us as though we weren't there."

Merle's own coaches won't publicly go out on the limb for him, but their sentiments are known to be heartily in accord.

Friends Six-Man Team Leaves for New York Game

Washington's only organized six-man football team, playing under the Friends School banner, leaves today for New York, where Brooklyn Friends School representatives will be met tomorrow.

Two victories, by margins of 43-0 and 50-0, and a 27-26 loss to Woodberry Forest gridmen are behind the District delegation to date.

Two teams, the Lights and the Heavies, will make the trip under the guidance of Coach "Pop" Wannan. The starting line-up will be comprised of a mixture of the two, Dick Loos and Frank Whitiker being slated for the end posts; Frank Pohanka at center; Armand Newmyer at quarterback; Alvin Dulcan at halfback, and Cotton Smith at fullback.

Navy Eleven Continues Drills in Mud for Columbia Game

Al Feldmeyer Will Replace Ed Svendsen

Coach Larson's Team Leaves Today for New York; Foster's Line-up to Start

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14.—For the third consecutive day Navy football players worked out on a muddy field in their preparations for the game with Columbia in New York on Saturday. Results were very unsatisfactory except for giving them the feel of a wet ball and soggy underfooting.

Practice was of a light order, consisting almost entirely of signals and formations, although there was some dummy scrimmaging to bolster offensive and defensive passing, particularly the latter, in which the team showed a decided weakness against both Pennsylvania and Notre Dame.

Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, head coach, let it be known that he will adhere to his early season policy of starting the alternate team, headed by Capt. Dick Foster at left end, rather than the other group, known as the Hal Harwood combination, because Harwood, peppy center, leads that eleven. There will be at least one change in the line, according to Larson, Al Feldmeyer replaces Ed Svendsen at right guard, the latter not being in the best of condition.

Navy's backfield quartet will be composed of Bill Chip, in the quarter and blocking spot; Bill Busik, triple threat left half; Feldmeyer and Al Cameron, also a good blocker as well as ball toter, at fullback. On the line there will be Capt. Foster and Bob Froude at ends, Genie Flathmann and Bill Chewning, tackles; Vito Vittucci and Al Feldmeyer, guards, and Ed Sims, center.

The Middies will be sent through an abbreviated practice tomorrow afternoon, consisting entirely of signals and formations, prior to their departure for New York on a special train at 4:10. Navy headquarters have been set up at the Hotel Croydon.

Three companies of the regiment of Midshipmen, including the bugle and drum corps, will provide Navy's main rooting section, and the Academy band of 75 pieces also will make the trip. Billy VIII, official Navy goat mascot, also will be on the scene. He will be in leash of "Frenchy" Durette and Jack Sweeny, his official midshipmen tenders.

Denham's 415 Set Realizes 27-Year Goal

Al Denham, one of the oldest bowlers in Washington in point of interest, saw a 27-year ambition realized last night in the Census League at Columbia. Rolling on the Information and Records quintet, he rolled the first 400 set of his career, a pinfall of 415. He also rolled high game of 150. Denham's set aided his team in posting a game of 814 and helped put his club out in front by six games, with 24 victories against but three losses. Agriculture follows with 18 won and nine lost.

PENN RECREATION

Lindstrom, Plant Industry, was best man by far on the drives of Penn Recreation in the Agriculture League with high game of 155 and a set of 441, coming within ten pins of tying his own league high set several years ago. The 441 set, a season record, led the boys of Lindstrom's team to highs of 623 and 1,820, the latter mark a season high for set.

TAKOMA LEAGUE

Johnny Burger, one of Happy Newman's well known Shamrocks but rolling last night for Hyde Builders in the Takoma Duckpin Association loop, took high individual game with 151 but had to stand back and see B. Stewart, Takoma Ambulance, take the set with 377. Takoma Motor garnered the high team game with 628. Melvern Dairies No. 2 getting a 1,741 count for set. Takoma Paint & Hardware leads with 21-9 with Takoma Ambulance next with 19-11.

CLARENDON

The Clarendon Ladies loop rolled last night with Kitty Smith, C. & P. No. 2, and Miss Davis, Rector's Flowers, taking a two-way tie for high game with 122 each. Eleanor Vincent, Clarendon Bowling Center, was high for set with 335. Rector's Flowers rolled team highs of 540 and 1,441 and took three games from Toggery Shop.

BROOKLAND

Records were broken in the D. C. Taxicab League at Brookland with Eddie Keith, Bell Cab, taking two season records for himself with a 152 game and a 401 set. Inspired, the Diamond Cab Redskins set a season record for set with a 1,688 while Premier No. 2 came close with a team game of 600. Both Diamond Redskins and Bell Cab won all three games with the former leading the league with 14-1 and the latter following with 10-5.

Penn State Alumni News.

Alumni, However, Hope for Bowl Bid; Huge Line Credited for Success

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., Nov. 14.—Onward rolls Penn State's grid powerhouse but scholarly President Ralph Dorn Hetzel frankly hopes it won't go too far.

Although an ardent Nittany Lion rooter, middle-aged Dr. Hetzel told the team last December as it rejoiced over a season marked by a single defeat:

"Nothing so impairs the spirit of good sportsmanship as habitual victory."

State hasn't tasted defeat since bowling over Bucknell, Temple, West Virginia, South Carolina, and Lehigh, and battling Syracuse to a 13-13 deadlock.

Today Dr. Hetzel observed:

"I think college football represents a fairly competitive force and it doesn't seem to me that institutions and universities about the same size and with the same resources expect to win year after year.

"Institutions that continue over a long period of time having constantly winning teams build up a situation that makes it difficult for them to maintain academic standards that ought to prevail. These institutions are educational and the educational program should be the one to dominate the situation."

While Coach Bob Higgins enjoys his best year in the 11 he has tutored the Lions, the alumni anxiously talks of an undefeated season and possibly a bowl bid. But Higgins shudders at every mention of such words.

Still to face the Lions are New York University and Pitt. Incidentally, State hasn't won in Pittsburgh's stadium since 1919 when Higgins, as an All-America end, took a pass from behind his own goal and raced 80 yards for the winning counter.

The only Lion defeat in the last 14 games was at the hands of Cornell in midseason 1939. No team since has scored on the Nittany outfit with a sustained drive.

Rain Forces Md. to Drill In Coliseum

University of Maryland gridders started outdoors, but took one glance at the sloppy field and came back in yesterday, chasing Coach Burt Shipley'se courtmen out of Ritchie Coliseum as they went through a two-hour workout.

The Terps leave this afternoon for Lynchburg, Va., and tomorrow's Southern Conference game with the favored Keydets of Virginia Military Institute. A short workout is scheduled before leaving.

Joe Murphy and Mearle DuVall, the pitching and catching end of Maryland's passing team, went through a light drill and appeared ready for major roles against the Virginians.

Maryland's 70-piece band will leave tomorrow morning for the game.

Joe McCarthy Signed to New 3-Year Contract

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 14.—Although the New York Yankees probably will undergo a change of ownership in the near future, it was assured tonight that Joe McCarthy, who guided the team to four successive pennants in his ten-year tenure, will continue as manager of the Bronx Bombers for the next three seasons.

McCARTHY

McCarthy mailed his new signed contract to the Yankees' offices from his home in Buffalo. Ed Barrow, president of the club, announced. Barrow refused to divulge salary terms but said "Joe would receive the same salary as last year."

McCarthy reportedly has received $35,000 a year.

At the same time it was reported that Tommy Padden, a former catcher with the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants, will be recalled from Newark in the International League to replace Arndt Jorgens, veteran backstopped who retired from baseball yesterday.

Emil Dusek Scores Over Tom O'Toole

Emil Dusek won the grudge-match feature of the weekly wrestling show last night at Turner's Arena, tossing Tommy O'Toole in 29½ minutes with a right to the jaw and two body slams. They fought to a draw last week and were rematched by request.

O'Toole used his Irish whip to advantage, but it proved a boomerang as Dusek got up off the floor and came through with the winning hold.

Paul Bosch and Lou Plummer battled to a 30-minute draw in the semiwindup.

Warren Bockwinkle used the crab hold to win over Tommy Ray in 19 minutes. Milto Steinborn, the former European strong man, was the hit of the show as he tossed Herbie Freeman in 19½ minutes with a bear hug, while in the card-opener Chris Zaharias threw Abe Yourist in 12½ minutes with a body press.

Alvis and Ahearn Lease Riverside For Boxing Shows

Co-Matchmakers Ray Alvis and Goldie Ahearn announced that they had leased Riverside Stadium for boxing shows twice monthly and would feature their first card under the new agreement on Thursday night, November 28.

They will continue on alternating Thursday nights thereafter.

The new boxing firm recently reopened Riverside to boxing with a show that found Bill Boyd, protege of Jack Dempsey, upsetting Buddy Moore, colored heavyweight pupil of Eddie Mead.

or another in regard to withdrawing from the conference."

"There's nothing I could say about a new conference," he added, "for I have heard nothing definite about it. I have heard several persons, not connected with Sewanee, say they thought such a conference would be a good idea."

Sewanee has been a member of the Southeastern since its organization in 1932, but has never won a conference football game. The only league foe on its schedule this fall was Vanderbilt, a traditional rival.

Davidson and The Citadel are members of the Southern Conference, while Hampden-Sydney is a member of the Chesapeake Conference.

Hampden-Sydney Would Welcome Discussion

By the Associated Press

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Nov. 14. Hampden-Sydney College, for one, would welcome "any discussion on the organization" of a new athletic conference to include such schools as Sewanee, Davidson, Citadel, Presbyterian College and others, Dr. Edgar Gammon, president, said today.

His statement was in the nature of comment on a story printed by the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, which said it had information indicating Sewanee would withdraw from the Southeastern Conference in December to join a proposed conference of smaller schools. The newspaper said Sewanee, Davidson, The Citadel, Hampden-Sydney and "possibly one or two others" were thought of as prospective members.

(At Macon, Ga., Coach Lake Russell, of Mercer University, said letters were sent November 12 to several small colleges in Tennessee, Gorgia and the Carolinas proposing formation of a new conference, but he declined to divulge names of the schools approached pending a reply from them.

Dr. Alex Guerry, vice chancellor of Sewanee, said there had been "absolutely no action taken one way or another in regard to Sewanee withdrawing from the (Southeastern) Conference." He added, "There is nothing definite I could say about a new conference, for I have heard nothing definite about it." Dr. Walter Lingle, president of Davidson, said that school would not withdraw from the Southern Conference.)

Washington Gun Club Active Tomorrow

Though the hunting season has made quite an inroad into attendance at its recent shoots, the Washington Gun Club will stage its weekly contests tomorrow over the traps at Benning. Fifty and 25 target competition will be held, with visitors and members equally welcome to take part.

Minnesota Party

For the seventh successive week, the Minnesota Society of Washington will stage a football party tomorrow in conjunction with the broadcast of the Minnesota-Purdue game. The affair will be held at 2400 Sixteenth Street Northwest, with all Minnesotans and their friends invited to attend. Members of the Ice Follies cast who are from Minnesota will be present. The broadcast will start at 2:45 p. m.

All-American 6-Man Football Is Proposed

No Substitutes for Team—Kimbrough Listed Twice

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

If the University of Chicago can dilute football with a six-man team I can also de-emphasize intercollegiate assault and battery.

I will pick an All-American consisting of six players and no substitutes. I'm not that nuts. I know a mythical team with a hypothetical schedule requires no reserve strength.

And there will be no beautiful Hollywood mascot for my team. I refuse to put the emphasis on the oomphasis.

First I take Kimbrough, of Texas Aggies. Let me tell you about Kimbrough. I never saw him play and neither did you. So we start even.

My scouts report that Kimbrough runs like fire along a woolen string, kicks like a customer paying the cover charge in a New York night club and passes like a tough heart player.

In case Kimbrough gets hurt we pick him again. Nobody can take his place. Now we have Kimbrough and Kimbrough.

Next we select Harmon, of Michigan, for his great playing against Pennsylvania and Minnesota. Like Miss America playing a pin-ball game he looks just as good losing as he does winning.

That leaves four more players to pick and I am going to let you select them. Even if he doesn't make the team we will see that your choice gets preference with the nearest draft board.

That Notre Dame-Iowa contest means that Notre Dame will play at home which will weaken them plenty. Ioway lost to Nebraska last week so we may or may not get an All-American off the Irish on Saturday.

There should be an All-American on Cornell and another from Stanford. I don't figure the Dartmouth game next Saturday as a meat diet for Cornell. But Oregon State should give Stanford a workout. I am waiting for those games to pick a couple of de-emphasized hoodlums from the huddlems.

Minnesota should have no more trouble with Purdue than a sharecropper has with his income tax. There don't seem to be any Broncho Nagurskis or Red Granges in that neighborhood, no Cotton Warburtons in California, no Sammy Baughs in Texas or no Jim Thorpes in the East.

What we have are a lot of well-coached teams with nobody standing out like a wolf in an inch of snow.

This condition is a credit to college spirit and teamwork but tough on a punk like me who has to have his storybook hero or go to press hungry.

I'll finish that All-American six on the reports of next Saturday's games. That will just about wind up the season and we will put the cat out on November 30.

Whirlaway Takes Walden Stakes at Pimlico Race Course

Choice Wins By 5 Lengths, Pays $5 Price

Magnificent Runs Second With Stimady Third; George Woolf Astride Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 14.—The Calumet Farm's Whirlaway established himself as a keen factor should mud come up for the 1941 Kentucky Derby by galloping off with the Walden, historic clash for 2-year-olds, today. Showing no tendency to run out, which cost him victory in the Pimlico Futurity, Whirlaway did everything right under the handling of Jockey George Woolf. Whirlaway carried 122 pounds and finished five lengths in advance of Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Magnificent and an additional two lengths in front of M. E. Ryan's Stimady. Scratches reduced the field to eight.

Installed the favorite, Whirlaway paid $5 and was clocked in 1:54 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. The time was the slowest in the history of the race but conditions were never worse. The test was run through a driving rain and over a track almost knee deep in mud and water. Whirlaway, incidently is out of a mare named Dustwhirl.

Pimlico ends its stake-studded meeting with tomorrow's program featured by the annual running of the $15,000 added Bowie Handicap, involving a clash of True Call, Shot Put, Dusky Fox and others over the route of a mile and five-eighths. C. S. Howard's Mioland, after suffering leg trouble, was withdrawn.

Woolf Rides Confident Race

The Walden was the last race of the year for Whirlaway and the colt is scheduled to leave for Florida tomorrow night where he may not see action but will be carefully groomed for his Derby and Preakness engagements.

Jockey Woolf rode a confident race on the colt. He kept out of the flying mud while allowing Whirlaway to settle into stride. Dispose, Stimady and Magnificent were the front runners. Along the backstretch, Woolf eased Whirlaway to the outside and began a gradual move. At the half Dispose began to quit and Stimady took command as Magnificent slightly bumped, dropped back.

Whirlaway had "dead aim" on Stimady on the swing for the stretch. Woolf finally released wraps on the colt and he shot by Stimady as if the latter were tied to the fence. Whirlaway opened a long lead and Woolf was easing up at the end. Magnificent regained his stride and closed with good energy but it was apparent he was no match for the winner. Stimady staggered into third money ahead of Happy Pilot.

After Dawn Is Trailer

After Dawn, from the Milky Way Stable, failed to show speed at any stage and was a trailer virtually all the way. Itabo was scratched along with Ocean Blue, Early Warrior and Big League.

Whirlaway, in winning his seventh race in 16 starts, earned $8,140 today to bring his winnings to $77,275.

The colors of Mrs. M. E. Whitney were first home in the opening event on the eight race card. Bravira, a 2-year-old saddled by Dion K. Kerr, of Washington and Virginia, came from behind to win going away over Bolinvar and Miss Spitfire.

The Hillandale Farm's Storminess won the second race, leading practically all the way to defeat, among others, Minee-Mo and Satiation. Those who played the "5-and-1" combination in the daily double collected a $392.20 mutuel.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

There were a few unfortunate angles to yesterday's steeplechase. Quakerstreet started it all on the way to the starting point by getting out of control of Jockey E. H. Bennett and running away. The mare attempted to go through a gap and struck the fence, falling and injuring the rider. The horse was returned to the paddock, and after a long delay it was announced that Quakerstreet had been withdrawn and that all money bet on her would be refunded. The field ran without Quakerstreet. After the race, it was announced that the original announcement was an error and that there would not be a refund on Quakerstreet. Later another announcement was made that there would be a refund. The refunding part was O. K. with me, but when I heard that the refund money was coming out of the pool I checked on the printed rules in the program, which read: Horses are in the hands of the starter from the moment they leave the paddock for the post. No money will be refunded should any horse run away or be injured in any manner." The refund money came out of the pay-off that went to the holders of tickets which finished one, two and three. I believe the track was in error by taking the money from the pool, as was the word received in the press box. To further support my contention, there's another rule on the program that reads: "If, however, a horse has entered the track for the post, it becomes a 'starter' and all bets on it stand whether it starts or not." I'll not trying to start a controversy. Pimlico always has played fair with its crowds. In fact, the management often bends over backward in an effort to be accommodating. The effect the refund had on the pay-off prices was hardly enough to worry about. However, racing often is quick to pull out the rules on matters pertaining to other situations and sometimes insists on following them right to the letter. Jack McPherson shipped Zero Hour and Grilled Bird to Bowie to await tomorrow's opening. Thomas Hitchcock shipped Oneechee, Motley, Dedham, Fairford and Leshlad to Aiken, S. C. Mrs. A. J. Abel sent Skin Deep and Unknown Land to Bowie. Honey Cloud will be sent to the same track tomorrow. Selby Burch sent nine horses to Bowie to await the final 13 days' racing of Maryland's 1940 racing season. H. Guy Bedwell shipped 24 horses, including Woodchopper, Clingendaal, Grand Union, Apprehend, Ace Call and Fogoso to Bowie. Morris Dixon sold the jumper Eurus to John Bosley, who scratched the horse from yesterday's steplechase event. BILL.

First race—Impish, in his lone start as a 2-year-old last year at Jamaica, was made second choice in the betting and finished second to Scurry after leading most of the way. If fit, he has the class to win here. Harebell has speed and has shown preference for muddy tracks. Aristocracy was a good second last week.

Second race — Knitetta has displayed excellent form in late races. Her recent second to Candle Ends and her fondness for the mud give her a slight edge. Stairs had no excuse in her last heat, but can be relied upon for consistent efforts. Erect raced with much success in New England in sprints.

Third race—Snobby Scamp indicated his superiority over jumpers of this caliber when he raced second to Broadside King over a muddy Laurel course. Santi Quaranti has early speed and with little here to force the pace, figures to be close at the finish. Greenwich Time is in form and could easily upset the dope.

Fourth race—Happy Hunting, second in his last two heats, has been holding his own against better grade juveniles, which gives him the call over this mediocre field. Irrelevant won his last, but the time was poor. Barrymore is moving up in class, but recent good form indicates that he is ready to give a good account of himself.

Fifth race—Abrasion has been knocking close in previous contests with allowance performers of like quality and, in view of superior efforts in the mud, he receives the call. Vintage Port totes high weight of 122 pounds, but still appears a one of the most formidable contenders. Liberty Franc should improve off his last race.

Sixth race—True Call continues to pile up an impressive record of stake victories, displaying staying qualities which make the mile and five-eighths distance of today's feature an additional point in her favor. Dusky Fox won his last impressively and is expected to offer stiffest opposition. Shot Put has been unbeatable in marathon events, but may be ill placed going this route.

Seventh race—Miss L. P. showed good speed behind Dnieper last outing and in her previous trial was a galloping winner by ten lengths in the mud. She should be hard to beat in this field. Listowel won his last in the mud at Sportsman's Park, but may be outclassed a bit by the top horse. Sammie can better the poor effort in his last race.

Eighth race—Moscow II raced well in his last, showing good speed to the head of the lane. He is expected to show improvement after that race, with the off track being in his favor. Get Off is the class horse

Pepco Sales Near Record In October

Volume Jumps 9.08%, Reaches Second Best Level in History

Reaching the second best level on record, October sales of the Potomac Electric Power Co. advanced to 73,129,785 kilowatt hours, a gain of 9.08 per cent as compared with the like 1939 month.

The best month was August this year, when power output soared to 79,327,945 kilowatt hours.

The company reported yesterday that October sales to railroads and railways totaled 7,641,001 kilowatt hours, up 12.4 per cent as compared with October, 1939. Sales for street lighting during the month totaled 2,263,995, a rise of 2.71 per cent, while other sales advanced 8.95 per cent to 63,124,789 kilowatt hours.

Treasury Calls $545,000,000 in 3⅜% Bonds

By the Associated Press

The Treasury yesterday called approximately $545,000,000 of 3⅜ per cent bonds for redemption March 15. The bonds would have matured from 1941 to 1943.

The Treasury said it was "probable" that new bonds would be offered in exchange for the old ones, although investors preferring cash could receive it.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Briskly advancing another step in the climb that has added more than 20 cents a bushel to wheat values in the past three months, the grain market today continued to push into new high price ground for the current marketing season.

Enlarged professional and public buying lifted wheat about 2 cents to around 90 cents for December contracts, highest since last May when the market was falling as German armies advanced into France. Buying came from many quarters but much of the activity was credited to mills and baking interests.

Wheat closed 1½-2 cents higher than yesterday, December, 89⅝@89¾; May, 88⅞@88¾. Corn, ⅝-⅞ up, December, 63⅛; May, 64⅝@64¾. Oats, ⅛-1 higher. Soybeans, 1¼-2¾ higher. Rye, 1⅛-1¼ up. Lard, unchanged to 3 higher. Deferred corn and rye and all oats deliveries were at new highs for the season.

Foreign Exchange

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Far Eastern currencies lifted higher in foreign exchange dealings today as importers saw possibilities of a freer flow of goods to world markets from the Orient if negotiations under way in many quarters are successful.

While Japan was insisting a "program" for China was nearing completion, the withdrawal of Japanese troops from some Chinese territory locations lifted hopes of wider commercial activity at Far Eastern ports of export shortly.

Hongkong dollars closed .06 of a cent higher in terms of the United States dollar today, and Shanghai dollars were up .01 of a cent.

The Mexican peso lost .05 of a cent, and the Argentine peso .10 of a cent. The Portuguese escudo was off .00½ of a cent. Most other leading currencies held unchanged.

The Canadian dollar was quoted at 87 U. S. cents, the same as the previous day.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents.)

Official Canadian control board rates for U. S. dollars: buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.89 per cent.

Coppers, Oils, Rubbers Lead Upward Swing But Profit Taking Induces Uneven Trend

New York, Nov. 14.—Intermittent and selective rallies speeded up the stock market today but profit taking interfered with a general advance and closing prices were irregularly higher.

Steels took the rising play at the start, then slipped. Coppers, oils and an assortment of senior issues joined the swing and, at the last, a burst of buying in rubbers tended to offset selling elsewhere.

It was the eighth consecutive session in which volume topped the million-share mark. Transfers for the day totalled 1,384,290 shares against 1,068,250 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was handicapped by a lower utility composite and ended unchanged at 46.1. Of 875 individual issues traded, 431 were up, 249 down and 195 unchanged.

Spurring the specialized run-up, brokers said, was a slight revival of inflationary thinking, an assortment of boosted dividends, pleasing industrial earnings statements and renewed optimism over European war developments. Strength of commodities also was a bolstering influence.

U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Goodyear and Goodrich held gains of 1 to more than 4 points. Reports the Japanese had reached an accord for oil purchases in the Dutch East Indies brought up the thought that rubber company properties in the Far East might benefit.

Forecasts of growing petroleum requirements propped the oils. Preferred shares responded to hopes sizable dividend arrearages on these would be reduced or paid off shortly.

U. S. Steel backed down to its final price of Wednesday and Bethlehem, Youngstown and Crucible managed to cling to minor fractions.

Prominent on the advancing side were Chrysler, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Texas Corporation, Boeing, Doe Chemical and preferred issues of General Steel Castings, American Woolen and Market Street Railway.

Most of the carriers were listless despite today's figures disclosing a less than seasonal drop in last week's freight loadings. Among losers were Consolidated Edison, Western Union, American Telephone, American Water Works and Public Service of New Jersey. The pressure of mounting taxes on Power & Light Co. earnings was a depressant for the Utility Department.

Forward leanings in the curb were shown by Aluminum of America, Brewster Aero, Bell Aircraft, Colts Patent Firearms, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum and New Jersey Zinc. The turnover here was around 241,000 shares versus 182,000 the day before.

The bond market edged up enough to place two groups in new high ground for the year despite a tinge of irregularity in the general list.

The industrials and utilities used in the Associated Press averages established new peaks and the low-yield group duplicated its previous 1940 top. Sales of $9,031,200, par value, compared with $8,382,200 on Wednesday.

It was only in a selected group of specialties that really worthwhile changes occurred. These included Western Union 5s, up 3¼ at 80¾; McKesson & Robbins 5½s, up 1⅝ at 104, and Otis Steel 4½s, up ⅞ at ⅝.

Improvement elsewhere of small fractions to around a point included Pennsylvania Railroad 4½s at 98⅝; Portland General Electric 4½s at 78¾; Louisville & Nashville 3¾ at 89¼ and Laclede Gas 6s at 55.

U. S. Governments were quiet but mostly higher. Closing prices ranged from 21-32 of a point higher to 2-32 lower.

Foreign dollar bonds higher included Copenhagen 5s, Sao Paulo 7s and Japan 5½s. Lower issues included Milan 6½s, Denmark 6s and Italy 7s.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Bullish consumption statistics and a rising stock market stimulated speculative buying of cotton futures today. Closing net gains ran from 45 to 55 cents a bale, carrying the March, July and October deliveries to new highs for the November rise.

The official report on October lint consumption, 770,702 bales, exceeded trade expectations by around 50,000 bales and set a record for that month.

Cotton textile turnover in Worth Street was disappointing to those who looked for that market to respond to the general strength in securities and commodities. Business generally was limited to scattered sales of fill-in lots.

Exports Wednesday nil. Season so far, 413,544 bales; port receipts, 9,034; port stocks, 3,090,498. Range follows:

Boston Wool

Boston, Nov. 14 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A number of inquiries were received for fins domestic wools in Boston today, but the volume of sales was very limited. Sales of three-eighths blood combing territory wools were reported at 87@88 cents, scoured basis, and quarter blood territory wools at 80@84 cents, scoured basis. Country packed three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools were quoted mostly around 43@46 cents in the grease.

Taranto Victory Spurs London Stock Advance

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—News of the successful British attack on the Italian naval base at Taranto gave further impetus today to the recent upward trend in the stock market. All sections participated in the movement although growing difficulty in obtaining stock prevented expansion.

Outstanding was renewed strength in industrials, buyers inquiring for leaders and secondary issues. Domestic rails advanced anew under provincial support. Inquiry for dividend paying kaffirs created numerous fractional improvements. Copper, tin and diamond shares were quietly firmer. More demands were received for leading oil shares.

Firmness in rubber shares was more pronounced.

Rail Loadings Show Less Than Seasonal Drop

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 778,318 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 16,479 cars, or 2.1 per cent, compared with the preceding week; a decrease of 3,270, or .4 of 1 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 141,872, or 2.3 per cent, compared with 1938.

Total loadings continued their seasonal decline but the drop during the week was less than normally expected.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 75.9 compared with 75.2 the previous week, and 76.7 a year ago.

Sugar Futures

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The world sugar contract rose ½ to 1 point today on transactions of 3,900 tons. Domestic futures closed 1 down to 1 higher. Sales were 6,050 tons.

In the raw market a refiner bought 1,000 tons of Philippines at 2.90 cents a pound. Refined continued at 4.35 to 4.45 cents in the local market.

Construction Awards Soar During Week

$139,119,000 Total Is 44% Greater Than Last Year's

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 14.—Engineering contracts awarded during the week ended Tuesday exceeded $100,000,000 for the fourth time in the last five weeks, Engineering News Record reported today.

Contracts totaled $139,119,000, a gain of 75 per cent over the previous week and 44 per cent greater than the same week a year ago. It was the eleventh consecutive week awards have exceeded their respective 1939 totals.

An increase in commercial and industrial building lifted private awards 44 per cent above a week ago, while big defense contracts swelled public work 37 per cent above last week.

Comparisons follow:

	Latest week	Prev. week	Year ago
Private	$32,609,000	$22,645,000	$28,789,000
State and municipal	32,198,000	22,539,000	36,678,000
Federal	74,312,000	34,461,000	11,149,000
Total	$139,119,000	$79,645,000	$96,416,000

Capital Gains Tax Repeal Advocated By Charles Dawes

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Gen. Charles G. Dawes, chairman of the City National Bank of Chicago, and former Vice President of the United States, told the United States Savings and Loan League today that the capital gains tax should be repealed or "drastically reduced."

"We can never reach our desired national income of one hundred billion dollars," he said in an address before the league's annual convention, "unless the capital gains tax is repealed or drastically reduced. We confront now a spending program of untold billions of dollars and we confront it when we are already victims of forty-five billions of dollars of debt.

"We confront it at a time when all individuals of any party or race should get together and examine the way to keep the country prepared to meet what may be the greatest crisis of its career—a war."

U. S. Reported Importing Copper

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Important copper sources said today that the United States Government, to prevent a shortage of basic supplies for the rearmament program, is buying "large quantities" of copper, hitherto barred by tariff protection, direct from Chile, Peru and Mexico.

Although private importers of the red metal for domestic use must pay a levy of four cents a pound, the Government is understood to be exercising its right of purchasing duty-free.

Major copper mining interests within the United States were understood to have reached an agreement on the emergency procedure with the national defense commission, which was said to desire a reserve in the neighborhood of 10,000 tons of copper, available to meet munitions manufacturing requirements.

Butter, Egg Prices Continue Upward

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Continuing the most protracted rise of butter futures within the memory of veteran traders, contracts today advanced as much as ¾-cent a pound to new peaks for 1940 and the best November levels in three years. November, the principle futures contract, was quoted at 32.30 cents, and the 92-score cash quality at 33 cents a pound.

At the same time fresh eggs advanced ½ to as much as 3 cents a dozen, with firsts climbing to 23 cents a dozen, their best level since February. Egg futures also made slight advances.

Gen. Mills Chairman Braves 'Barrage' From Stockholders

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Have you ever seen the chairman of the board of a giant corporation who took to the road, briefcase in hand, to meet his stockholders face to face and introduce them personally to the inside workings of their corporation?

Such an unorthodox executive visited Washington yesterday as Ambassador Extraordinary for General Mills, Inc., producers of a variety of grain products.

He was tall, affable James F. Bell, chairman of the board of General Mills and a miller almost since birth.

Bell is a business crusader.

He presided yesterday at a "town hall" meeting to which all the 500 General Mills stockholders in this area were invited.

Like a kindly schoolteacher, the official of the corporation that did $125,000,000 business last year, led his stockholders through the intricacies of a corporation's balance sheet and operating statement.

Barrage of Questions

Patiently he answered a barrage of stockholders' questions from the floor, some of them embarrassing.

And he left a lesson with the group of more than 50 stockholders who attended the meeting at the Washington Hotel.

Bell's thesis, which he has urged in six similar informal meetings with stockholders this year, is that disinterest in management on the part of stockholding owners of this country's corporations accounts for "many of the difficulties confronting business today."

The 15,000,000 Americans who hold stock should take an active interest in their corporations, he urges. It is Bell's hope that other large corporations will follow his example and bring big business to the small stockholder through actual personal contact with the firm's highest officials.

Painstakingly, Bell explained, in school room language, the operations of his firm for the benefit of the stockholders.

He told them why annual meetings took place in August, explaining that they are so arranged to come after the end of the firm's fiscal year and the close of the wheat harvest season.

He told them that General Mills had a net income last year of $5,639,000, which he said was lower than the previous year.

He explained why it was lower, than the previous year.

He explained why it was lower, outlining the effects of rising costs and of the war on the firm's business.

He warned them that "increased Government spending" and "the burden of armanent expenditures" would have to be borne by the company and its stockholders.

Gordon C. Ballhorn, comptroller of General Mills, was introduced and, in similar intimate fashion told the stockholders what his duties are and gave them a simplified financial picture of the corporation.

Without embarrassment Bell answered stockholders' questions from the floor.

To a man who said "Don't forget that the present proxy system of corporations is worse than a Hitler election," Bell replied he did not think so, citing his reasons.

When a stockholder asked, "What does a board chairman do?" Bell said the classical definition of that official is "an old, superannuated dodo who is kicked upstairs to get him out of the way."

Represents Owners

But he said he preferred a modern definition which he said was that a board chairman is "the representative of owners in the management, but not a part of management."

When a woman asked how the company was discharging its responsibility to employes selected for military service, Bell told her that General Mills has told employes it will hold their jobs for them, will give them retirement and pension protection, hospitalization for their families and one month's pay, if they are called to service.

When the same woman asked what the foodstuffs firm would do to help stabilize consumer prices in case of inflation, Bell said he thought that immense stocks of grain on hand in North America are protection against any inflationary price rises.

A motion picture, combining spoken dialogue and animated cartoons that dramatized financial statistics of General Mills was shown to the stockholders.

Canada Is Warned Against Inflation

Toronto, (Canadian Press) Nov. 14.—President H. T. Jaffray told the Canadian Bankers Association's annual meeting today that there is only one way to finance the war: "by taxation up to a level beyond which it would ruin its own purpose, and over and above that by borrowings . . ."

Condemning suggestions that Canada should resort to inflation or to one kind or another of "funny money," Mr. Jaffray said he was "firmly convinced that Canada can handle its war effort limited only by the volume that can mechanically be produced, and without upset to our national economy."

Relief Due In Record Midwest Cold

Death Toll Mounts To 159; Lake Patrols Seek Bodies of Sailors

By the Associated Press

Prospects of relief yesterday presaged the end of a four-day cold wave in the frigid Midwest.

The Weather Bureau at Chicago predicted a slow upward trend in temperatures for most of the States in the central region.

Moderation favored Nebraska after record November lows had been reported—including 16 below at Valentine, 15 below at Burwell, 12 below at Overtin and 3 below at Omaha.

Sub-freezing conditions at most points in the Midwest and sub-zero chill at a number of others kept residents under wraps.

Thermometer readings included Dickinson, N. Dak., 22 below; Pierre, S. Dak., 15 below; Bemidji, Minn., 13 below; Pueblo, Colo., and Sioux City, Iowa, 5 below; Goodland, Kans., 4 below.

Searchers patrolled the Lake Michigan shore for additional bodies of sailors who lost their lives in gales which swept over the shipping lanes Monday and Tuesday.

Listed as lost were two big freighters and two fishing tugs and the 67 men who were aboard the four boats. Two other boat hands also perished during the blow.

In addition to the deaths on Lake Michigan, 90 fatalities were attributed to the cold and destructive winds in the inland sectors.

Thus far bodies of 18 sailors have washed ashore along with bits of wreckage.

Fairfax Players Open Tonight

The Fairfax Courthouse Players will present their initial production of the season, "They All Want Something," tonight at 8 o'clock in the Fairfax High School Auditorium.

The play is being presented under the direction of Mrs. Gunder Gilbertson and the cast includes Mary Helmers, Margaret Swetnam, Bessie Watts, Evelyn Childs, Mary Burgess, Randolph Richardson, Iverson Aldman, John Rust, Robert Walker, Carl Levine, Tyler Swetnam, Ralph Buckley, Jack Sagendorf, Samuel Iden, and Mrs. Ernest Rushmere.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Navy Not Worried Over Oil Supply, Latrobe Says

The United States Navy is not concerned about a decrease in the supply of fuel oil "for at least 20 years," Lieut. Comdr. William C. Latrobe, of the bureau of ships of the Navy Department, last night told a meeting of the District Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He discussed the role of petroleum fuel in the naval service.

Capt. Lybrand P. Smith, of the bureau of ships, emphasized the importance of research among engineering organizations in a brief address.

Lieut. Comdr. L. A. Kniskern, of the bureau of ships, spoke on "Naval Architecture in the Navy." He stated that "research and design must go hand in hand in naval architecture."

SUPERMAN — Luthor! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

("- NO NAME ON THE DOOR! SOMEONE DESIRES PRIVACY...AND FOR A GOOD REASON, NO DOUBT!-') CAUTIOUSLY STEPPING THRU THE OFFICE DOOR, THE MAN OF TOMORROW IS STARTLED TO FIND HIMSELF FACED BY....
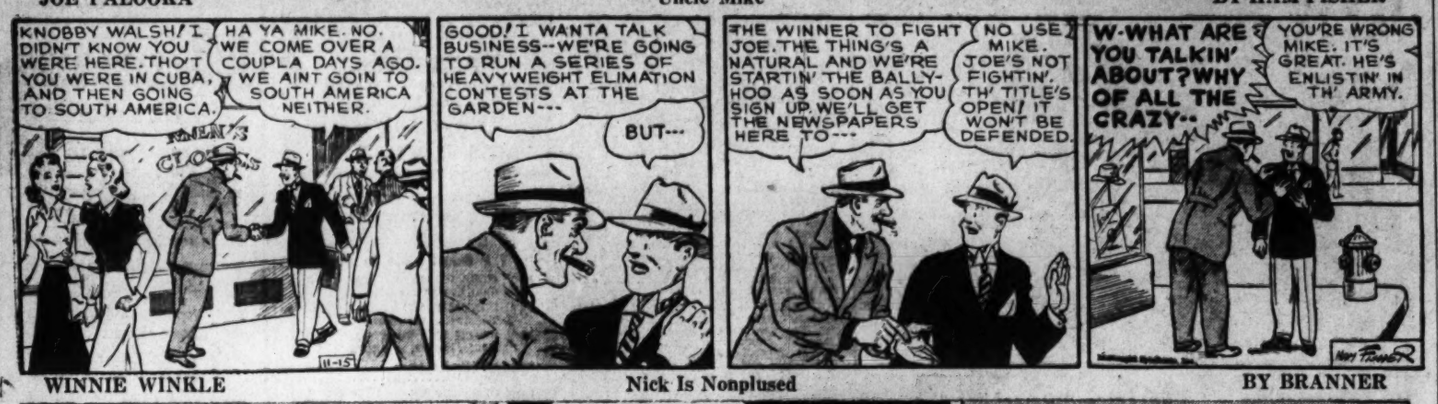
ANOTHER DOOR! THIS ONE - CONSTRUCTED OF.... STEEL!
NEXT INSTANT, AN EVIL FACE MATERIALIZES UPON THE DOOR!
SO, SUPERMAN- OUR PATHS CROSS ONCE AGAIN!
LUTHOR!
LUTHOR- A SINISTER ULTRA-SCIENTIST! TWO HIS FANTASTIC INVENTIONS COULD PROVE A BOON TO CIVILIZATION, THE PLOTTING SAVANT PREFERS TO USE THEM AS TERRIBLE WEAPONS IN HIS EFFORTS TO ENSLAVE MANKIND! HE AND SUPERMAN HAVE CLASHED ON MANY OCCASIONS. NOW ONCE AGAIN THE TWO CONFRONT EACH OTHER!
YES, SUPERMAN, IT IS ! !

JOE PALOOKA — Uncle Mike — BY HAM FISHER



KNOBBY WALSH! I DIDN'T KNOW YOU WERE HERE. THOT YOU WERE IN CUBA, AND THEN GOING TO SOUTH AMERICA.
HA YA MIKE. NO. WE COME OVER A COUPLA DAYS AGO. WE AIN'T GOIN TO SOUTH AMERICA NEITHER.
GOOD! I WANTA TALK BUSINESS--WE'RE GOING TO RUN A SERIES OF HEAVYWEIGHT ELIMATION CONTESTS AT THE GARDEN---
BUT---
THE WINNER TO FIGHT JOE, THE THING'S A NATURAL AND WE'RE STARTIN' THE BALLY-HOO AS SOON AS YOU SIGN UP. WE'LL GET THE NEWSPAPERS HERE TO---
NO USE, MIKE. JOE'S NOT FIGHTIN'. TH' TITLE'S OPEN! IT WON'T BE DEFENDED.
W-WHAT ARE YOU TALKIN' ABOUT? WHY OF ALL THE CRAZY--
YOU'RE WRONG MIKE. IT'S GREAT. HE'S ENLISTIN' IN TH' ARMY.

WINNIE WINKLE — Nick Is Nonplused — BY BRANNER

THAT RHUMBA DANCIN' IS DOGGONED HELLIFEROCIOUS ONCE YE GET TH' HANG OF IT !!
COME ON, BOYS! THIS HERE CAYOUNTESS AIN'T A LEARNIN' US FOR NOTHIN'!
OH-ER-THANK YOU, GENTLEMEN, BUT-ER-I MUST CONFESS I'M A LITTLE EMBARRASSED--
NOT ME! I AM NOT EMBARRASSING SO EASY !!

MR. AND MRS. — His Eyes Turn Upward — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

YOU SEEM TO HAVE A COLD. WHY DON'T YOU INHALE THESE DROPS?
OKAY. I WILL. BUT WHO SAID I HAD A COLD?
THAT'S THE IDEA. LEAN YOUR HEAD WAY BACK. LET IT TRICKLE IN YOUR NOSTRILS SAY, LOOK HERE! I HAVEN'T ANY COLD. WHAT'S THE IDEA OF THIS INHALING BUSINESS?
I GET IT! YOU JUST WANT ME TO THROW BACK MY HEAD SO I CAN SEE THAT THE BATHROOM CEILING NEEDS DOING OVER.

The Post Radio Time Table

9:15 a. m., WJSV—The American School of the Air dramatizes the story of a typical tenant in a United States Housing Authority project, "Housing America."

2 p. m., WMAL—'Cellos and basses are the heroes of Dr. Walter Damrosch's Music Appreciation Hour. The latter half of his program is devoted to fairy tales in music from Mendelssohn to Grieg.

3:15, WOL—Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in Beethoven's symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

3:15, WJSV—Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor, pinch hits for Elinor Lee.

7:30, WRC—Alec Templeton offers his impression of a French cabaret singer and the Merry Macs, his guests, swing "Sweet Sue." Pat O'Malley's story will concern "Little Aggie, the Elephant."

8, WJSV—Kate Smith's troupe has moved out to Tucson, Ariz., for the opening there of "Arizona," with knowing Jean Arthur as star of both film and radio program.

8:30, WRC—Here's what everyone missed so Tuesday evening: Information Please. The pace setter and one of the few bearable "quiz" programs has a new sponsor, network and day, though the hour remains the same. Comedian Fred Allen, ad libber terrific, joins Kieran, Adams, Fadiman and Levant.

9:30, WJSV—Herbert Hoover discusses the foreign situation before the student body and faculty of Vassar College.

9:30, WRC—"The Flying Yorkshireman"—This wondrous funny Eric Knight story will be either elegant or deadly radio fare. Just to make the odds better than even, Charles Laughton and his wife, Elsa Lanchester, will play the leads in smart Arch Oboler's adaptation. Even if it doesn't succeed, that trio deserves cheers if only for trying.

10, WMAL—The 15-round nontitle bout between Fritzie Zivic, who recently deposed Henry Armstrong as welterweight champ, and Al Davis, Brownsville's "Bomber," airs from Madison Square Garden.

10:30, WJSV—"Seems Radio Is Here to Stay," Norman Corwin's noted verse drama and a favorite since its first network appearance in April, 1939, is revived by the author-director as C. B. S.'s contribution to the National Association of Broadcasters' observance of radio's twentieth anniversary.

12, midnight, WMAL—Those Earle Theater Roxyettes, who can do anything man or woman ever set a mind to, dare to hide their pretty selves behind a mike to offer a radio show. A studio audience is asked to attend in the Trans-Lux Building for this part of Jack Roney's Night Watchman.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Yoo-hoo, dear—don't you want to take this report to the convention?"

with Glynn

Radio is so much a part of our daily life today that it's rather hard to believe that only 20 years ago it was a startling novelty. The facts have to be faced, however, because at the present moment—for 20 days, from November 11 to November 30, as a matter of fact—the National Association of Broadcasters is celebrating the twentieth birthday, or birthdays, of what modestly can be called the greatest entertainment, information and communication medium of all time.

The Columbia Broadcasting System tonight is paying its tribute to the anniversary with the appropriately titled verse-drama, "Seems Radio is Here to Stay," to be heard over WJSV from 9:30 to 10 o'clock.

It was written by Norman Corwin, the 29-year-old writer-director, and first presented over the network on April 24, 1939. It won such enthusiastic applause from listeners throughout the country and created such a demand for scripts that it has been rebroadcast several times since and published in book form. It was awarded a certificate as the year's best broadcast by Ohio State University's Institute of Education and included in Max Wylie's book, "The Best Broadcasts of 1939-40."

The discourse tells the shades of such well-knowns as Shakespeare, Beethoven, Walt Whitman and the like, how great their audiences have grown, thanks to radio, and tells of radio's freedom, its mass appeal, its ability to get to all people.

You probably knew it all the time, but Mr. Corwin says it very nicely.

WE'LL SAVE THOSE THOROUGHBREDS, KID! WATCH FOR JOCKO!
YOU BET, KING!
I HAD TO DO IT OR KING WOULDA FOUND OUT DW SIR BASIL WAS MURDERED
YOU BLUNDERING FOOL! GO TO THE LINE CABIN IN THE HILLS AND HIDE TILL I COME FOR YOU!
BUT DOCTOR LANE, FRASER'S PHYSICIAN, CATCHES JOCKO

Peace Goods Must Flow, Realtors Told

By Thomas M. Cahill.
Real Estate Editor.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Flow of peace time goods, including housing, must be maintained and expanded while the country is brought up to wartime strength, Hugh Potter, Houston, Tex., past president of National Association of Real Estate Boards, told convention delegates today.

KNISKERN

While industrial activity must be increased greatly for attainment of total defense, he declared the Nation must continue unabated the building of homes and other structures which represent the comfort and culture for which the Nation is willing to fight. Potter urged that for sake of future generations no less than for present needs the developers of realty, who can do so, continue their operations in as nearly a normal fashion as possible.

Commenting on the speaker's suggested decentralization, where feasible, of some activities of the Federal Government from Washington, members of the District of Columbia delegation called attention to the fact that Washington was the Capital City of the Nation and, as such, was established originally as its administrative center. History recorded, they held, the reasons why it was necessary to remove the post-Revolutionary period capital from New York and Philadelphia to a city devoted solely to affairs of the Federal Government.

Addressing a meeting on real estate taxation, Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, former governor of Ohio, chairman of the association's committee on taxation and president National Conference of Real Estate Taxpayers, reported the property tax base has been greatly narrowed during recent years, while tax revenues to maintain county and municipal governments have expanded.

Declaring that the country is in a great preparedness program, he said the Nation must of necessity increase taxes while going heavily into an indebetedness which will affect the economic lives of all the people.

Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, was nominated for presidency of the Realtors Association, nomination being tantamount to election on Friday. H. Clifford Bangs, Washington, continues on the national directorate.

Contract Awarded

The Merando Co., of Washington, has been awarded a contract to construct a mess hall at Bolling Field, the War Department announced yesterday. Cost of the construction will be $52,483.

Democracy Needs Initiative, Says Brown University Head

Dr. Henry M. Wriston, Here for American Universities Conference, Sees Many Signs of U. S. System's Superiority

"The most crucial issue in education and other aspects of American life is whether a democratic country is going to recover the intellectual and moral initiative that has been given to the totalitarians in the last decade," said Dr. Henry M. Wriston, president of Brown University and a leading figure at the conference of the Association of American Universities, in an interview yesterday.

"We've taken a defensive line about democracy. We've been self-critical in a negative way. We have not emphasized our own strengths," Dr. Wriston said.

"We've tended to accept the theory that a totalitarian nation is more efficient, but that hasn't been proved," he declared.

Dr. Wriston said he thinks it is significant that "no statesman in France after Briand, and no statesman in Germany after Stresemann expressed vigorous, unqualified constructive faith in the democratic process."

As an instance of morale in a democracy, he cited the spirit with which this Nation accepted the results of the recent election and "went back to work the next day." He said no totalitarian system could have enforced such genuine morale.

Representatives from 33 universities are attending the three-day meeting which opened yesterday, with Catholic University, only local member, as host. Sessions are open only to delegates, largely presidents and deans of institutions.

After a business meeting and dinners at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, the first general session will be held at Catholic University this morning. In a symposium on "Centralizing Tendencies in American Education," Dr. Robert A. Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology, will lead a discussion on "Governmental Funds and Controls."

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is presiding over the sessions.

Loudon Says Dutch Drown Germans

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands Minister, said tonight that the Nazis were encountering increasing resistance in his country.

"German soldiers, nowadays, hardly dare to go out after sunset because so many of their number have been pushed into canals and drowned," he added in an address prepared for a dinner of the Holland Society.

"Hand in hand with passive resistance goes an ever growing nationalism. The feeling for the royal family is stronger than ever despite all efforts of the enemy to suppress or even destroy it."

Universities Plan Defense Courses

George Washington University, Catholic University, the University of Maryland and Howard University are among institutions at which engineering courses will be financed with Federal funds in order to provide trained technicians for American defense industries.

Isaac S. George, executive director of the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources, announced the courses, which may be part time or full time, day or night, starting immediately, will cover six or more weeks, and must be completed by June 30, 1941.

Women's Unit Bolsters Amity Of Americas

Delegates From 13 Countries Unanimous On All Resolutions

". . . And all the resolutions were unanimously passed."

The unanimity among the 13 delegates from as many countries of North and South America was the outstanding feature of the sessions of the Inter-American Commission of Women, just closed at the Pan American Union, according to Senora de Martinez Guerrero, of Argentina, the chairman. She considered it an indication of the spirit of solidarity in this hemisphere.

The commission's first resolution was an expression of support for the standards and ideals of democracy and called on the delegates to consider the defense of democracy and the indissoluble union of the nations of this hemisphere to be their chief task for the coming year.

Action in the various countries similar to that undertaken by Senora de Martinez Guerrero in Argentina was recommended. There, as chairman of women's groups under the Argentine action committee, she has organized women throughout the country, issued pamphlets, arranged meetings, radio broadcasts and other publicity, informing the people to be on guard against Nazi propaganda intended to arouse antagonism against England and North America.

"In this country, too, you must watch out not to believe propaganda which says Argentina is a bad friend of the United States," said Senora de Martinez Guerrero. "It is not true. It is an effort to make Argentina stand alone."

Another resolution indorsed the good neighbor policy in all the Americas and called on members of the commission to do all in their power to further this policy.

In another, the commission recommended that competent women be appointed as official delegates to all Pan American conferences.

Other recommendations were that efforts be made by all governments to improve the penal system for women, juvenile courts and reformatories.

A constitution and by-laws for the commission were adopted provisionally. They must be approved by the Pan American Union and recommended to the next Inter-American Conference in Bogata. The commission will meet yearly and Senora de Martinez Guerrero will continue as chairman until the Bogata conference. It will convene here again next year. Argentina and Mexico have extended invitations for 1942.

This nationally famous garment presents its own evidence to support its claim that the men of Washington should be wearing an all-weather, all-purpose Society Brand "Hudder" topcoat.

LET'S HEAR MR. "HUDDER'S" EVIDENCE:

I am WRINKLE-PROOF! Slam me into a suitcase. I'll come up smiling and hold my shape.

I am WIND-PROOF! I trap cold winds in a filter of air-and-fibre pockets, pre-heat these winds and give up your body heat grudgingly.

I am SHOWER-PROOF! I am treated with an exclusive weatherproofing process used on no other coat in America.

I am COLD-PROOF! I am artfully blended of luxurious wool, mohair and alpaca so that cold air cannot penetrate my insides.

I am NO BURDEN! I am 36% lighter in weight than standard hard-finish coatings; yet have 42% greater capacity for keeping you warm.

I am EXCLUSIVE! You'll find me in better stores all over America but ONLY WITH The Hecht Co. in Washington.

And, if it please, Your Honor, you'll find me in natural tan, oxford blue and brown in raglan, balmacaan, boxcoat and fly-front models.

Easy to get to me, too, for I am only 8 seconds by private elevator to the second floor MAN'S store.
